Cheevers Shackles Habs As Bruins Come Alive

BOSTON (CP) — Phil Esposito had a cold, but his stick was hot.

Gerry Cheevers was hot, but his glove was cool.

Cheevers barred the Boston net to Montreal Canadiens and Esposito figured in every goal as the Bruins toppled the visitors 2-0 Thursday night.

The victory left Montreal with a 2-1 edge in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final. The fourth game is here Sunday at 2 p.m. EST and the fifth in Montreal Tuesday.

Esposito led the charge with two goals and three assists, while line-mates Ken Hodge and Ron Murphy added one goal each, with Ed Westfall picking up the other.

Hodge assisted on two goals and Murphy on one to give the line 10 points for the night.

Esposito, who posted a record 126 points on 49 goals and 77 assists during the regular National Hockey League season, believes his most productive nights occur when he has the Habs stiffen.

He had them Thursday night and he said after the game:

"I'm going to inject myself with cold germs before every game from now on."

For Cheevers, it was his third shutout in six playoff games this year.

For veteran Montreal goalie Gump Worsley, the defeat was a heartbreaker, snapping his string of consecutive playoff victories at 17.

The defeat also stopped Montreal one game short of another record. Had they won, the Canadiens would have broken their own record of 11 consecutive playoff victories set in 1958 and 1960.

GERRY CHEEVERS

The capacity crowd of 14,638 saw Boston take a 1-0 lead into the second period and stretch it to 2-0 after 40 minutes.

The first period took 58 minutes to play, mainly because of the constant jockeying of lines by the rival coaches.

The jugaling by the Bruins kept the Esposito line away from the line of Ralph Backstrom, Claude Provost and John Ferguson, which had handcuffed it effectively in the first two games.

Boston coach Harry Sinden said the line shuffling had worked to Boston's advantage.

Cheevers said his hardest stops were quick glove grabs of shots by Backstrom, Jacques Lemaire and Dick Duff. They came early in the game when Montreal goal could have changed the complexion of the play.

"At least we're making a series of it now and it's something to prove it against Montreal," Cheevers said.

Esposito indicated he was in top form early in the game. After 3:37 of play he picked up Bobby Orr's rebound and whipped the puck into the net.

It took Boston until 16:35 of the second period to extend the margin, and again it was Esposito who made the play. This time he relayed a goal-mouth pass to Orr who passed it to Westfall and he slashed the puck behind Worsley from the lip of the crease as the goalie scrambled to block Orr.

Montreal's John Ferguson was serving a minor for tripping John Bucyk at 3:37 of the third when Esposito got his second goal of the night.

On this one Esposito beat Worsley from 20 feet out and from an acute angle to the right.

Leftwinger Eddie Shack sat out the game, his place on the Derek Sanderson—Westfall line taken by Wayne Cashman.

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins, the National Hockey League scoring champion, scored two goals and assisted on three others Thursday night to extend his lead in Stanley Cup scoring.

PHIL ESPOSITO

Esposito, who set an NHL regular-season record of 126 points, finally broke loose in the best-of-seven Eastern Division final series to pace the Bruins to a 5-0 shutout of Montreal Canadiens. He had failed to pick up a point in two losses at Montreal.

The Boston centre now has 15 points on eight goals and seven assists, five more than three players tied for second place—Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk of Boston and Earl Ingarfield of Oakland Seals. Hodge picked up three points Thursday night to move into the three-way tie for second.

Jacques the Wanderer Blows Record But Blues Win

ST. LOUIS (CP) — It took Los Angeles Kings 102 minutes and 13 seconds to prove goaltender Jacques Plante is human after all. But they still trail 2-0 in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series with St. Louis Blues.

The Kings, held scoreless by the 40-year-old goalie in the opening game, scored their first goal of the series at 2:12 of the third period Thursday night to end Plante's bid for a record 14 playoff shutouts.

Gary Sabourin's second goal of the night at 14:31 of the last period tilted a comeback by the Kings and propelled the Blues to a 3-2 victory before 13,395 hysterical fans. The third and fourth games of the series will be played Saturday and Sunday in Los Angeles.

Plante could have been a hero for the second time in three days if he didn't have a flair for theatrics that used to give coach Toe Blake fits when the flamboyant goalie was with Montreal Canadiens.

He drew an assist on Red Berenson's first-period goal and was playing brilliantly until he decided to retrieve a loose puck in the corner early in the final period.

Plante was trapped behind his net when Los Angeles defenceman Dave Amadio fired a shot from the right-wing boards. It caromed off Noel Picard's stick into the empty cage and Plante lost his opportunity to break the record of 13 Stanley Cup shutouts he shares with Turk Broda, formerly of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"It was a stupid play," Plante said. "You'd think that after 14 years in this league I'd know better."

Amadio's goal cooled the Blues and at 8:28 Bryan Campbell gave the Kings a 2-2 tie that lasted six minutes and three seconds.

Sabourin's winning goal was a scramble as goaltender Wayne Rutledge blocked a hard slapshot by Berenson but Sabourin lifted the rebound into the net.

"We weren't sharp early in the game, but we improved as we went along," said Red Kelly Los Angeles coach. "I was reasonably happy with our effort, but not certainly completely happy."

Rutledge had little support from his defence all night.

Amadio spent the first two periods Thursday night on the bench and would have sat out the whole game if Dale Rolfe and Larry Cahan had not looked so bad.

Rolfe was on for all three goals and his blind pass in the opening minutes of the game went right to Tim Ecclestone who rattled a shot off the post.

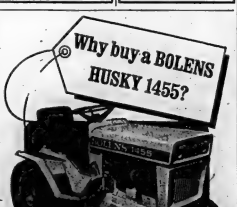
Junior Habs Bounce Hawks With Third Period Explosion

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Montreal Canadiens exploded for five goals in the third period Thursday night to clip St. Catharines' Black Hawks 10-3 in the fourth game of their best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals.

Montreal needs only to tie the fifth game in Montreal Saturday night to wrap up the series. The Canadiens have won three and tied one.



Normand Gratton scored twice for Canadiens with single goals going to Rejean Houle, Jocelyn Guevremont, Guy Charron, Art Quocquchi, Gill Perreault, Jean-Pierre Bordeleau, Richard Lemieux and Robert Guindon.

Dennis Giannici scored twice for St. Catharines and Alan Young, Marcel Dionne and Al McDonough got one goal each.

Canadiens jumped to a 4-1 first-period lead, but St. Catharines reared back to take a brief 5-4 lead in the second period. Montreal tied the game 5-5 late in the period, then Gill Perreault's score began the five-goal explosion in the final period.

In the second period, Mark Dupont and Marc Tardiff of Montreal, and Dick Redmond and Dick Dudley of St. Catharines were given fighting major penalties.

Stoneman Tosses No-Hitter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Stoneman, who wrecks baseball history for the expansion Montreal Expos Thursday night when he pitched a no-hitter, had good reason not to be nervous—the situation was unfamiliar.

"I never even came close to a no-hitter before," said the likeable rookie hurler after he'd beat Philadelphia Phillies 7-0.

It was the first no-hitter in an expansion team's debut year.

The man reason o: Stoneman's absence of hitters was simple: He was consigned to an apparent life of oblivion in the bullpen until rescued in the expansion draft by the Expos, the first Canadian team in the majors.

Thursday's brilliant effort was his first complete game in the majors, and only the second in his pro career. The first was with a minor league team two years ago.

That said the 25-year-old right-hander, was probably why he didn't "think there was any pressure."

"The nerves weren't there. I wasn't as nervous as I should have been. I had good stuff and I was getting the ball where I wanted it."

Before the Expos drafted him from Chicago Cubs, Stoneman generally was a reliever.

But Gene Mauch, Montreal manager, said he was impressed with Stoneman's appearances against Philadelphia, a team he managed for nine years until he was fired last summer, and decided to give him a shot at being a starter.

He lost his first two tries this season, but was untouchable against the Phils Thursday night.

Stoneman, who said he threw a fastball and curves with a few change-ups, walked five and struck out eight for the Expos.

The closest Philadelphia came to a hit was in the first when Deron Johnson smashed a liner down third that was foul only by inches, when centre fielder Don Boach made a shoestring catch on a sizzling liner by Don Money in the second, and when Rusty Staub made a long running catch of a line drive to right field by Tony Taylor in the third.

Stoneman didn't have to face the Phils' top slugger, Richie Allen, who sat out the game with a bruised right shoulder.

Meanwhile, Staub backed Stoneman with a homer, three doubles and three RBIs.

In other National League games, Chicago Cubs boosted their record to 9-1 by blanking St. Louis Cardinals for the second straight night 3-0, Pittsburgh Pirates defeated New York Mets 4-0, Atlanta Braves ripped Houston Astros 9-3, and San Francisco Giants edged San Diego Padres 5-4.

St. Louis manager Red Schoendienst, in an effort to revitalize the poor hitting of his defending NL champs, shook up his lineup by benching three of last year's stars—Lou Brock, Julian Javier and Tim McCarver.

But, it didn't help. Chicago's Bill Hands and Phil Regan teamed to stop the Cards on four hits, handing them their fifth horse loss in five games.

Jim Bunning struck out nine and permitted just three hits in a strong six-inning showing against the Mets.

The 36-year-old Bunning, only 4-14 last season, picked up his 2,500th career strikeout in the fifth, as he stood for a shalling in his first start this season. Ron Kline finished up and didn't yield a hit.

Al Oliver cracked a three-run homer—his first in the majors —for the Pirates in the eighth.

Sonny Jackson knocked in three runs, including two with an inside-the-park homer, to help Atlanta past Houston. Winner Pat Jarvis helped out with a two-run single.

Birds Fancy Cozy Fenway Park

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boog Powell and the Baltimore Orioles can hardly wait for their next trip to Boston's Fenway Park.

The Orioles whipped the Red Sox 9-5 Thursday for their third straight victory in the cozy ball park and during the three games the Orioles scored 30 runs, had 38 hits and gave the Red Sox' outfielders a thorough workout.

The Orioles had 17 safeties Thursday, including home runs by the Robinson boys, Frank and Brooks. Rookie Billy Grabarkewitz—Tony's brother—had his third homer in two days for the Red Sox and Boston's Rico Petrocelli also connected.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers outlasted Cleveland Indians 7-6 and New York Yankees split a doubleheader with Washington Senators, taking the 10-inning opener 7-3 on Joe Pepitone's grand-slam home run and dropping the nightcap 5-3.

Dave Johnson led the Orioles' attack against Boston with his second straight four-hit day. Johnson had two doubles and two singles.

Mel Stottlemyre won his third straight and Stan Bahnsen lost his third straight for the Yankees, who split with the Senators.

Washington tied the opener in the ninth inning on a two-run homer by Mike Epstein. But the Yankees loaded the bases with two out in the bottom of the 10th and then Pepitone tagged his grand slam.

Pirch hitter Gary Holman's double broke an eight-inning tie and pushed the Senators to their second-game victory and the split.

Detroit scored three runs in the ninth inning and then held off a Cleveland rally to beat the Indians.

Hits by Gates Brown and Norm Cash combined with an error by pitcher Vicente Romo and Al Kaline's sacrifice fly gave the Tigers their three runs in the ninth. Then Tony Horton's two-run homer pulled Cleveland within one but the Indians fell short.

Quinte Lacrosse League Expands in Sophomore Season

STAFF — Another sign of an increase in local lacrosse interest was evinced Wednesday evening at Belleville Collegiate Institute when the sophomore Quinte Lacrosse League expanded to seven teams from its maiden season four team setup.

The expansion of the Quinte Lacrosse League came simultaneously with the announcement that Belleville has acquired the Peterborough Senior "A" Franchise in the Ontario Lacrosse Association this season, and reveals an upswing toward lacrosse as a summer sport in this area.

The juvenile and junior age league which is open to all boys under 21 years of age as of January 1st, 1969, will commence regular season play early in June.

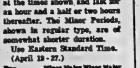
The seven team league will be composed of teams from Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Campbellford, Tweed, Wellington and Picton.

There's been a tremendous amount of interest shown in the league this season," league President Wally Beever said, "and we've hinted on running a good, well organized league, not just a bush league."

Registration for the local team which will be coached by Roy Payne, will begin shortly, with the team executive hoping to arrange a number of exhibition games before the 12 - game regular season gets underway early in June.

League President Wally Beever said that schedule will be drawn up and approved by all teams at the league's next meeting, which will be held at Belleville Collegiate, Wednesday, May 7th.

Lacrosse Clinic Saturday at Quinte



Lacrosse, Canada's National Sport, will receive a boost in this area Saturday when the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association sponsors a lacrosse clinic run by the Ontario Lacrosse Association.

The clinic, which will be held at Quinte Secondary School, is open to players, coaches, managers, officials, referees and anyone interested in the sport.

The Minor Lacrosse Association is sponsoring the clinic in an effort to stimulate local lacrosse interest and educate players and fans alike in the rules and regulations of Canada's national sport.

The clinic will run from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Quinte Secondary School, which is located on College Street.

Tax on Capital Gains Urged by MacNaughton

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Thursday a provincial capital-gains tax is necessary to achieve an equitable tax system, based on the ability to pay.

Mr. MacNaughton told an Empire Club meeting adequate allowance will be made for risks and losses in capital deals that involve stocks and real estate.

"Our view is that the taxation of capital gains should be comparable but not identical to the U.S. system which has not stifled initiative or capital formation in that nation."

When the provincial budget was brought down March 4, Mr. MacNaughton said the capital-gains tax might accompany the separate provincial income tax expected by 1972.

GMC School Bus Repair Defective

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., which recalled more than 30,000 school buses last month for correction of a potential brake defect, said Thursday that a part used in the modification may have led to six minor crashes.

The giant auto-maker suggested that 4,000 modified buses be taken out of service immediately.

GM said new brake kits had been installed on about 4,000 of the 30,450 buses recalled and that an investigation was under way into the six brake failures on modified buses.

A GM spokesman said the investigation began when one of the modified buses was involved in a minor accident. The driver was alone in the bus when it rolled into a parked car.

A GM spokesman said that under certain field conditions, the modified seal on the check valve in the brake system did not seat properly, causing loss of braking. A new seal is being supplied to correct the potential defect.

GM Wednesday began notifying operators of the approximately 4,000 buses which had been processed already in the recall campaign.

The original recall program was announced March 13 after GM received reports that the hydraulic braking system on those vehicles in a few cases and under certain driving conditions had not functioned properly or had failed.

Frost Halts Digging In Swamp for Body

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — Digging was stopped at a depth of five feet Thursday at the possible grave site of Marianne Schuett, a 10-year-old Elthrida, Ont., girl who disappeared in 1967.

Digging, stopped when police called for an air compressor drill to penetrate underground frost, is to resume today.

Provincial police held a news conference before proceeding with news representatives to the site, a swamp area seven miles northwest of Milton just off the popular Bruce Trail hiking route.

A prisoner of Toronto's Don jail, who tipped police on the possible grave site last month, led police and reporters a mile up a deserted logging trail, a rural lover's lane.

Marianne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schuett, was last seen climbing into a four-door sign-built car after school April 27, 1967.

Students Deny Importing Marijuana

TORONTO (CP) — Two students admitted to police they helped unpack marijuana from Kenyan bongo drums but denied importing it, an RCMP sergeant testified Thursday.

Sgt. Leonard Rozman was a witness at the trial of Richard Kitchener Everett, 22, of Bracebridge, Ont., and Kerry Charles Bindon, 23, an immigrant from Australia, both charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

They were arrested along with three others last Nov. 21 in a raid on a downtown Toronto warehouse where police seized $250,000 worth of marijuana, much of it still inside the imported bongo drums. Sgt. Rozman said Everett, after being cautioned, told him:

"I was unpacking the stuff, but I didn't import nothing. I got $50 for the job. . . . I did it for the smoke."

The trial continues today.

Three others arrested in the warehouse raid have pleaded guilty and will be sentenced April 25.

Power Is Misunderstood

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Most of us, when we think at all about "power" think about it the way a child does. To a child, "power" consists in having your own way, or in getting whatever you want when you want it.

But this is a very shallow and unsophisticated way of looking at it. Unfortunately, many adults in positions of both private and public authority continue to regard power in the same false light.

The ability to get what you want when you want it is part of the pathology of power, not of its normal nature. The essential character of true power is the ability to reach a particular goal, as Dr. Karl Deutsch points out, "with the least loss of ability to choose a different behavior or to seek a different goal."

Once we begin to understand this, our whole concept of "power" undergoes a maturing and vitalizing change. For instance, let us look at the dramatic exhibition of power in the 20th Century — the rise of Nazism and Hitler's increasing power in the decade following 1933, which threatened to engulf all Europe.

Actually, Nazism was doomed because once it had started on its path, there was no turning back, no way to go but more militarization and eventual militarization and oppression.

The path that Hitler deliberately chose was one that relinquished the ability to choose a different behavior or to seek a different goal. He was relentlessly driven by the dynamics of his own policy, and became in a real sense impotent to change either his direction or his aims, even after his General Staff saw that the Nazi adventure could only end badly.

Biological systems are the same as social systems. The dinosaur was the most "powerful" beast on Earth, but it could not adapt its behavior to changing conditions, and so its very strength condemned it to extinction, like a runaway locomotive that can only continue on the same track until it smashes up of its own headless velocity.

True "power" then, must include a "go" element of flexibility. It must leave many options open, it must be willing to compromise, to adjust, even to defeat its aim if getting what it wants is not the best thing for it at the time. In this extended sense, "power" is appetite controlled by will, and will directed by reason.

When we lose our ability to choose a different behavior, we are then powerless — like the madman who can only go on from one killing to another, or the addict from one concoct to another. Only those free enough to change a powerful enough to achieve what is best for them.

Mike Douglas Is Making It In the Movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Add Mike Douglas to the ever-growing list of movie stars' children who are making it in films. But don't try to classify him with the others.

"I didn't grow up in Beverly Hills, thank God," says the 24-year-old son of Kirk Douglas. "I could think of nothing worse than growing up in the richest city in the richest state in the richest country in the world.

"How could you possibly preserve any sense of reality?"

Michael Douglas is indeed a free-thinking lad. He speaks with disarming frankness about flunking out of college, about dabbling in narcotics, etc. He is his own man, as Hollywood is discovering.

He also is an instant star, thanks to the recent CBS Playhouse drama, The Experiment. He drew good notices from the telecast, as he did in a recent off-Broadway play, City Scenes. Now he is starring with Arthur Kennedy and Teresa Wright in his first film, Hail, Hero, which concerns father-son differences over long hair, Vietnam and other elements of the generation gap.

Mike wears his brown hair long, though he appears to have passed through the hippie stage. That happened in his university days.

"I had been attending a prep school in the east, and the racial progression would have been for me to go on to Yale," he related. "But I was ready for a change, as big a change as possible.

"I heard about the University of California at Santa Barbara, which had four girls for every man, a beautiful campus on the ocean, surfing, and all that. That was for me."

Mike went the whole route: Guru, pot, LSD. His experience with narcotics proved worthwhile, he believes, "because it taught me about rhythm in living.

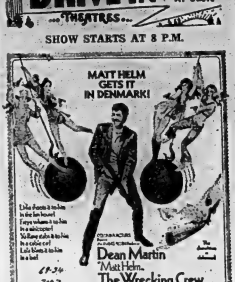
"You know how some days you feel dull and listless and other days you feel alive? Everyone has certain rhythms and using narcotics helped me realize that."

He says he is no longer a user "because narcotics dulls the senses and you need the sharp edges for acting."

He was so involved with making the scene that he failed to make his grades. Mike thanked out, visited his father on European locations where he worked as assistant director, then went back to school at Santa Barbara.

This time it was different. He casually joined the university drama group.

"I never had the slightest idea of being an actor before; I guess I automatically rebelled at the notion."



He found he liked acting, later performed a couple of summers at a Waterford, Conn., theatre. His career leaped forward with the CBS Playhouse stint.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Expanding interest in people and how you relate to them tend to take up more of time this year. Romantic urges will come on stronger and deeper. Today's natives frequently are visionary, dreaming ideals beyond the norm of our times. Many of them have been reform leaders, and sudden changes of position characterize their lives.

ARIES (Mar. 21 —, Apr. 19): If you will look again at doors which were closed to you before, you find more than one of them open to you now. Use the opportunity while it lasts. Discover what you did wrong before and learn to do better.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 —May 20): There is no point in squalling over upset plans, as yours are almost certain to be today. Review in your mind what you have been doing lately and what the likely consequence must be.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Handle situations in your own fashion before you have a chance to develop too far. You can get plenty of help for any reasonable activity just by asking with tact and mutual self-respect.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): The day tends to drift into Solidrums if you're seeking excitement. Get busy ferreting out hidden items in old jobs left uncompleted. Clear out unused or abandoned materials from your desk and work table. Make up a list of chores yet to do.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You and your work come under scrutiny by people of some importance. Put all your energy in to presenting a good public image, and trust your loved ones to adjust peacefully to the shift in your attentions. Make amends as soon as you are out of the public eye.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Pursue your most original ideas calmly. Try most of them out without fanfare. Use occasional breaks in your experiments for brief meditations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Communicate with distant people, technical experts, high authorities. If you have a position, file for appeal or review or postponements today, according to the merits of your case. Personal hobbies provide a fluent, enjoyable evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Personal relations are somewhat obscured by emotional interchanges, discrepancies. Stick to the facts, gently, and wait for others to realize where they are. Delay reaction to any rash opinion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Ratings, testings, classifications are promised. You stand to begin use of new skills, to do things you have never done before. Get ready!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): On balance the day tends to turn out average, with something of interest for you besides yourself. Brood another day over an original idea, seeking a better way of expressing it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Health and your activities go along smoothly. Put your best skills forward just as if the day were critical; see the definitely improved results.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Today's events are likely to give you cause to change your ideas of what to do and how to go about it. Be willing to swing along with the prevailing tides of reality. This evening relax, digest the impact of the information.

News Jumble May Be Ended

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal study group is hard at work writing a behind-schedule report that will likely recommend some form of centralized control over government information services.

The three-member commission appointed last Aug. 30 to study the government's dissemination of information was all but directed in its terms of reference to adopt a centralizing line.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who ordered the study, asked for recommendations for ways to better co-ordinate information activities at home and abroad. He also wanted recommendations on ways to promote greater efficiency.

There is no indication the advice has been ignored. As one well-placed official put it, he would be surprised if the group did not recommend some form of co-ordinating agency for information services.

The public will likely find out for sure next month when the book-length report is completed. The Trudeau deadline of March 1 for completion has been missed.

One talked-about possibility is a recommendation for establishment of two co-ordinating agencies. One would oversee domestic information services and the other the foreign information network.

In some official eyes, there is a deplorable lack of communication between various government departments promoting Canada abroad. Information officers in trade, immigration, external affairs and other departments tend to work in their own narrow fields.

The suggestion is that they could do a better job by pooling their efforts and facilities, particularly in foreign capitals where several might be gathered.

Another argument advanced for centralized co-ordination is that no government department is promoting the Canadian system at home and abroad.

At home, it means that the federal role in running the country is not satisfactorily told to the taxpayer, who is more aware of what provincial governments do for him than the central government.

The theory is that a centralizing agency would help promote national unity in a subtle way by bringing the work of the federal government to the attention of the people. In theory, the agency would lean on departmental information services to keep the federal government as such in mind in their promotional activities.

If the report supports the idea of more centralized control of information services, it is bound to raise some vigorous opposition from two groups: Politicians who fear the agency could become a political weapon of the government and information branches who fear a loss of authority and control over their own programs.

The strength of the political opposition would probably rise according to the power accorded to any centralizing agencies and its closeness to the cabinet.

It is not known whether the Fortier report will deal with such recent matters as the dispute surrounding the pre-taping of the Trudeau administration's Montreal airport announcement.

Non-government members of Parliament claimed it was unethical for cabinet ministers to engage in such practices because of the possibility of leaking information about government decisions.

Government departments, however, have moved into film-making, although the practice is limited. The agriculture department, for example, has a three-man production unit which produces a couple of dozen short documentary films annually on farm subjects for use by television stations and others.

The National Research Council, a government arm, has a man who makes science documentaries. Both operate at the pleasure of the National Film Board, which has jurisdiction over government film-making.

Overall, the government hopes the Fortier report will give some definitive answers to the proper role for the small army of information people who spend millions annually telling the government story through advertising, films and a variety of other ways.

Crime Victims Will Get Compensation

TORONTO (CP) — Victims of violent crime will be entitled to compensation under the terms of amendments introduced in the Ontario legislature Thursday.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart introduced the amendments to the Law Enforcement Compensation Act of 1967, which awards compensation only if the victim is hurt or killed in aiding a police officer attempting to prevent a crime.

The amendments—they are not retroactive—relate to acts coming under the criminal code or statutes of Ontario.

But they do not include offences under the Highway Traffic Act, except in cases in which the vehicle is used in "assault" —as when a bystander is struck by a car being used in a getaway from a crime.

The amendments limit compensation to $10,000, except in cases of injury or death from directly assisting a police officer.

Mr. Wishart said later the government has projected the annual cost of providing compensation to victims of almost any kind of criminal activity. But he said the information would not be made public.

The amendments might be made retroactive, he said, "if we're persuaded on second reading, or in committee, that it would be wise to go back a certain distance."

The amendments were part of a package incorporating changes recommended by J. C. McRuer, former chief justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, in the McRuer royal commission on civil rights.

Among the new legislation was a set of amendments to the Legal Aid Act, designed to curb abuses by some lawyers.

Mr. Wishart told a news conference a few lawyers have been abusing the act by taking minor cases to higher courts where the rate of pay is higher —and by seeking a large number of remands.

Two other bills deal with tribunals which operate with the authority of the legislature. The bills lay down rules and simplify appeal procedures for hundreds of boards and commissions, including the Liquor Control Board, Ontario Municipal Board and the Labor Relations Board.

—Jim Deane (NDP—Wentworth) showed the legislature a Japanese baby rattle with wire springs and dead beetles inside it. He asked that it be removed from sale because of the danger to children, but Finance Minister Leslie Rowntree said he would forward the beetles and rattle to the federal department of consumer affairs which would shortly become responsible for such items.

U.S. Warships Sail For Korean Waters

Mud Blocks Don Road

TORONTO (CP) — Engineers spent Friday night and early today testing the strength of a long ridge of landfill after a mudslide tumbled across a major thoroughfare, blocking six lanes of rush-hour traffic.

Mud from the slide spilled onto the north-south Don Valley Parkway in central Toronto after a spot in the artificial ridge running adjacent to the expressway was weakened by heavy rains.

Police said only one driver was slightly hurt when his car slammed into a guard rail after trying to avoid about three feet of mud that tumbled over more than half the width of the thoroughfare.

About four miles of three north-bound lanes have been closed until soil tests are completed. Police don't expect they will be open again until "sometime today."

Emergency crews who untangled Friday's muddle fear that another part of the ridge may be weak enough after two days of rains to create another landslide.

Highway Flooded At Galt

GALT, Ont. (CP) — The rain-swollen Grand River overflowed its banks Friday night, flooding a section of Highway 24 in Galt.

A spokesman for the Grand River Conservation Authority, Ilmar Kao, said today the water on the highway was a foot deep at 9 a.m. and traffic was being detoured around the flooded section.

Bill Mr. Kao, director of operations for the authority, said cool and dry weather today will reduce the danger of any major flooding and the Galt section should soon dry up.

Slight flooding is expected later today when the flood crest reaches Brantford. Mr. Kao said the river has risen between eight and 10 feet over its normal summer levels.

The river is expected to peak in Brantford by noon and in Caledonia late tonight or early Sunday.

"Now here's the plan. The moment it passes over North Korea..."

Navy to Provide Cover for Planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potent U.S. naval forces, including the battleship New Jersey and possibly a pair of aircraft carriers, were reported steaming to new positions today to provide protection for American intelligence missions off North Korea.

The defence department announced redeployment of extensive forces Friday shortly after President Nixon ordered resumption of reconnaissance flights with the promise they will cease to be "fair game" for North Korean jets.

Flights off the North Korean coast were halted Tuesday after an EC-121 reconnaissance plane with 31 men aboard apparently was shot down. Only two bodies have been found in the Sea of Japan where the craft fell.

Redeployment of U.S. naval forces was viewed here as a protective step rather than a threat of retaliation against North Korea.

The semi-official Seoul newspaper Shinmoon reported that United Nations forces in South Korea were placed on a special alert today. It said the alert, known as Defcon II, is instituted only when a danger of hostilities exists. A spokesman for the UN command would not comment on the report.

The New Jersey, which had been scheduled to arrive at Long Beach, Calif., today after duty off Vietnam, was ordered to return to the Western Pacific. The 16-inch guns on the world's only active battleship had been used to shell targets up to 29 miles inland in Vietnam.

While no announcement was made of the strategy to be used in providing protection for the reconnaissance planes, indications were that fighters would be stationed where they could come to the swift rescue of any threatened U.S. aircraft. Fighters would be kept in the air during intelligence missions, but not flying wing-to-wing with the reconnaissance aircraft.

Military men indicated Friday that carrier-based fighters probably would be used to help protect the slow-moving reconnaissance planes.

One carrier believed on the way to the Sea of Japan is the Kitty Hawk which carries 90 warplanes. The Kittyhawk left Hong Kong with two destroyers earlier this week without any announcement of its destination.

There was no identification of a possible second carrier.

Another destroyer, the Tucker, was ordered back to Sasebo, Japan, with items of aircraft debris which had been found by search vessels.

In ordering resumption of the intelligence flights, Nixon pronounced them vital to the security of U.S. troops stationed in South Korea.

War, as Usual

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israelis and Arabs duelled with artillery, tank and light arms fire at three points along the Suez Canal today. As usual, each side accused the other of firing first.

An Israeli army spokesman said the Egyptians started the firing and the Israelis retaliated with tanks and light arms. Sporadic firing continued for more than two hours at El Quntara, Ismailia and Port Taufiq.

A communique from Cairo said: "Our forces returned the shooting with artillery and tank fire and managed to silence the enemy's positions, inflicting heavy losses."

The Egyptians said the shooting stopped at 9:45 a.m. at the request of UN observers.

Smokers Who Quit Asked to Tell All

OTTAWA (CP) — Tell it the way it happened, says the federal health department in newspaper advertisements today soliciting first-person accounts from cigarette smokers who quit.

The object of the ads is to gather material for a booklet by the department's smoking and health program containing "20 personally-proven approaches to freedom from the cigarette habit."

The department is offering no cash prize or other incentive for the best account.

"This is a non-profit, public-service project," says the department. "The dividends will go to Canada as a whole."

With half the regular smokers having tried at one time or another to quit, the department gets a constant stream of requests for a simple way to do so successfully.

"Research has left it clear, however, that there is no single key," and success "is reached by almost as many paths as there are types of human nature."

At the same time, studies have shown that success of a husband, wife, parent or friend helps someone else fight the habit.

"Among all the systems with which have worked for some people, there is bound to be something for every last smoker who is honestly seeking a clue to his own problem."

News Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two television networks, CTV and CBC, will again share coverage of Canadian Football League games this year, CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur says.

Trudeau Leads Walkers

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 30,000 Ottawans in the flesh today following in the footsteps of Prime Minister Trudeau in the annual Miles for Millions 40-mile charity walk.

Mr. Trudeau, snapily attired in steel-chipped walking boots, apache scarf, slacks and tan trench coat, stepped out smartly just before the official 8 a.m. EST walk start from Parliament Hill.

With thousands milling around the Hill any orderly start to the march went out the window.

Mr. Trudeau, using a loud hailer, welcomed marchers and told them they were walking for a good cause. Few heard his remarks in the general uproar.

Then, accompanied by Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand in a turtle-neck sweater and former Olympic runner Harry Jerome of Vancouver, Mr. Trudeau set out.

After he cleared the press of the crowd he broke into a trot. He was to cover 3¼ miles to the walk's first checkpoint in East Ottawa.

Terrorist Gets Leave To Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — Terrorist bomber Pierre-Paul Geoffroy, 25, sentenced to life imprisonment for his role in 31 bombing incidents in the Montreal area, has been granted leave to appeal the sentence.

Permission was granted Friday by Mr. Justice Elie Salvas of the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Defence lawyer Robert Lemieux contended that Chief Judge Andre Fabien of Sessions Court, who imposed the life imprisonment sentence April 1, did not take into account Geoffroy's age and the fact that he had no prior criminal record.

The defence also contended that sentencing judge "did not give sufficient consideration to the motives which led the appellant to commit the acts mentioned in the charges."

Flood Damage in U.S. Is Already $31 Million

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials estimated flood waters have caused $31,000,000 damage so far in three U.S. midwestern states and one official said he felt people in an area downstream were treating the coming flood crests too lightly.

Civil defence and state officials made these preliminary flood damage estimates:

—About $5,000,000 in Minnesota, where 700 families were still homeless.

—About $10,000,000 in South Dakota, where 5,000 families were evacuated and 1,000 remain homeless.

—At least $7,000,000 in North Dakota.

And the civil defence co-ordinator for northwestern Illinois says residents in his area, where the Mississippi is due to reach a crest April 28, are taking the situation lightly.

"There's been so much publicity given protective work," said Donald E. Lemme. "But people believe all they have to do is sweat this thing out."

Lemme said Friday that apathy in the Quad Cities area could cause trouble—the kind seen in 1965 when the Quad Cities alone suffered $8,500,000 in damages. The Quad Cities are Davenport, Iowa; Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, Ill.

The Red River of the North, which already has created at communities of North Dakota and Minnesota, remained an expanded placid mirror.

"The damndest lake you ever saw—150 miles long and eight miles wide," remarked one Red Cross worker helping refugees from its floodwaters which covered an estimated 210,000 acres of farmland.

In Iowa, 700 persons were evacuated during the flooding of the Des Moines, Little Sioux, and smaller rivers. All but 200 have returned to their homes and no damage estimate was given.

An estimated 600 Wisconsin residents have left their homes, mostly from areas around La Crosse and Prairie Du Chien given to frequent flooding.

James Gruentzel, of Wisconsin's division of emergency government, said however that in general "we don't anticipate any problems" unless the weather worsens or dikes start eroding.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cloudy skies are likely to persist in the Niagara area today but in other parts of southern Ontario cloudiness should decrease gradually. Sunday should be sunny and a little warmer throughout southern Ontario as a high pressure area moves across the province.

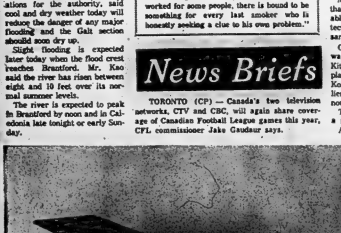
Manitoba Flood Threat Easing



WINNIPEG (CP) — The rise in the Souris River of western Manitoba slowed sharply Friday and there was encouraging word that the Red River crest will be lower than earlier expected.

The Souris, which loops through North Dakota from Saskatchewan before swinging back into Manitoba, rose only three inches in 12 hours at Elita, 60 miles southwest of Brandon.

This led to hopes that the first runoff crest, which has left properties in low-lying areas of the town of 1,100 under several feet of water, may have been reached.

'All Comforts' of Army

U.S. Deserters Spurn 'School'

OESTERBYBRUK (AP) — Sweden's new job training camp for U.S. military deserters has all the comforts of an army camp but only four takers.

Volunteers who come to this remote village get free room and board, medical care, television, $1 a day pocket money, five hours a day of Swedish language lessons and training in occupations for their life in exile.

But most of the approximately 300 American defectors, deserters and draft resisters living in Sweden apparently prefer the swinging city life to this town of 1,500, about 20 miles from the nearest movie.

Danny A. Rowan, 19, of Colebrook, N.H., one of the camp's four pioneers, said: "The place is just what you need in our situation."

Goesta Broberg, director of the Swedish labor market board that started the camp, was confident more Americans will join up. The project is geared for shifts of 25 to 30 men.

Each deserter has his own bedroom. They share a small kitchen and a big living room which has a television and a library.

Evenings, the four may take the camp bus to Uppsala, 20 miles to the southwest, to see a movie or visit friends.

The living is good, said Rowan, who quit his unit in Heidelberg, West Germany, and came to Sweden eight months ago. But he added that the four campers are determined to use the experience to make good in Sweden.

After five to six weeks of language, they will be ready for job training. Later the labor market board will help them find jobs and perhaps extend loans to get them started.

Camp superintendent Bo Ripa looks forward to the last-arriving spring.

"Next week we will have our table tennis set," he said. "Later on, when spring comes, maybe the guy will have a better chance to meet the people in the village out at the sports arenas and at the stage set up for outdoor dancing."

Stricter Law Safeguards Forest From Smokers

Local hunters and outdoor enthusiasts will have to exercise more careful smoking habits as result of a new section added to the Ontario Forest Fires Prevention Act.

The section makes law of an old woods-worker rule against napking while walking or working in forested areas.

The section does not apply to a fisherman on a stream or lake, provided he disposes of his cigarette or cigar butts, pipe ashes or matchsticks in such a way that they do not constitute a fire hazard.

But it applies to the fisherman or any other traveller who moves away from the water to walk through the woods between April 1 and Oct. 31.

Bert Dunne, forest protection supervisor for the Tweed district, said that the new law was a good idea.

Approximately 40 per cent of all fires reported in the Tweed district result from careless smoking habits, he said.

Statistics show that of 106 fires reported in 1965, 48 were caused by smokers. The count in 1966 was 41 fires out of 140; in 1967 51 of 112, and last year 53 of 140 fires were caused by smokers.

Moira Tops In Maths

Students from Moira Secondary School in Belleville have received top marks for District 23 in the Ontario Junior Mathematics Contest sponsored by Waterloo University.

District 23 takes in schools from Brighton to Napanee and from Picton to Bancroft.

More than 7,000 students across Ontario took part in the contest with the top three papers being forwarded to Waterloo.

School Levy Protest In Northumberland

Four municipalities in the east side of Northumberland county will protest the amount assigned as their share of the cost of education for the county.

Officials of Murray township, Brighton township, Cramahe township and Brighton village said they will refuse to levy for the amounts set out by the Northumberland-Durham board of education.

The united counties' budget is up $ per cent this year to $6,505,021. a $713,258 increase over 1968.

Murray township was asked for 30 per cent more than last year. Brighton township 37 per cent more, Brighton village 37 per cent more and Cramahe township 4 per cent more.

At a special session in Brighton, the officials decided that the reverse of the four municipalities, together with Clarence McKague and Wesley Down, the two local representatives on the board of education, will ask for a meeting with the education Minister William Davis.

A resolution was passed at the meeting emphasizing that representatives d i s a g r e e with the method of dividing the budget among the participating municipalities.

The Snow Is Back !

The southern part of Prince Edward county and the Kingston area were blanketed under a two-inch fall of snow overnight as a drop in temperatures turned rain into slush.

Belleville, however, got off with a touch of sleet, and a few fine flurries of white stuff.

Snow and freezing rain caused treacherous driving conditions in the Niagara district but in the immediate Belleville area highways remained clear.

A West Lake market vendor attending Belleville market said the snow blew in off Lake Ontario during the night. No snow fell north of Bloomfield.

CUPE-OFL Meet

Warn Province on Labor Relations

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives from municipal assessment departments across Ontario were told today the provincial government sets a bad example for labor-management relations and will face serious trouble if it fails to mend its ways.

The statements came from David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, and Stanley Little, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, at a strategy conference for the assessors.

Most assessors and assessment department clerical taff in municipalities in Ontario are members of CUPE. Following The planned takeover of all property assessment by the province next year, however, they will be represented by the Ontario Civil Service Association.

Two members of the Belleville city hall staff are attending the CUPE meeting in Toronto. They are Don Dalrymple of the engineering staff, and Frank Howard, from the assessment department.

The takeover was announced by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton in the budget speech, March 4. It will affect 2,500 employees.

Mr. Archer told the conference the government is undermining its own efforts to promote greater labor-management co-operation.

"The province talks without end about the need for more and more co-operation between management and workers. Then when it deals with workers it just ignores them and does exactly as it pleases. . . .

"The province announced the takeover without one word of consultation with the workers."

Mr. Little warned that municipal and provincial public employees can no longer tolerate "the flagrant and arrogant disregard of the legitimate rights of government workers."

He said assessment workers will not go into the civil service without a fight unless they are guaranteed that their rights are protected.

Summaries of the speeches were released before delivery.

Awards End Kiwanis Swim Event

STAFF — The 25 week Quinte Kiwanis Swim Program concluded a successful season last night with the annual awards presentation at Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Dignitaries and officials, among them Mayor J. Russell Scott of Belleville, Recreation Commissioner Lorne Williams, Royal LiFesaving Director Feliz Walker, Rod Cameron of the Belleville Red Cross and Dick Symons, Lieutenant-Governor of Kiwanis District 11 were on hand to make the presentations.

Five hundred and twenty-five swimmers received 500 awards, ranging from the four levels of both the Royal Lifesaving Awards and Red Cross Awards, to Kiwanis Swim Program certificates.

A grade 13 "Student at Quinte Secondary School, 18 year-old Maxine Bowler, received the evening's top award, the Distinction Award, which is the second highest award of the Royal Lifesaving Society.

Murray Workman, the Director of the Quinte Kiwanis Swim Program, said he hoped that the organization would be able to expand its 525 member swim program, which is operated at the Tops Motel swimming pool, next year.

Lloyd Dennis Here Tuesday

Lloyd Dennis, co-author of the provincial report on education, Living and Learning, will speak in Belleville April 29, not April 30 as previously reported.

He will be guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Home and School Associations, to be held at Club Cantara.

Tickets for the event are available to the public at $2.50 a person, and can be obtained by calling 962-4087.

Vic Rabel, a grade 11 student at Centennial Secondary School, displayed his hand-made replica of a suit of 15th century German armour to a young visitor at the school's display night. A suspended inner leather helmet covers the wearer's head and provides the best shock-absorbing skull protector yet invented, he said.

Student Display Draws 1,200

More than 1,200 people trooped through Hastings County's largest, and newest, high school last night to view students in action.

The occasion was the first display night held at the three-year old Centennial Secondary School.

Modern teaching aids were on view — everything from over-head projectors to closed-circuit television. The old standbys were also in use — microscopes, gym equipment and band instruments.

Students sold 163 bags of home-made fudge, and distributed free copies of the 27th edition of their school newspaper. In their industrial physics lab, the only one in the county, they showed visitors how power-steering works. Budding biologists displayed snakes and frogs and explained the development of chicken embryos with eggs they incubated themselves.

A magnet for young brothers and sisters of Centennial students was Vic Rabel's suit of German Gothic armour of the year 1450. The grade 11 student made the armour, tailored to fit himself, from industrial steel. Entirely hand-make, it was accompanied by a two-handed broad sword.

An added attraction was samples of cookies, baked according to 100 year-old recipes by grade 11 home economics students. They distributed the recipes along with the refreshments.

Spring Returns To Bay!

Spring is on the wing—and also on the slips.

Soon the Bay of Quinte will blossom into a traditional role as a water, recreation for hundreds of sportsmen.

Sounds of the seamess of the season could be heard along Belleville's waterfront this morning as a small flotilla of craft was taken out of mothballs.

Being readied for launching were a number of yachts and other large craft, under wraps for almost six months since ice first began sealing the bay.

Today was the big day for the sportsmen as 's weeks-long spruce - up period of their craft ended at the Moira - Schneider dock across from the Bay of Quinte.

Freshly painted and polished the craft were ready to take to the water for the first time since fall.

On hand to launch the yachts were two big mobile cranes, which gingerly loched the craft into the calm harbor.

The launching was scheduled for completion today — for good reason.

The new season algo marks the opening of navigation in the Bay, and the dock is needed for storage. The first commercial craft — a coal boat — up the Bay this year was due sometime today.

IN MEMORIAM

GOODFELLOW — In loving memory of a dear mother, Charlie who passed away April 20, 1966. Oft we think of you, dear mother, And our hearts are filled with pain.
Oh, this earth would be a heaven, Could we hear your voice again, Those years been worthy dear, mother, Sadly missed.
But still we don't forget.
For all the love that lived you best.
Your memory lingers yet.
—Always remembered by daughter-Beverley and family.

GOODFELLOW — In loving memory of a dear wife Charlie who passed away April 20, 1966.
Oh, how we would be a heaven, Could we hear your voice again, Those years been worthy dear, mother, sadly missed.
But still we don't forget.
All the love that lived you best.
Your memory lingers yet.
—Always remembered by daughter Beverley and family.

GOODFELLOW — In loving memory of a dear wife Charlie who passed away April 20, 1966.
Silent the voice I loved to hear, Sad for her the eyes that shed, But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember her who was dear.
Who gave always, as just as true.
—Always remembered by husband John.

McPHERSON — In loving memory of a dear father Clarence McPherson who passed away April 20, 1967.
After the sunset comes the spring,
And the spring must be followed by
Summer and autumn and winter,
Then a always renewed divinely planned.
Flawless perfect, the work of God's hand.
And yet like the seasons that come and go,
When the flowers of spring lay buried low,
God sends to the heart in its winter of woe,
A message of hope in a season of death,
Will, in the awakened by God's life - giving breath.
—Sadly missed by daughter-Leona Robert and Clarence Jr.

McPHERSON — In memory of my dear husband, Clarence McPherson who passed away April 19, 1967.
Your presence is gone, your memory is treasure,
Your heart rested you will live on forever.
—Always remembered by wife Elsie.

McPHERSON — In loving memory of a dear father Clarence (Mickey) McPherson, who passed away April 19, 1945.
We little know when we take that room,
The moment the day would bring,
For the call to follow, the shock of sad news,
Don't wish one to suffer on our account,
—Sadly remembered by sons Clarence, Robert and daughter-in-law Carol.

RUSHLOW — In loving memory of dear husband William Gordon Rushlow who passed away April 8th, 1966.
Your presence I miss, your memory I treasure,
In my heart you will live forever.
—Sadly remembered by wife Stella and family.

Watching Movie, Halts Theft

TRENTON — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario can thank a late-night movie-watcher for saving one of their outlets from burglary.

At Colborne, 16 miles west of here, a woman was watching the last movie on television when she heard the sound of splintering g lass about 12.30 a.m. today.

She called Brighton provincial police and a police car was rushed to the village.

Officers found the f r o n t window of the local liquor store smashed by a large rock. The result was a hole big enough to admit a man, say police, who are still investigating the incident.

U. S. Unit Attacked At DMZ

SAIGON (CP) — North Vietnamese troops stormed a U.S. Army position south of the demilitarized zone, killing 11 American infantrymen and wounding 33, a U.S. military spokesman said today.

In a 3½-hour battle that ended at midnight, North Vietnamese troops penetrated the U.S. defensive position and set off explosives. Reports said that a number of big armored personnel carriers in the camp were blown up by the attackers.

American troops fought back at dawn and reported they found the bodies of 13 North Vietnamese in the perimeter, several entangled in barbed wire.

The battle took place just more than a mile from the southern edge of the buffer strip which divides North and South Vietnam.

Elsewhere, American troops reported killing 82 North Vietnamese army regulars Friday in the jungles of Tay Ninh province, 12 miles from the Cambodian border.

The U.S. armored units lost four tanks, including two new Sheridans, in the battle. But U.S. officers called it a victory.

Plans Voyage

CAIRO (AP) — Norwegian archeologist Thor Heyerdahl plans to sail across the Atlantic Ocean from Morocco to Mexico in a boat made of papyrus reeds as the ancient Egyptians were said to have done. A crew of six is to accompany him on the 100-day voyage intended to demonstrate whether such a crossing was ever possible.

Thinking It Over

Richard Camm, Tom Wiegand and Gordon Hoard spent a weekend at a monastry to study at first hand the role of monks in medieval and modern life. Their report of the experience will be incorporated into the grade 11 medieval history course at Centennial.

Obituaries

MRS. ROY K. FROST

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine May Frost, 11 Burstall Street, Marmora, who died in Belleville General Hospital April 12th, after an illness of one year, was held from the Bowden Funeral Home to St. Paul's Anglican Church, on Friday.

Service was conducted by Rev. David Saunders, with Very Rev. Richard Fleming of Kingston assisting.

Mrs. Frost was born at Saint John, N.B., daughter of the late Harry Seely and the late Ethel Trueman. She was educated in Saint John schools, studying music at the Sisters of Charity Convent, and later moved to Montreal with her family.

A resident of Marmora for 19 years, her contributions to both church and community were numerous. She was an active member of St. Paul's Anglican Church, and had been organist and choir director for a number of years. She was past president of the church's Wottan's Auxiliary, and past worthy matron of the Eastern Star. She was also past regent of the IODE, and active in the Home and School Association. The Girl Guides also benefited from her support and leadership. She was captain of the Marmora company since its inception, and was also district commissioner. For the past eight years, she was manageress of Eaton's order office.

Surviving her are her husband, Roy; two daughters, Mrs. Richard Moore (Madeleine), RR 1, Campbellford, and Mrs. Dayid Reynolds (Heather), Marmora. Also surviving are a sister, Miss Madeleine Seely, and a brother, Trueman Seely, both of Montreal, and four grandchildren.

Honorary bearers were: Fred Wells, Ralph Neal, William Lavender and Percy Nayler. Active bearers: Jack Grant, Jack Reynolds, Floyd Loveless, Tom Barton, Sid Demorest and Claude Nichol. Girl Guides formed a guard of honor at the funeral. Interment was in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

CLARENCE McGRAYNE

Funeral service for Clarence D. McGrayne, 255 Cannifton Road, was held at the George O'Brien Funeral Residence yesterday.

Rev. R. Sweeney officiated at the funeral home and at the graveside in St. James' cemetery.

Bearers were Orville Robb, Edward Willerton, Clare Wood, Ernie Lenett, Bert McQuaid and Art Bertram.

A memorial service was held Thursday night by the United Trainmen's Union with Glen Wilson and Mike Burke officiating.

New Executive for Chamber

TWEED — David Morton was elected president of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting held at the Hotel Tweedsmuir Tuesday evening.

Other executive members include: vice-president, Keith Cotton; treasurer, Phil Cockburn; secretary, Robert Hanna; directors, Robert Bush, for Retail Merchants; Clarence Woods, for Agriculture; Kenneth Little, past-president and chairman of civic development.

Various committees are: membership, Barry Hunter; — tourism and publicity, Clyde Bell; directors at large, Guy Hughes, Dalton Lindsay, Donald Chisholm, Donald Lesage, Barbara Allen and William McCrea. (Reeves of Tweed Village and Hungerford Township.)

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of approately $2,300. Of this amount, some $200 to $1,000 will be required to operate the tourist information booth housed in North America's Smallest Jailhouse. This amount would include the reprinting of the information leaflet regarding Tweed, which proved so popular last year.

A Ladies' Night in the form of a dinner meeting, will be held about May 14. Keith Cotton was appointed to arrange for a guest speaker for that evening. The meeting will be open to the public and tickets will be sold in advance.

On retiring, past-president Kenneth Little, thanked all the members for their assistance during the past two, twelve months, and added that he would like to see more members get out and help the new president.

Speaking briefly to the meeting, Mr. Morton thanked the members for the confidence they had shown in him by electing him to the office of president. He also announced that the first meeting of the new season would be a dinner meeting held at the Hotel Tweedsmuir at noon May 6, 1969.

Iguanas, Monkeys, In New Pet Venture

A shop devoted entirely to pets opened this morning at Belleville Plaza.

Besides the routine pets — canaries, budgies, mice, guinea pigs, tropical fish and supplies necessary for their rearing, the shop will offer something different in the realm of four-footed free - loaders.

Iguanas, the South American lizards resembling a miniature dinosaur, are a case in point. The ferocious - looking reptiles search for everyone, warms the proprietor, Mrs. Renata Allmendinger. In babyhood the lizards are'delicate and need pampering.

Sharing the store with the more typical pet stock is the mascot, Joey, a woolly monkey.

This species is the most affectionate of the monkeys imported as pets, Mrs. Allmendinger says, and the least destructive around the house.

In addition to a complete pet grooming service and supplies, the proprietor can obtain most of the more exotic creatures fancied as pets. South American exporters can now supply as ocelot within six months and a monkey in 10 days.

Trenton Hosts Legion

TRENTON — The scene is set here for a two-day convention of 37 branches of the Canadian Legion.

Officially the session — for Eastern Ontario's Legion District F — gets underway at 2.30 p.m. today. The first of 300 delegates expected, started arriving this morning.

Legion business, including adoption of resolutions to go to the Federal government, will be conducted during both days.

Election of officers will be highlighted by selection of a new district commander to succeed Gerald Simpson of Brighton, who is completing his term of office.

Host president is Lou Knack of Trenton, with zone commander Cedric Smith, of Colours, assisting.

Ambassador Is Chased

VICTORIA (CP) — The United States ambassador to Canada took refuge in a government office here Friday after being pursued by a group of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators.

Harold H. Linder found himself unwillingly leading the group of about 25 placard-toting protesters as he walked toward a provincial museum after a 15-minute meeting with Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

At one point, he turned to the leading demonstrator and said: "Get away from here."

The ambassador, in the company of Milton C. Rewinkel, U.S. consul general in Vancouver, then ducked into the door of a nearby government building.

There was a brief scuffle as Mr. Rewinkel tried to slam the double doors and the picketers tried to force their way in.

Unique Experiment

Students Move to Monastery --As Part of History Course

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Students at Centennial Secondary School have found a unique place to study the monasticism segment of their grade 11 history course.

In a monastery — where else?

Three students — Gordon Hoard, Tom Wiegand and Richard Camm — recently spent a week at the monastery of the Anglican Society of St. John the Evangelist at Bracebridge. They were accompanied by their history teacher and historian of the project, Richard MacLean.

Their purpose was to discover the relevance of monasteries and the contemplative life in 20th century society. Their trip followed a week of library research into the role of monasticism in the middle ages, a section of the grade 11 ancient and medieval history course.

During their weekend visit, the students attended three of the seven religious services each day, held discussions with the 11 priests and monks, attended a youth club operated by the order in Bracebridge and voluntarily observed the rule of silence imposed from 9 p.m. until 10 a.m. the next day.

Gordon was outspoken on his opinion of the relevance of the monastery.

"It's a terrific place to get away from the pressures of the world, make an escape and look yourself away," he said. "But, it does no work outside the Bracebridge community. The fathers told us their purpose is the complete worship of God — everything else is secondary."

Richard concurred: "We went with the idea of relating what we saw to what we took in class, but found monastic life today too different for comparison. Materials were used in medieval times because they ran schools, universities and hospitals. Now they are just trying to survive."

"But they should be allowed to do their own thing," commented Tom.

The contemplative life versus the competitive, work-oriented life will be threshed out in the classroom when the three lads discuss their experiences, Mr. MacLean said. To prevent the discussion from becoming one-sided, three girls will spend a similar weekend in a Toronto convent.

The retreat behind monastery walls is part of the modern, student-experience approach to learning, the teacher explained.

Learning about monasticism in a monastery has a certain logic. But would you believe studying the fall of Rome on Belleville's the streets of downtown

A random on-the-street survey of 100 adult Bellevillians brought ancient history to life for his class, Mr. MacLean said.

"The students had trouble realizing that certain opinions about government held by Roman citizens contributed to the fall of the empire," he related. "So we devised a quiz to sample Canadian opinions of their government in the same areas. When 20th century Bellevillians were found to share much the same opinion as those ancient Romans, history hit home with quite an impact."

Centennials' roving young historians will take to the streets again next week. Their task, to search out medieval building devices, used for strength and beauty, that are still incorporated into modern buildings.

This approach to history makes it "the best class of the day" in Gordon's words.

"That's because you don't memorize a lot of facts," Tom said. "You learn where to find the facts, how to analyze them and what to do with them once they're yours."

Canada Plans Fishing Zones

Map shows government's plan to define and expand exclusive Canadian fishing zones off both Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Approval is being sought to exclude foreign fishermen from such bodies of water as the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Queen Charlotte Sound by creating a protective boundary. This would be a 65-mile line from Newfoundland to Cape Breton and a 100-mile line from the southern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands to the northern tip of Vancouver Island. Plan calls for general fishing boundary of 12 miles extended from baseline a line drawn from headland to headland.

Spiralling Costs

The amount of public funds being spent on education today has reached such proportions that all control over it seems to have been lost.

Some idea of the confusion that has arisen over finances under the new county system can be gained from the conflict of opinion between education boards and the provincial education authority.

Many county boards are finding that the new system of educational grants, stemming from drastic cutbacks in provincial spending, is producing startling increases in the cost to taxpayers.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon charged in the Legislature the other day that Ontario is going "bankrupt" over education. This brought a denial from Education Minister William Davis who said the county board system has not led to a significant increase in educational costs.

However, Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton as much as admitted the province is in trouble when he said his budgetary cutback in expenditures for 1969-70 already has proved worthwhile by forcing problems of municipal-provincial relations out into the open.

Frequently the public is blamed because it has been demanding the educational and other services that abound today. To a large extent this is true. Former Bank of Canada governor James Coyne said it some years ago, and it is just as valid today, that Canadians "are living grandly beyond their means."

On the other hand, governments, boards and the whole gamut of public trusteeship have long since failed to call a halt to this wholesale extravagance. Both Government and the taxpayer must be saved from themselves. That is why we have auditors and — in Ottawa — an Auditor-General, although regrettably, their warnings often go unheeded.

The public should be given a full accounting of the financial situation at the county level. In this area the Hastings county budget has not yet been presented. It is expected on April 28, but meantime the board is planning to meet with provincial legislature members and heads of the larger municipalities for "private discussions" regarding the budget. How far such discussions should be held behind closed doors is a matter for public concern. However, since the meeting (on April 25) precedes the budget by only a few days the public should have the facts eventually.

Timber Resources

Driving behind a truck-load of freshly-hewn timber the other day we were reminded of this great natural resource and the timber operations we encounter in travels around Hastings and neighboring counties.

Just how substantial a product is timber and how varied are its uses and by-products may be gauged by a study of the annual report of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

The timber branch alone affords some interesting data relating to this area. In Hastings county, for instance, there were 80 tree orders for planting on private lands. The orders comprised a total of 161,725 trees. Prince Edward County had 35 orders for a total of 19,650 trees.

The control and distribution of nursery stock — from white pine to black walnut — resulted in the distribution of 54,805,170 trees during the year. This was an increase of 5.9 per cent over 1966-67.

Tree improvement and conservation, seed collection and nursery soil management are other aspects of this section of the department report. It is a big industry, in this province and Canada at large. It is one of the resources we tend to take for granted.

New Industry

The announcement of a new plant for Belleville and the possibility of a further industrial project shortly are encouraging developments for the city.

Brooke Bond Canada Ltd. will employ about 100 people initially in its plant scheduled for construction in the industrial park near 401 highway.

Expansion of services for this and future plants of course is a prime consideration and Mayor Russell Scott has pointed out that the city has no alternative but to go ahead with the Moira River sanitary sewer this year.

The industrial park is beginning to take shape and it is in the best possible area to draw the attention of traffic on 401 to the city's growth.

P.C. Backbenchers Are Hitting Government Where It Hurts

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — If the government backbenchers, like good little boys, must always be seen but seldom heard, it is a much different cup of political tea for the MPs on the opposition backbenches.

The Liberal backbenchers must be seen — as the living, breathing evidence of the government's majority voting power in the Commons — to be traditionally are required to do it in well-behaved silence.

The sight of them sitting there, mum, in the rear ranks, is a sort of insurance policy for the front line cabinet, against surprise losses in snap votes.

And they are about as vocal as an insurance policy, too.

With their opposite numbers on the opposition backbenches, things are different and a lot more fun.

They are required to be seen, too, as insurance that the Opposition won't look like too tiny a minority in surprise votes, but like bad little boys, they must be heard.

And the louder and oftener, the better bad boys they are.

If it is the job of the Opposition to oppose the government and in opposing it, offer a credible alternative to it, most of the work falls on the backbenchers.

The leaders may plan the strategy of the war of words in Parliament, but their followers, the majority of them backbenchers, must fight the battles.

Who, then, are the hardest-nosed political warriors?

Sit in on the Daily Question Period in the House for even a few times, and you will soon know.

They are the ones who provoke the most hostile reaction from the government benches.

They are the members of the Opposition who get heckled, even hissed, or heard in worried silence.

This because they are the trouble-makers — making trouble for the government.

There is Donnie MacInnis, the two-fisted Conservative from Cape Breton, so Eardsleian that the ragging fear he just sometime might use those fists is never far from the back of Liberal minds.

MacInnis almost daily chides the government with the cry "bums and idiots" — which happens to be a phrase Prime Minister Trudeau only recently in Britain employed to describe some of his own Liberals.

The Cape Breeter, by sheer persistence, is getting to them, and their only counter-measure so far has been an angry booing and hollering of frustration.

It is the old-wear-them-down technique that former Conservative MP Gordon Church (11 used with his repeated scornful cry "same old gang!"

There is Nova Scotia Conservative Robert Coates who has been hammering the government on its spending. Not the spending of billions of dollars. For who grasps such figures?

But the spending of thousands on rugs, drapes and luxury furniture for fancy offices in posh new buildings for cabinet ministers and senior civil servants.

These are figures every taxpayer, especially the housewife, can understand. And comprehending clearly, complain.

Still in the Maritimes, there is New Brunswick Conservative Gordon Fairweather, quiet, but deadly when he wants to be. As he currently is in his careful probing of the life and times of a senior civil servant and his wife.

Fairweather, as a former attorney general, took on the job of Parliament's prosecutors when others bore back.

Out in Newfoundland there are "the Six," the half-dozen Conservatives who beat the government, the Canadian transport commission and the CNR, and kept their beloved "Bullett" running, at least for a whole lot longer than most people even thought possible.

In the West, there is Calgary Conservative Eldon Wallams, boomingly big-voiced, and impossible to shout down. Day after day he nags the government about wheat prices and oil markets. Never letting up, it can become wearing — on the cabinet. And has.

Then to demonstrate that he is more than just a political scold, he nailed Transport Minister Hellyer on the information leak — five days before the official announcement — on the site of the new Montreal Jumbo jetport, which may have put the multi-million dollar project in peril of speculative killings.

Finally there is that good grey socialist Andrew Brewin of the NDP, who at least a couple of times each week for the last three years has been crusading for penny-pinched government pensioners.

He wins a new pension deal for retired federal workers, he says, and he wins it for everyone.

Whether, in fact, retired civil servants can be equated with all the rest of us in the matter of pensions, current and future, might be highly debatable.

But Stanley Knowles believes it to be so, and keeps boring away at the social conscience of the government week after week after wearing week.

There they are, 11 good men and true, 10 Tories and one NDP, the hardest noses in all the Opposition.

Public Being Kept in Dark

Brockville Recorder and Times

Why is it that so many politicians after they are elected by the people, suddenly decide that the business of the government is not the business of the public? This is a question that is as old as politics but it is a question that is being asked more today than ever before, about all levels of government.

City councils, boards of education, provincial, federal governments, all seem to be developing a greater tendency than ever before to try and do as much as possible in private without the public watching. It is a tendency that is encouraged by civil servants who want everything done in private. But it is up to the elected representatives of the people to decide what people should know and that should be nearly everything.

The federal government's current position of secrecy on its talks with Peking over recognition of Communist China is a case that is causing a considerable public outcry. External Affairs Minister Sharp is adamant, however, in his position that there will be no information. "The Canadian government isn't interested in saying anything until the results are announced," is the way he puts it. Government policies generate public interest and argument but the public can scarcely enjoy the "participatory government" that so many politicians talk about today if the government prefers secrecy to openness.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fire raged through downtown Toronto causing an estimated $11,000,000 damage 65 years ago today—in 1904. The worst fire in the city's history broke out shortly after 8 p.m. on a windy spring night. At first it looked like an ordinary fire in a warehouse but the wind scattered burning brands and within three hours almost the entire wholesale area of the city was ablaze. When the wind suddenly changed direction the flames were brought under control.

Bilingualism Unpopular

Feeling Against Quebec Runs High in Western Canada

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is moving to undercut a widespread adverse reaction in Western Canada against the proposed official languages bill.

The bill, which would recognize English and French as official languages in Canada and establish a number of bilingual districts across the country offering federal services in both languages, has brought western MPs a heavy flow of critical mail from their constituents.

A Vancouver Island MP, David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich), provides a case in point. Mr. Anderson, 31-year-old former diplomat serving his first term in the Commons, says that for a while after the bill was introduced last fall he was getting a letter a day on the subject.

In recent weeks the flow has tapered off to one a week, no doubt partially as a result of concerted efforts by the government and individual MPs to correct popularly-held false notions about the bill.

Because of the hostile reception given the bill on the Prairies and in British Columbia, Justice Minister John Turner is proposing to put forward some technical amendments aimed at reassuring the doubtful and the disturbed.

These amendments do not affect the principle of the bill but would rather, in the words of a spokesman for Mr. Turner, provide "clarification" of some of its provisions.

If approved by cabinet within the next week or so, as hoped, they will be ready for Commons consideration when the languages bill next comes before the House in about two weeks' time.

Of the myriad objections that have been raised against the bill, perhaps the two chief ones are that it would force people to learn French and that it would discriminate against non-bilingual Canadians in recruitment to and promotion within the federal civil service.

The answer to the second point is that nobody is to be penalized for not having facility in the second language if he has not had an opportunity to learn it. "A willingness to acquire bilingualism at public expense" will be considered an adequate substitute.

The answer to the first point was stated by Mr. Anderson in a speech in Victoria last month. "The bill does not mean . . . that every English-speaking Canadian will have to learn French. It does mean that every Canadian will have access to public education in either official language, and will be free to use either official language when dealing with the federal government, federal courts and other public bodies in all areas of the country where the size of the minority justifies it."

To qualify as bilingual under terms of the bill, a district must have a minority constituting 10 per cent of the population. There is no such district in B.C., Mr. Anderson noted. There is one in Alberta, one in Saskatchewan and four in Manitoba.

Mr. Anderson's mail has shown a deep strain of misunderstanding, culpable or otherwise, on the intent and ramifications of the languages bill. There has also been plenty of good, old-fashioned bigotry.

One constituent wrote that the bill discriminates against "all our ethnic groups who now must learn a third language.

"Let the people of Quebec vote on separating from Canada, the sooner, the better," he went on.

Another suggested that Canada be split in two at the Manitoba border, with the West becoming a separate state within the Commonwealth. "This idea comes up quite frequently," says Mr. Anderson.

Still another letter contained the following passage: "What in hell is the matter with your damned Liberal French Canadian government? I use the hyphenated phrase with deliberate intent."

In the upper left hand corner of the letterhead was a reproduction of the Red Ensign which incorporates the Union Jack, and beneath it a printed caption: "Canada's flag: keep it flying."

Byzantine Priest in Toronto Named to Aid Arab Catholics

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. John Adel Elya, a Byzantine Catholic priest, was recently appointed by Roman Catholic Archbishop Philip Pocock to head a new mission in Toronto for Catholic immigrants from Arabic-speaking countries.

It is known as Our Lady of the Assumption Melkite Catholic Mission. Members of the congregation follow the ancient rite of the Eastern Catholic Church, although they are in full communion with Rome.

"We of the Eastern Catholic Church regard ourselves as the bridge" between the Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic churches, Father Elya said.

He explained that the Eastern churches broke with Rome in the 11th century, but the Eastern Catholic Church, unlike the Orthodox, reunited with the Holy See in the 17th century.

In addition to the different liturgy, the various branches of the Eastern Catholic Church which follow the Coptic and Maronite churches, have their own canon law, hierarchy, baptismal and marriage rites.

Ever since earliest Christian times the Eastern churches have admitted well qualified married men to the priesthood, allowing them to stay married.

Father Elya says his training in sociology has been invaluable in his work with Arabic Catholic immigrants. At present there are 350 families in his congregation, many of whom "travel 15 miles to get to the service" at St. Michael's Cathedral in downtown Toronto.

"Probably the biggest difficulty is the acclimatization to a different culture. People who come from the cities, say Cairo or Alexandria, are fairly sophisticated but people from the villages tend to be confused by North American ways.

"If a boy takes an interest in a girl here it may just be a harmless flirtation. However, if the girl comes from an Arabic country she may take it for granted that he wants to marry her."

While there is some bitterness on the part of recent Arab immigrants because of the Middle East conflict, the priest says they tend to stay out of political involvement.

"When an Arab leaves his home he may look back with nostalgia, but he's more interested in looking forward to his future here."

Father Elya, of Lebanese ancestry, conducts his masses in Arabic.

Similar missions have been established in Montreal and Ottawa.

Ministries Could Be Unified By Mutual Laying on of Hands

TORONTO (CP) — One of the elder statesmen of the ecumenical movement in Canada believes he has found the solution to one of the thorniest barriers to unification of the United and Anglican churches.

Rt. Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, 72-year-old retired Anglican bishop of Toronto, thinks the problem of unification of ministries can be solved by a mutual "laying on of hands" by clergy of both churches.

He says the Act of Unification, proposed in the Principles of Union should involve Anglican clergy—bishops, priests and deacons—kneeling before United Church representatives who would place their hands on the head of each cleric in a ritual that is part of the ordination in both churches.

There would be a similar laying on of hands for United Church clergy by Anglican bishops.

Bishop Wilkinson said in an interview the problem of unification of ministries is causing the greatest apprehension in both denominations, and a solution would take "the utmost humility and forbearance."

He said he would be prepared "to kneel and have United Church presbyters lay hands on me in the same way as I would lay hands on them."

The bishop, who took the lead in the 1930s in arranging interfaith pulpit exchanges, said union between the churches would really be a merger of two ecumenical movements.

The Anglican Church blended a variety of theological schools ranging from evangelicals to sacramentalists and "high" to "low" forces—all an assurance that there could still be diversity in liturgical worship" in a unified church.

Religion in China Now Appears Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — After surviving, at least partially, for more than a decade and a half under the heavy pressure of Communist rule, religion in mainland China today is dead in its institutional forms.

That is the conclusion of church experts who piece together the available fragments of information on conditions in that vast, semi-closed country of Mankind's totalitarianism.

Outwardly, they say the last vestiges of Christianity, Islam and the ancient faiths of Buddhism and Taoism have been wiped out.

"Organized religion" no longer exists in China, says Rev. L. La Deay, a Roman Catholic editor of a Hong Kong newsletter. But he adds that "religious belief" still persists among an unknown number of Chinese people

In other Communist states, religious groups have managed to continue functioning, although usually under sharp limitations. This also was the case in China at least until 1966.

But since the wave of violence that swept the country at that time, the last remnants of religious activity apparently have disappeared.

That upheaval brought "an all-out external manifestations of all religions," Father La Deay states in the Jesuit weekly, America. Bibles were burned, temples and churches wrecked or sealed.

Since then, hopes have been voiced among church leaders that at least some of the worship places would be allowed to resume functioning again, once the turmoil had subsided.

But "there is no sign yet that any church of any religion has been re-opened," Father La Deay says, apart from one Moslem mosque in Peking temporarily restored for the visit of a Moslem delegation from Africa.

When Mao Tse-tung came into power 20 years ago, there were about 2,000,000 Roman Catholics and 1,000,000 Protestants in China. There is more than 600,000,000 people. Most others espoused Buddhism, Taoism and the old, ethical code of Confucianism. About 10,000,000 were Moslems.

W. I. Acquires New Hall

The April meeting of Carnahan - Corbyville Women's Institute was held Monday evening, April 7, in the newly acquired community hall known as the Carnahan-Corbyville-Bethany Historical Hall, formerly the Bethany United Church located on the 4th of Thurlow.

This was a special occasion for the Institute as it marked its 19th anniversary along with the opening of the new hall.

President, Mrs. Gerald Moore presided and welcomed the the members and visitors. The treasurer's report showed a successful year. Reports were also read from the standing committee chairmen, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. Bowers, Mrs. Milton and Mrs. Meale.

Mrs. Lucas the district president conducted the election of officers as follows: district director, Mrs. G. Moore; president, Mrs. C. Ellsworth; 1st vice-president, Mrs. C. Avery; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. J. Latchford; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. E. Morris; assistant secretary, Mrs. P. Meale. Directors are Mrs. A. Palmer, Mrs. D. Milton and Mrs. J. Latchford and for public relations, Mrs. F. Reid; resolutions, Mrs. G. Wilson; auditors, Mrs. D. Winsor and Mrs. W. Latchford; assistants to curator, Mrs. A. Palmer, Mrs. A. Boyd and Mrs. P. Meale; pianist, Mrs. N. Welsh; press, Mrs. P. Meale. Heads of other committees were also appointed.

Following the installation the district president gave a talk on the early history of the Women's Institute and stressed the fact that it is a non partisan, non racial which is open to all women in the community. A membership quiz was conducted on the WI handbook.

Mrs. Moore thanked Mrs. Lucas and presented her with a gift on behalf of the members. Readings given by Mrs. Milton, Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. Meale.

Mrs. Reid convener for agriculture introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Holly who showed three reels of film dealing with agriculture areas in Canada. He also congratulated the group on obtaining the new hall and wished them well every success, after which he was presented with a gift.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

TIME AND YELLUM

"No one can produce without time." — Sigurdur Nordal.

* * *

Upon seeing "Birth of an Island" the other evening on TV, concerning the famed volcano Surtsey which rose out of the ocean early one November morn in 1963 a few miles southwest of Iceland, (as you perhaps saw), we spoke with an air-pilot, Captain William Strathey, 124 Victoria Ave., who has flown over the new island various times during flying assignments to Iceland.

"I've been told," he said, "that a first edition of ten thousand art books with spectacular color photos of red-hot lava rushing into the sea, was sold out in ten days in Iceland alone.

"Does this mean that Iceland is a book-loving country?

"Well, let's say, if no survey exists to determine whether people read more in a country where nights are long and days (in the winter are sometimes three hours long) it's a pretty fair bet, that they do. It's agreed that Iceland's 200,000 citizens probably read more books per capita than any country on earth, and that they have a 700 year history, their folk-tales, as well as biographies and memoirs. One Icelander said he had an estimate of 400,000 books are sold there yearly, in as many as 100 book stores, some with comfortable tables and chairs for the serious browser.

"Of course, the sales become a mere trickle during June, July and August, when with the sky aglow most of the midnight, most natives prefer to putter around their gardens and yards at 11 p.m. than be inside with a book.

"Their's must be a very old language."

"True. Nor has it changed much, from the Old Norse spoken at least 1,000 years ago. It is a literary and poetic language and writers and poets are numberless. Iceland's winning Nobel Prize winner Mr. Halldor Laxness, says, it's a normal pastime for everyone,' and that 'everyone writes books.' The old people pass down much folklore' and 'We learn to write and to compose poetry very early.'

"It seems most unusual — yet understandable."

Yes, their literary vitality is rooted, no doubt deep in the past. Sigurdur Nordal, leading scholar of Icelandic literature of the University of Iceland points out that in the Middle Ages, Iceland's economy was mainly cattle. The long winters precluded extensive farming, and that which the farmers had most of was time — during long winter nights. And what did they use for paper? Why the skins of calves which couldn't be bred, and which skins could be used, for one thing, either — for writing. And hundreds of such manuscripts were written, and as he says: "Without a great deal of surplus time, the Icelanders could never have been able to afford to preserve calf-skins in such numbers, much less carry on the exacting labor of writing the manuscripts' for it took about 100 skins for a manuscript as one famous 14th - century parchment manuscript reveals.

"As Mr. Nordal says, 'No one can produce without time."

ST. PAUL'S ACW

MARMORA — The April meeting of St. Paul's Anglican Church Women held at the home of Mrs. Don Richardson was presided over by Mrs. W. D. Lavender, president.

Mrs. S. B. Cheeseman and Mrs. Norman Kilpatrick volunteered to attend a meeting at St. Thomas' Church, Belleville, to discuss the Diocesan constitution.

At the next meeting on May 6 members were asked to come early to prepare a quilt for a bale. Refreshments were served by Mrs. George Brown and Mrs. Clarence McCoy.

Ladies' Club Views Slides

Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club held its monthly meeting at the Recreation Centre on April 8 with 33 in attendance.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. P. Henderson followed by a one-minute silence in memory of Mrs. Rose Packman, a former member who passed away in Albright Manor, Beamsville on April 8.

During business minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell and the financial statement was given by Mrs. L. Fox. Mrs. O. Wales read letters of thanks from Mrs. W. Reed, Mrs. L. McCoy, and Mrs. M. May thanked everyone for cards and kindnesses received while she was ill.

Plans were made for, the potluck dinner to be held in May when each group is to contribute two numbers for the program.

Program was in charge of Mrs. O. White's and Mrs. A. Mitchell's groups with Mrs. White as the Easter messenger. She was assisted in devotions by Mrs. O. Wells who read with the story on resurrection and read the legend of the goldenrod tree. Mrs. L. Wannamaker accompanied by Mrs. M. Doyle gave a selection and a reading and a number of slides of their trip through Quebec and the Maritimes was presented by New Hampshire. Also shown were a few scenes of Vancouver. She was presented with a gift on behalf of the club.

The president expressed thanks to all and the meeting closed with the saying of lunch by the group in charge.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Aselstine, Coleman Street, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Beverley Ann, to James Ernest Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Parks, Orchard Drive. Marriage will take place Saturday, May 24, 1969 at 12 noon in Bethel Chapel, Belleville.

Bethlehem Shrine No. 11 Elects New Slate Of Officers

One of the highlights of the meeting of Bethlehem Shrine No. 11, Order of the White Shrine of Jerusalem took place recently in the IOOF hall, Bellemore, when Soj. Gertrude Ellsworth was installed as Worthy High Priestess with Soj. Robert Mansell as Watchman of Shepherds.

A gift was presented to Soj. Ethel Kellar, retiring W.H.P. by Soj. Georgina Rendell, from the officers and members of Bethlehem Shrine No. 11.

Soj. Helen Shorey presented Soj. Ethel Kellar P.W.H.P. with her past officer's jewel and Soj. Florence Birch presented Soj. John Birch, P.W.O.S. with his jewel.

The ceremony of installation was impressively performed by the installing board headed by Soj. Kathryn Bushell P.W.H.P., assisted by Maurice Chaney P.W.O.S.; installing herald Soj. Margaret Stalker P.W.H.P.; installing scribe Soj. Nora MacDonald P.W.H.P., and several others.

An enjoyable feature of the evening were the solos rendered by Soj. Eva Birch of Midpah Shrine, Kingston and Soj. Margaret Steele P.S.W.H.P of Toronto.

Following installation all retired to the upper hall where a pot luck banquet had been prepared.

Soj. George Pound P.W.O.S. proposed a toast to the visitors, this was responded to by Margaret Steele P.S.W.H.P. Soj. Robert Mousell was toastmaster.

Some of the officers installed for the year 1969-70 were: Worthy High Priestess, Soj. Gertrude Ellsworth; Noble Prophetess, Soj. Eleanor Weese; Worthy Scribe, Soj. Jean Stephenson; Worthy Treasurer, Soj. Mary White.

Kaolin from China Used in Making Pottery

Ak-Roblau no longer appears on the map, although many pieces of china and pottery with this name on them may be found in Canada. Over the years Akroblau, (there are many spelling variations), has been recorded geographically as in Bohemia, Austria and Czechoslovakia. Latterly the name has disappeared altogether.

In 1811 Akroblau was a small town on the outskirts of Carlsbad, a watering-place famous for its mineral springs. Carlsbad, now Karlovy Vary, was found to be the site of kaolin deposits of the quality that made Limoges famous.

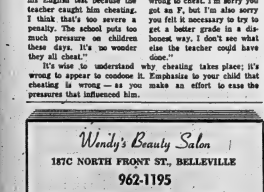
Kaolin itself is a white clay resulting from the weathering of aluminous materials such as feldspar. The name comes from a hill of the material in Kiangsi Province in southwest China. Kaolin was the secret ingredient that made Chinese wares so much better than European.

For as long as trade had existed with China, Europeans endeavoured to copy Chinese wares. Tradition has it that in Europe the wife of a village apothecary first began boiling kaolin, which she found in her back garden, as a cure for stomach troubles. It was accidentally found that the sediment could be used for pottery which closely resembled the imported Chinese product.

The manufacture of pottery and China with kaolin was a closely guarded secret under royal patronage. By the end of the 18th century the secret was common knowledge and there were many skilled potters available to Benedict Hasslacher when he began manufacturing cream-colored earthenware and hard - paste porcelain at Akroblau.

In 1822 the business passed to August Nowotny who continued until 1884. In 1885 Epiag. (Erste bohmische Porzellan-Industrie-Akt. Ges.), continued with the production of the trade name AICH. This trademark continued in use until 1940.

The mark illustrated is that of Martin Zdekauer, which first appeared at Akroblau about 1895. With variations, this mark continued until 1945 and it was widely distributed in Canada. The word Austria and the eagle disappeared by 1920 and in 1938 the word Czechoslovakia was added.



A ribbon trademark that appears to be English, marked Victoria Carlsbad, was made in Akroblau. The actual firm was Porzellanfabrik Viktoria Schmirk and Co. which was still in business in 1905.

Late Victorian Bohemian and Austrian china and porcelain does not command as high a price as Limoges or comparable English pieces but it will undoubtedly rise in value. Although only one of the potters using kaolin appears to be manufacturing now, the trade in stomach powders is greater than it ever was in the 18th century.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm not an F in his English test because the teacher caught him cheating. I think that's too severe a penalty. The school puts too much pressure on children these days. It's no wonder they all cheat."

Mother: "You knew it was wrong to cheat. I'm sorry you got an F, but I'm also sorry you felt it necessary to try to get a better grade in a dishonest way. I don't see what else the teacher could have done."

It's wise to understand why cheating takes place; it's wrong to appease to condone it. Emphasize to your child that cheating is wrong — as you make an effort to ease the pressures that influenced him.

'Pain of Common Humanity'

By DORIS CLARK

"What then have we done at the Sign-Inn? We have crossed the tracks and discovered that people are people on both sides. We have felt the pain of our common humanity. In a snob-culture where people are expected to behave deliquently, we have created an oasis where the expectations are higher; where honesty is better than dishonesty, where kindness is more common than hate.

"We have been excited to find that it works." — Mac Carson, director, Hamilton Wesley House.

"We opened our Coffee House on June 23 and charged 10 cents for admission. Many of the Wesley 'kids' (their own term for themselves — ages 16 to 21) could not understand why we would charge so little, particularly since we had worked so hard to make the place. They came to see by happenings such as this that we did these things because we cared.

"At first some of the volunteers (from church and university groups) grouped together at the tables, finding it most difficult to get involved. They gradually found it easier to relate to the kids by selling pop, beer and coffee to receive admission, playing cards, playing chess, and playing pool.

"Four of us attended the funeral of the father of three Wesley boys. Many of the kids were present. Little was said by us, yet the message came through that we were concerned about them and this concern was not limited to the environment of the Coffee House. We accepted the kids as people.

"It was difficult for the fellows to accept us girls as mere friends (who happened to be girls) and to understand the type of friendship which we were offering. Their experience had taught them that girls were sex objects. Gradually a 'sister-type' relationship was established; nevertheless we were constantly tested to see if we would weaken.

"I wish I could describe the changes in the kids during the seven weeks of our Coffee House. Those I had known on a shallow basis from the Friday night dances were now my friends and I was truly concerned about them. (It must be noted that the winter program was a necessary preliminary for the Coffee House.) The development of their unique, hidden personalities was beautiful. I had never dreamed that certain individuals could be so trustworthy and important to me.

"On the Thursday of the last week, 35 kids and 15 volunteers went to Courtcliffe Park. There we had the use of the swimming pool and the band shell where our own band played; we went on a hayride and ended the evening with a wiener roast. At no time was there any need to exercise authority. The kids really appreciated the evening and were most anxious to go again.

"Being manageress of the Coffee House has been a tremendous experience. It was possible for me to see the intermingling of lives and personalities — personalities of people who had not realized what it was to be accepted as a person. I have come to better understand life by being involved in the lives of others and freely expressing myself." — Marg Brown, managaress

ST. JOSEPH'S CWL

The monthly general meeting of St. Joseph's Parish Council was held recently in the Parish Hall.

It was announced that the year had been a successful one, in every way, as conveners of standing committees read their annual reports.

Mrs. H. Clarke thanked all who had helped with the recent fashion show, while the president reminded members that Mrs. T. Kelly was still collecting knitted squares for afghans for the poor of the world.

A special Mass will be offered for members on the Feast of Our Lady of Good Council, April 26 at 5.30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Church.

Mrs. D. Dunnink, chairman of the nominating committee presented the new slate of officers. The incoming president is Mrs. H. Clarke; first vice-president, Mrs. J. Belanger; second vice-president, Mrs. J. Mooney; third vice-president, Mrs. G. Tugnett; recording secretary, Mrs. O. Kruger; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. Park and treasurer, Mrs. D. Hurley.

The new officers were officially installed by the director, Rt. Rev. J. Carley, who spoke briefly about the changing function of the Catholic Women's League.

Mrs. H. Carr-Brant presented Mrs. H. Clarke with the president's pin and thanked the members for their support during the past two years.

Family of Six Never Visit Father

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me why, out of a family of three boys and three girls (all middle age and with nice families of their own), not one of them can find one hour a month to visit an 80-year-old father who is nearly blind and can't hear very well. The poor old man has had arthritis and he hasn't been out of the house since his wife's funeral three and a half years ago.

ANN LANDERS

Every year at Christmas the children send beautiful plaats and expensive flannel bathrobes. When his birthday rolls around, they send lovely cards saying, "I hope you have a nice day." Why on earth don't they show up in person and help make the day a nice one?

I can see it now— these six knuckleheaded kids will gather at their father's funeral, wring their hands, dab at their eyes and tell each other they had no idea the end was near.

I know this situation is not unique, Ann. There are thousands of people all over the world who lead their own comfortable lives and never give a thought to an old mother or father. Why do they have to wait until death comes and it's too late? If you can answer this you're a smart lady. — JAUNDICED EYE.

* * *

DEAR EYE: Why? Because they are selfish and inconsiderate and shortsighted. It's as simple as that.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently I ran across an article called "Profile of Neurotic Depression." I was horrified to discover that the symptoms sound very much like what my mother is going through. The article said those people need treatment.

I didn't realize my mother was sick and now I feel like a heel because I've been impatient and snappy with her. How can I get her to go to a doctor without hurting her pride? Even though I don't show it at times, I love my mother very much and I'd hate to have anything happen to her.

Don't suggest a minister because we are not religious people and she wouldn't go. I might add, my parents argue a great deal. Theirs is not a happy marriage. What should I do? — SANTA FE, N.M.

* * *

DEAR SANTA: If you can find the article it might be a good idea to hand it to her without comment — in a casual manner. If you cannot locate the article, mention it to your mother, with emphasis on the new medication which has done wonders for women over 40. I suspect she is having menopausal problems which, added to the problems of a shaky marriage, are enough to throw anybody into a neurotic depression.

* * *

DEAR ANN: I'm dating an attractive man — object matrimony. His sister (maiden lady) is lovely but she's a complete introvert and impossible to entertain. He has hinted that he'd like to invite her to spend the Memorial Day holiday with me. I'm afraid I'd be wrong out after 24 hours. But I don't want to hurt my chances. What is the wise thing to do? — GA.

* * *

DEAR GA: Say no and don't worry about your chances. If he wants to marry you he will. If he doesn't, he won't change his mind because you were nice to his sister.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Delicious Scalloped Potatoes

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: I wonder if you would forgive me if I were to point out a danger to you in your column you gave a doughnut recipe (Thumb-a-Doughnut — Feb. 12, 1969) which looks really good but in the directions the lady said she cut these doughnuts in a hurry "with a glass tumbler" . . .

When my children were growing up I made many biscuits — they loved them — my standard recipe was based on six cups flour! If in a real hurry, and who isn't with six little ones around your feet — and heart — I also very often reached for "a glass tumbler." One day that glass broke — I was working fast. — suppose from compressed air inside. I do know everything on the board was wasted because I could not be sure there would not be a sliver of glass in it. Ever since then though I have taken the time an extra moment — to reach for the proper cutter. — May H.

ANSWER: Thank you for a careful warning.

QUESTION At a UCW meeting they served lovely smooth scalloped potatoes. I want you to tell me please how to make scalloped potatoes that do not curdle if refrigerated overnight and baked in automatic oven. — Natalie W.

ANSWER: Quite an assignment but we can do it.

NON - CURDLING
SCALLOPED POTATOES
(Serves 4 to 6)
2 tbsps. butter (first amount)
2 tbsps. flour
1¼ to 2 tsps. salt (or less)
2 cups milk
6 cups sliced potatoes (not packed)
1 tbsp. melted butter

Melt butter (first amount) in large saucepan, stir in flour and salt, then add milk slowly stirring until sauce thickens. Add potatoes and heat, stirring until the sauce boils again. Turn into a greased casserole being sure all potatoes are coated with sauce. Drizzle melted butter over. Bake covered (using foil if desired) at 350 deg. F.ahr. for 1 hr. or until potatoes are tender. Or bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hrs.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Split Pea Soup (see Tues. April 1); Iceberg Lettuce Wedges with Celery Dressing; Mince Pies with Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

NOTE: After melted butter has been drizzled over this can be refrigerated, covered, until baking time.

VICTORIA WILLING WORKERS

Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse was hostess for the April meeting of the Victoria Willing Workers group. President, Mrs. Roy Wetherall called the meeting to order, and opened with a devotional poem and hymn.

Business items were dealt with. Mrs. Mousseau invited the May meeting to her home. Miss Audra Brickman was in charge of an Easter devotional with which she was assisted by readings by other members.

Mrs. Harmon Montgomery and Mary gave a travelogue with pictures of Mary's trip and visit in several European countries. This was very interesting and informative. Guest at the meeting was Mrs. Brenard Webb (nee Jean Waterhouse) from California.

Lunch was served and a pleasant social time enjoyed.

ST. MICHAEL'S C.W.L.

The annual meeting of St. Michael's C.W.L. council was held recently in the league room of the junior school.

The reports of the year were received and the chairman of the nomination committee, Mrs. George O'Brien brought in a new slate of officers.

These are as follows: director, Rt. Rev. J. P. Sullivan; president, Mrs. J. Sheridan; first vice - president, Mrs. J. Farrell; second vice - president, Mrs. L. Holand; third vice - president, Mrs. F. Becker.

Other officers elected were: recording secretary, Mrs. L. Rasbotte; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. Rivers and treasurer, Mrs. S. J. Brennan.

Councillors are: ward one, Mrs. M. Collins; ward two, Mrs. D. Whalen; ward three, Mrs. T. C. Young; ward five, Mrs. C. Langabeer; ward six, Mrs. J. Edwards; ward seven, Mrs. B. Roote.

Mrs. J. Morey gave the recording secretary's report concerning the various year-round projects. Social Welfare convener, Mrs. L. Farrell, reported on assistance to the various worthy organizations. Mrs. A. Kroetsch gave her report on the Junior Girl Guide and Brownie banquet, and other related activities.

Reports were also given by treasurer, Mrs. E. Tomsett; Mrs. G. Donoghue; Mrs. F. Ross, spiritual convener, Convener of Social Action, Mrs. R. Ackerman; Mrs. F. Beker gave the corresponding secretary's report, and Mrs. B. Roote reported on the national magazine.

The business meeting was brief and included plans to attend the diocesan convention to be held in Kingston on May 24 and 25.

Rt. Rev. J. P. Sullivan installed the officers and congratulated the members on the splendid work accomplished during the past year.

Mrs. J. Whalen presented Mrs. J. Sheridan with the president's pin. Mrs. Whalen was presented with the past president's pin by the diocesan president, Mrs. H. Brown.

The Eilis Marathon Bridge will be resumed in September with Miss Lillian Courneyea as convener.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

RYLSTONE FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS' CLUB

RYLSTONE — Mrs. Aaron Anderson was hostess to the Rylstone Friendly Neighbors' Club recently when there was an attendance of eleven members.

Mrs. Clarence Thomson, president, was in charge of devotions. Business and correspondence were dealt with and letters read from Mrs. Walter Buchan, a missionary in Korea.

An interesting Bible study period was conducted by Mrs. Robert Spencer, with other members taking part.

Mrs. Ellis Jones was convener for the short program of readings, by Mrs. Cora Reid, Mrs. Raymond Stewart and Mrs. Ross Dickie and an accordion vocal solo by Mrs. R. Spencer.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Wilfred Spencer and Mrs. Ross Dickie.

Marathon Bridge Concludes for This Season

An enjoyable and successful Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary Marathon Bridge, convened by Mrs. Charm Mott, was completed on Wednesday afternoon.

For the season's play Mrs. Thelma Fitzgibbon and Mrs. Irene Trudeau, winners of the first section; Mrs. Dorothy McGlashan and Mrs. Jean Adams, winners of the second section, played off, and the former team was high. The low scores of the first section, Mrs. Gladys Ormond and Mrs. Alice Caswell played off with the low scores of the second section. Mrs. Mary McLeod and Mrs. Kay Cousins, the latter team winning. All received cash prizes.

Lunch was served.

UCW MEETINGS

ST. ANDREW'S UCW

MARMORA — Devotional period at the April meeting of the UCW of St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was conducted by Mrs. James Cook, Mrs. Eldon Killins, Mrs. Doug Vilneff, Mrs. Vaughn Glover, Mrs. Robert Sanderson and Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn. This was based on the theme of the evening, "Red China? Communism? Why be Concerned?" Study took this year is on China, and Mrs. Cook gave a review of the Canadian Government's policies towards the recognition of Red China, relating the pros and cons of a better China-Canada relationship. Members divided into small groups for discussion on the subject, then shared their opinions generally.

In other business, arrangements were made for catering to St. St. Andrew's bowling banquet on May 3. New communion glasses will be purchased by the UCW for the church, and a sum of money given to the church board.

A special vote of thanks was extended Mrs. Douglas Miller, wife of the minister, for her arrangement of flowers in the church on Easter Sunday, as well as for her efforts on all Sundays through the year.

WEDDING

McCARROLL — SAUNDERS

The wedding was solemnized in the Deseronto United Church, recently, when Suzanne Margaret Saunders of Toronto and Deseronto and William Lyon McCarroll of Toronto exchanged marriage vows before Rev. William Hendry.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Edward Saunders, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George McCarroll of Toronto. Mrs. Frances Walker was at the organ, and accompanied Sister Edna Martin of Lorretto Abbey, Toronto, who sang nuptial selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white brocaded velvet, floor-length gown cut on princess lines with a mandarin collar touched with sequins. A matching coat cut on straight lines, fell into a chapel train. The sleeves were long and the neckline softly rounded. The shoulder-length veil was held in place by a white velvet rose, and the bride carried a cascade of red roses and white gladioli.

Mrs. Gary (Susan) Brickner, Miss Sharon Murphy, and Miss Leslie McCarroll, cousin of the bridegroom, were the bride's attendants. All were from Toronto. They were gowned alike in American Beauty red velvet, fashioned on princess lines, floor-length with long sleeves and scalloped necklines. The headdress was a single large white velvet rose and each carried a small cascade of white gladioli.

Ronald Paxton attended the groom, and the ushers were: Gordon Saunders, brother of the bride, and Rodney McCarroll, brother of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the newly renovated Glover Hall, with the mother of the bride welcoming the guests wearing a suit of pink brocaded satin, with white fur bordering the three - quarter length sleeves; a matching flowered hat; and other accessories in white. A gardenia formed her corsage.

Assisting her, the mother of the groom was in a jacketed dress of mid - blue, with navy hat and accessories, and a gardenia as her corsage.

For the honeymoon trip through Eastern Ontario, the bride wore a dress of brocade cut on princess lines, and a straight coat of pink pile. Her hat was of pink straw and her corsage was Sweetheart roses.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. McCarroll will take up residence in Toronto.

With seven people in the family, how do you keep everybody comfortable? The Rutherfords say "With electric heating!"

Baseboard Units take up little space, blend with room decor. Ferret room-by-room temperature control.

Radiant Ceiling heating is invisible. Each room's temperature can be individually controlled.

Heat Pump heats in winter, cools in summer. One setting maintains any desired year-round temperature.

Hot Water System heats and circulates hot water through baseboard units from small boiler on basement wall.

Electric Furnace with air filter, combines with cooling and humidity control for year-round comfort.

When Bob and Daphne Rutherford had their house built in Nepean, near Ottawa, they chose electric heating for the extra space it would give. Now, after six years of all-electric living, they'll tell you that electric heating means more to them than the extra space it gave. It means comfort for them and for their five growing children; it means an end to humidity problems; it means reliable warmth, without noise; and it means economy, too, when compared with neighbours' heating costs.

Here's what Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford have to say.
"Cost is considerably less than we anticipated," says Mr. Rutherford. "And look at all the extra benefits! There's no lost space in the house. We've got the ultimate in control. It's quiet, and there's no dirt. I've never experienced heating more steady." "It's so clean," says Mrs. Rutherford. "I don't have to dust as often."
"With thermostats in each room, if someone wants more heat, they can have it, just in that one room. Electric heating keeps everyone happy!"
Whether you're looking for a new home, or planning to modernize an older one, choose the ultimate in comfort—safe, clean, economical electric heating. There's a system just right for every home. Call a qualified electric heating contractor, or ask your Hydro.

Trevino's Driver Makes Him Favorite in Champions' Tourney

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino and Masters title-holder George Archer, tied for the second round lead in golf's $150,000 Tournament of Champions, pick the same man to win it—Lee Trevino.

"You have to pick Trevino," Archer says.

"He's the best driver on the tour. He says he only leaves the fairway to go to the phone. That's about right.

"And that's what you have to do to win on this course, stay in the fairway. The rough is really rough."

"If my driver stays like it was today," Trevino said Friday after shooting a second-round 68, four under par, "I'd say I like my chances very much."

Trevino, seven shots back going into the second round, and Archer, who has a pair of 70s, are tied at 142 going into today's third round on the 7,114-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Just one shot back at 143 are Gene Littler, who had a second-round 68, South African Gary Player, Julius Boros, the PGA champion, and dynamic Arnold Palmer.

Player, Boros and Palmer all had second round 74s.

Dave Stockton is alone at 144 after a second round 75.

First-round leader Dick Lotz dropped back with a 78 for 145, while Jack Nicklaus shot himself out of contention with an 80, one of his poorest rounds in years. He has a 36-hole score of 153, 11 shots off the pace and next to the bottom in the select, 25-man field.

Habs Face Two Problems Now

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens appear to be faced with more than one problem as they prepare to meet the Bruins in Boston Sunday in the fourth game of the National Hockey League's Eastern Division playoffs.

The Canadiens, already faced with trying to stop the rejuvenated Bruins after Boston's 5-0 victory in the third game of the best-of-seven series Thursday, learned Friday that veteran netminder Gump Worsley suffered a hand injury in Thursday's game.

Worsley returned to Montreal with the other members of the Canadiens after Thursday's game and complained of a sore left hand—the one he uses to catch the puck.

The injury was the result of stopping a hard shot from Ken Hodge of the Bruins in the first period of Thursday night's encounter—Worsley's first defeat in 18 straight playoff games.

Worsley was to undergo treatment today at the Canadiens, who lead the series 2-1 in games, worked out in a full-scale practice before boarding an afternoon plane for Boston.

If Worsley is unable to play Montreal coach Claude Ruel will look to Rogatien Vachon.

The Canadiens added four players from their Cleveland affiliate in the American Hockey League, eliminated from the Calder Cup playoffs.

The players called up to Montreal were netminder Tony Esposito, brother of high-scoring Phil Esposito of the Bruins, centre Gary Monahan, left-winger Bob Berry and defenceman Pierre Bouchard, son of Emile (Butch) Bouchard, a former Canadiens' defenceman.

Sunday's game, which gets under way at 2 p.m. EST, looms as a big one for both teams.

The Bruins are a tough team on home ice and got a big lift by winning Thursday's game after falling behind 2-0 in the series when they lost the first two games in overtime in Montreal.

Observers feel a victory for the Bruins Sunday would put pressure on the Canadiens going into the final game of the series Thursday in Montreal.

The Bruins last only three of 26 regular-season games in Boston this season. They also have three playoff victories on home ice this year—two against Toronto Maple Leafs and one against Montreal.

However, a Montreal victory would give the Canadiens a commanding 3-1 lead in the series and put all the pressure on the Bruins, giving the Boston team the tough task of winning the remaining three games to get a shot at the Stanley Cup against the Western Division finalists.

Sinden's Choice-Shack or Bailey

Injury Shelves Bruins' Cashman

BOSTON (CP) — Garnet Ralph, the 35-year-old they call Ace, was brought up to the Boston Bruins for one reason, but he may stick around for another.

Bailey was called in from Hershey of the American Hockey League as a possible replacement for ailing Johnny McKenzie.

However, McKenzie played well in Thursday night's 5-0 victory over Montreal Canadiens—a victory that gave Montreal a 2-1 judge in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup series.

So it appeared that Bailey was en route back to Hershey.

Then it was discovered that winger Wayne Cashman had broken bones in his right hand when he crashed into the boards while checking Jean Beliveau.

"If it had happened to my left hand I could play," Cashman said. "But this way I can't get off a shot."

Cashman, a right-hand shooter, took over on the Derek Sanderson-Ed Westfall line from Eddie Shack when coach Harry Sinden benched The Entertainer after the first two games of the semi-final.

Shack picked up a penalty in each game leading to a goal each time—and Boston lost each game by just that margin and in overtime.

The guessing in Boston is that Gump Worsley will be replaced in the Montreal nets by Rogatien Vachon when the series resumes here at 2 p.m. EST Sunday.

The Canadiens suffered their worst defeat in more than a year in the 5-0 Boston victory Thursday.

Worsley went back to Montreal with the team, the fingers of his left—or catching—hand taped.

Phil Esposito, whose 126 points on 49 goals and 77 assists this year was a regular season record, still has a little way to go before threatening the playoff record.

So far the sniffling centre, who claims he shoots better with a head cold, has 15 playoff points on eight goals and seven assists.

Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks holds the record—21 points on six goals and 15 assists—set in 1962. The 15 assists was in a record, but the record for the most goals in a playoff year is 12, held jointly by Maurice Richard and Beliveau.

Boston fans are waiting for super-sophomore Bobby Orr to find his stride in playoff competition.

While he has been outstanding in defence, Orr—who this year broke Flash Hollett's record for most goals by a defenceman during the regular season—hasn't scored any of the 42 Boston goals logged so far in 11 playoff games during the last two years.

Orr broke Hollett's 24-year-old record of 20 goals by one.

In four games last year, Orr got two assists; in the seven so far this year, he has picked up six assists.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Mickey Wright carved out a four-under-par 68 despite blustery winds and rain-soaked greens Friday for a two-stroke lead in the first round of the $17,500 Lady Carling open golf tournament. Miss Wright, who won her last title 19 months ago and then took a seven-month sabbatical, never missed a green until the 18th hole where she buried her second shot in a sand trap. A late starter, she took the lead away from Rosie Jensen and Kathy Whitworth, the winner of the last three tournament titles this year. They tied for second place with 70s. Sandra Post of Oakville shot 77.

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League announced Friday signing of two import linemen. Jim Urcsak, a 6-3, 245-pound graduate of Central Missouri State College, is expected to play offensive tackle and defensive end for the Ticats while Neal Petties, 6-2, 215-pounds, is expected to give all-star Tommy Joe Coffey a strong partner at offensive end.

Berenson Kings' Nemesis

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Los Angeles Kings are worried about a lack of muscle and Red Berenson.

Larry Regan, general-manager of the Kings down 2-0 to St. Louis Blues in the best-of-seven western finals for the Stanley Cup, said Friday:

"Over the last years, we've developed the reputation of being able to get pushed around by the other clubs.

"We may not deserve it, but it's sure true in this series.

"We knocked them out of the rink in Oakland, but against the Blues—nothing."

The Kings need victories tonight and Sunday in Los Angeles if they'll hope to stay around past the fifth game in St. Louis Tuesday. Regan believes they will.

The Blues finished first in the National Hockey League's West Division, the Kings were fourth.

"The Blues are well coached and use a good system, but I think we've got a better team," Regan said.

Regan also hinted that coach Red Kelly may put someone on Red Berenson fulltime to keep him off the scoresheet. Berenson was a one-man wrecking crew in the opening game, scoring three consecutive goals in the second period to take a playoff record as the Kings were shut out 4-0.

"You just can't let a player like Berenson roam around loose," said Regan. "He's just too dangerous."

Rookie goaltender Gerry Desjardins, who will probably start tonight, knows what it's like to face Berenson.

"All the time during the faceoff, he just kept staring at me as if he were saying: 'You're dead to get it'", Desjardins said.

Regan believes the change in the Kings' fortune started at 6:35 of the third period Thursday night when Ted Irvine took on defenceman Bob Plager in front of the penalty box.

"Irvine caught a couple of good punches, but he kept coming back," Regan said.

"After that, the whole club started to fight back."

Two minutes and three seconds after Irvine and Plager went off with fighting majors, Los Angeles tied the game 2-2, but Gerry Sabourin's second goal of the night with 3:28 remaining gave the Blues a 3-2 victory and a two-game cushion heading for the West coast.

Regan felt the Kings played well enough to win, but added that veteran Jacques Plante's "show boating" almost cost St. Louis the game.

Lynn Patrick, managing director of the Blues, agreed and coach Scotie Bowman may decide to use Glenn Hall in goal tonight instead of Plante.

Hall, winner of the Conn Smythe Trophy last year as the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup series, hasn't worked a game since the opener of the quarter-final series against Philadelphia Flyers which the Blues won four games straight.

He has been recovering from a pulled hamstring muscle and Bowman says the club's 10-day layoff after eliminating the Flyers gave Hall a chance to get back into shape.

Bird Hurlers Have Special Number for Senators-Zero

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore's pitching staff has Washington's number—and it's a great big zero.

Tom Phoebus fired a four-hit shutout as the Senators Friday night, blanking them 6-0 for the fourth straight shutout by Baltimore's staff against Washington this season.

Phoebus got plenty of support from the potent Baltimore attack which provided four home runs, two of them by Paul Blair. The Orioles have won seven of their last eight games and slammed 16 homers over that span.

In other American League action, Boston Red Sox belted Cleveland Indians 10-7 and Minnesota Twins took California Angels 6-0 on a two-hitter by rookie Tom Hall. Oakland's game at Kansas City and Seattle's game at Chicago were rained out.

In addition to Blair's two homers, Frank Robinson tagged his sixth of the season, extending his hitting streak to 11 games, and Elrod Hendricks added a two-run shot.

The Orioles, fresh from a three-game, 30-run, 48-hit romp in Boston, kept the pounding up against the Senators. Blair homered in the first inning and then hit another in the third in almost the identical spot. Hendricks fled a two-run shot against reliever Casey Cox and leads the American League with a .455 batting average. Robinson .418 average is third in the AL.

It was Phoebus' second shutout against the Senators. Baltimore hung three straight blankings on Washington last weekend.

Ken Harrelson socked two and Tony Conigliaro, Rico Petrocelli and Carl Yastrzemski all had one each as Boston unloaded on Luis Tiant, son of the Indians' pitching staff. Tiant, who absorbed his third defeat, was tagged for all five homers, five doubles and a single.

Petrocelli's homer was his third in three games and Yastrzemski's shot broke an 0-for-15 slump for the two-time batting champ.

Joes Cardenal and Ross Moschitto connected for the Indians, who lost their eighth game in nine starts.

Hall, a slender left-hander, pitched Minnesota to its fourth straight victory, netting the Angels down sadly. He allowed only a first-inning triple by Jim Fregosi and a single in the seventh by Lou Johnson.

The Twins used clutch singles for all their runs. Walks to Harmon Killebrew and Bob Allison and singles by Leo Cardenas and Frank Quilici produced two runs in the second. Killebrew, Tony Oliva, Allison and George Mitterwald had consecutive singles for two more runs in the sixth. Two singles by Killebrew and Oliva combined with a pair of errors and a wild pitch gave Minnesota two more in the eighth.

Friday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching—Tom Hall, Twins, fired a two-hitter for his first 1968 victory as Minnesota blanked California Angels 6-0.

Batting—Ken Harrelson, Red Sox, drove in three runs with a pair of homers, powering Boston to a 10-7 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Hornets Score Road Win Over Champions

VICTORIAVILLE, Que. (CP) — Galt Hornets scored two third-period goals Friday night to defeat Victoriaville Tigers 3-1 and take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Canada Allan Cup final series.

Howie Disotch scored two goals for the Hornets and Pete Panagabko one. The lone Victoriaville goal was given Michel Labossee on a power play in the second period.

The teams battled through a scoreless first period and were tied 1-1 going into the third period.

Disotch opened the scoring in the second period but Labrosse got that one back when he scored during a scramble in front of Galt goaltender Bost Hurley while John Nickerson was serving a minor penalty.

Disotch broke the tie with a hard 30-foot shot from the forward circle at 8:31 of the third period and Panagabko put the game out of reach in the last minute of play.

Victoriaville won the first game 3-2 in Galt but the Hornets took the second 2-1 in overtime.

Hurley and netminder Jean-Guy Morrissette of the Tigers turned in outstanding efforts. Hurley turned back 35 of 36 shots directed at him by the Tigers. Morrissette made 36 saves.

The game was a rough contest with four majors and a 10-minute misconduct handed out. Fourth game is scheduled for Sunday night in Victoriaville.

Galt coach Bill Willie said after the game the outstanding feature of the series so far has been the "goaltending from both sides."

Jean Guy Charbonneau, coach of the trailing Tigers, said Galt has "a big team, not the type you can play rough against — they're too strong to intimidate."

In More Ways Than One

A Memorable Night for Mays

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It started out as another memorable night for Willie Mays, but Frank Reberger and Al Santorini will never forget how it ended.

Mays set a National League record of 2,422 appearances as an outfielder when he trotted to centre for the start of Friday night's game between San Francisco Giants and San Diego Padres.

Two hours and 40 minutes later, San Diego's Reberger choked off a ninth inning rally, preserved Santorini's first major league pitching triumph and nailed a 3-1 victory over the Giants—by striking out Mays with the bases loaded.

The victory snapped a six-game losing streak for the NL expansion club, beaten four times by the Giants during its tailspin.

The bases also were bulging with two out in the ninth at Los Angeles, but Dooley Womack failed where Reberger had succeeded. The Houston reliever walked Bill Russell and Wes Parker, forcing home the tying and winning runs in a 5-4 Dodger victory.

The other games on the NL schedule—Pittsburgh at Philadelphia, New York at St. Louis and Atlanta at Cincinnati—were rained out.

Reberger, a rookie right-hander who had been ineffective in four earlier relief appearances with the Padres, came out of the bullpen with two on and one out in the ninth. He got pinch hitter Dave Marshall on a fly to centre, walked pinch-hitter Don Mason to fill the bases and then fired a third strike past Mays, wrapping up his first save.

Mays broke Max Carey's league mark of 2,421 games as an outfielder, set with Pittsburgh and Brooklyn from 1910 to 1926.

The Astros took a 4-2 lead into the ninth, but successive none-out doubles by Tom Haller and Bill Sudakis closed the gap before Womack, the fourth Houston pitcher in the inning, was brought in.

The move backfired when Russell and Parker drew the decisive walks from the former New York Yankees' bullpen specialist.

Tom Cavanagh Heads Hockey Minors

STAFF — Tom Cavanagh assumed the Presidency of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association for the coming season at Thursday night's annual general meeting and to the president - elect and the executive comes a deficit of over $2,000 which has been carried over from last year.

A sparse crowd of 16 persons was on hand to move five amendments to the constitution of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association at the meeting which was held at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street.

The small turnout was attributed to poor weather and a conflict in time with the Boston - Montreal Stanley Cup playoff game.

The deficit carry - over of $2611.85, an increase of over $2,100 from the previous year's deficit carry - over of $433.68, was attributed to expansion of the Minor Hockey Association and the purchase of a large amount of new equipment to replace worn - out equipment.

The motion hopes to stagger on the tion hopes to stagger out the purchase of new equipment on a more even yearly basis in the future to avoid the situation which arose last year.

No-hitter Merits Raise

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos tore-up Bill Stoneman's contract Friday and gave him a new one with a $2,000 increase as a reward for his 7-0 no-hitter against Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

It was the first time that Stoneman, who turned 25 April 7, pitched a complete nine-inning game in the majors.

His achievement also marked the first time an expansion pitcher hurled a no-hitter in his team's initial season.

The Expos also announced Friday that first baseman Bob Bailey has been placed on the 21-day disabled list.

WHAT YOU CAN'T SEE...
MAKES THE DIFFERENCE
What you can't see from the outside of a Beaver Farm Building is the engineering detail that makes a world of difference; all structurally graded lumber is specified to withstand the snow load of the area. All lumber in contact with moisture is pressure treated; all wood trusses are professionally engineered with design loads tabulated; all hardware is galvanized; and all buildings are checked by a professional engineer to ensure safety. You can't see this from the outside but you'll appreciate the engineering and planning for a good many years.

Bruins' Cup Chase Tops Bostonians' Priority List

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The century-old Saturday night ritual of the average Bostonese is beans, brown bread and hate.

This weekend — and perhaps the next, they've added another item, holding the three B's are the Bruins. With the latter given priority.

The hockey hidalgos of the Hub, in the biggest emotional upset since the famous Kraut Line cole-slawed all National Hockey League opposition way back then, cloud-hopped from zero to eleven after Thursday night's striped-kitty whitewash of the arch enemy from Drapesville.

Why they've even forgiven the Bruins Tumble-Down Shack for allegedly allowing or assisting to allow, two important goals in that pair of slip-and-lock defeats in the opening duo of duels.

On the other hand they tonsilled a near-ocean of suds hailing their heroes Cheevers, Espoglio, Hodge, Green and company after the best team display seen in Boston since that company of thinsiemen dumped the British tea cargo in the local Bay of Quinte.

There was gloom in Benny's hideway

As they watched young Jerry Cheevers,

And many tears fell in the beers

Of O'Reilly, O'Mahoneys and O'Peavers

And a smile lit up O'Meara's face

Like the sunrise o'er Killarney,

Said he, with glee, tis time that we

Had a chance to shoot the blarney.

"We're one game down and three to go

With the Cup still up for grabs,

And lagging home the silverware

Will be Bruins - not the Habs"

Then up spake brave Mahoney

As his cohorts gave a yell,

"Your chances are, to win the cup,

Like a snowball has in-well!"

Alas, alack the plans of men,

Quite often go askew

'Twould funny be, if the gods decree

The Cup to old St. Loo.

That perhaps is stretching it a bit too far but then who gave David odds when he shot-putted Goliath out of action in the first round.

Montreal Teachers Accept Old Contract

MONTREAL (CP) — A contract that expired in 1966 is to be used as a basis for working conditions through 1971 by Montreal's English-speaking Roman Catholic teachers, spokesmen said Friday.

Robert Dobie, director of member welfare for the Montreal group, representing the bulk of the 2,500-member provincial Association of Catholic Teachers, said:

"We cannot continue like this any longer. We will just have to wait until 1971."

Quebec's 70,000 teachers have been without a contract since June, 1966. But that one had been extended, following a teachers' strike, from 1966.

Negotiations that started 29 months ago broke off at the mediation level in March.

Kevin Quinn, president of the Montreal group, said the plan to accept the former contract virtually eliminates any possibility of a strike.

Members earlier had voted to participate in a one-day strike with the 6,000-member provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

Randall Says 'Grab' Forbidden

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario minister of trade and development, Friday denied allegations made in the Quebec legislature that Ontario practices a kind of "industrial terrorism" to entice industry away from Quebec.

On the contrary, Mr. Randall said in an interview, all provincial employees have been warned to do nothing to induce any business to move from Quebec because of an unsettled political situation there.

And industrial commissioners have been warned that the benefits of Ontario's sophisticated industrial . . . opportunities program will not be available to any industry locating in this province if there is evidence of an inducement to leave Quebec, he added.

Robert Bourassa, Liberal party financial critic, told the Quebec national assembly Thursday he understands the Ontario government engages in "industrial terrorism."

He said industry is being scared away from Quebec by Ontario residents' public talk of the political and social climate in Quebec and recent bombing incidents there.

Quebec Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry said it has been established that some industrial agents of municipalities situated near the provincial border have been using similar methods, but there is no evidence of a provincial policy of inducement.

Mr. Randall said Mr. Bourassa "should get his facts straight" by conferring with Quebec industrialists.

Mr. Randall said he will meet Mr. Beaudry in mid-April to discuss "problems of mutual interest."

Arms Trade In Billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon disclosed for the first time Friday that the United States is capable of "reading" radar pictures of another country from miles away.

The chief executive gave the word in affirming that the Navy EC-121 electronics plane shot down by North Korea never came closer than 40 miles to its coast during its surveillance mission.

Nixon said the North Koreans knew this despite their claim that the unarmed propeller plane violated their air space.

"We know what their radar showed," Nixon told a news conference.

"We, incidentally, know what the Russian radar showed."

Both Korean and Soviet radars—as well as a U.S. radar watching from some location he did not disclose—all showed the same thing, Nixon said—that the plane was 80 miles out in the Sea of Japan when attacked.

The Pentagon withheld details, but an officer acknowledged: "We have a system for reading their radars. It has never been announced before. Obviously we cannot say how it works."

No Quick Move To Prevent TCA Strike Planned

MONTREAL (CP) — Both Prime Minister Trudeau and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Friday there will be no immediate government intervention to try to avert a threatened strike against Air Canada at 11:59 p.m. Sunday.

Mr. Macasey denied that his return to Montreal from a vacation in Spain two days earlier than expected had anything to do with possible action on his part.

In a brief statement here, Mr. Mackasey said the dispute between the airline and the International Association of Machinists does not warrant "any intervention on my part immediately."

The minister said neither side had asked for his assistance.

"I'm sure they'll work out their own problems."

In the House of Commons, Mr. Trudeau said the government is taking a "completely neutral position" in the dispute.

If it is to be solved, it would be through direct negotiations between Air Canada and the union.

The talks began on a direct basis when both parties waived conciliation, but when no agreement was reached a federal government representative was appointed April 9.

William Kelly, head of the labor department's conciliation and arbitration branch, met with both sides April 10 but achieved nothing over a five-day period. Talks broke down Tuesday.

The 6,300 Air Canada members of the union are voting on the latest offer by Air Canada of a 23 per-cent increase in wages over three years.

The union has asked for a 40 per-cent increase in one year.

The result of the vote is expected at about 7 p.m. tonight.

The union demand would bring Canadian wages up to the level of those for association members in the United States.

Minimum wage under the contract which expired Dec. 31 was $2 an hour, with a maximum of $3.97 an hour.

Air Canada was taking all necessary steps for a possible strike, which an airline spokesman said would cost the airline a total of 18,000 passengers a day.

Passenger traffic was to continue until 2 p.m. Sunday, but the shutdown process was to start at noon today.

An embargo went into effect at noon Friday on all commodity shipments. Live or perishable shipments were halted Thursday night.

Church Union Plan Sent Back for Study

HALIFAX (CP) — A proposed structure and constitution of a single church amalgamating the Canadian Anglican and United Churches was sent back to committee for further study Friday by the General Commission on Union.

Commissioners withheld approval in principle of the constitutional committee's report and asked for more study on the functions of the bishop and the diocese in relation to local churches.

The constitutional committee had suggested that a unified church be organized as a general assembly broken down into regional conferences, dioceses and pastoral zones.

It was the pastoral zone concept in particular that led the 50-member general commission to defer approval of the report.

Anglican Bishop H. R. Hunt of Toronto, committee chairman who presented the constitution report, said the pastoral zone meant a number of congregations grouped together to share various ministers on a team basis.

He said the ministry might then be more specialized—with all clergymen sharing in sacramental work, but each engaged in specific aspects of ministerial endeavor.

Representatives debated more than three hours on a special committee report on the church in the world before giving approval.

The report, calls for both churches to consider immediately investigations of the problems of "exploited minorities" in Canada.

Canadian Markets Are Erratic But Display Lively Vitality

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

While moving erratically, Canadian stock markets showed a great deal of vitality in the face of discouraging investor atmosphere this week and continued to outpace their United States counterparts.

Trading held at a moderate pace throughout the week.

Although climbing Canadian and U.S. interest rates, tighter money and the tense world political situation have taken the shine off Canadian stock markets, investor optimism still shows through.

Industrials managed to edge up toward their historical high as they posted their fifth consecutive weekly advance.

After starting the week with fractional gains, the group posted small losses Wednesday and Thursday.

However, a strong showing Friday moved the group up.

The industrial group has almost recuperated from a four-week slump that began Feb. 17, the very day it touched its all-time high.

Merchandisers were strong this week with gains Tuesday and Friday erasing losses on other days.

The group has been declining steadily since the beginning of this year despite the buoyant outlook for retail sales.

Retail sales in January were up nine per cent over the corresponding 1968 period and are expected to hold that edge throughout 1969.

But generalized pricing has sliced profit margins, which in turn have depressed earnings.

However, the group's index is selling at 12 times the latest 12-month earnings compared with about 19 per cent as March 31, 1968.

At its peak in July, it was selling as high as 23 times earnings.

Canadian conglomerates continued to slide this week as U.S. conglomerates came under further pressure.

The U.S. Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against Ling-Temco-Vought, one of the larger U.S. conglomerates, seeking to force the company to divest itself of its stock holdings of Jones and Laughlin Steel

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — All classes and grades of cattle and calves at Toronto's two major livestock auctions declined sharply this week.

Veal calves were steady on choice grades and barely steady to easier on medium and good grades. Hogs were steady. Lambs higher.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

When people hear of "fracture of the spine? the usual reaction is that one was involved in some sort of accident. But medical, as well as accidental causes are now being recognized. Sometimes the patient doesn't even suspect he has a fractured vertebra. This is so quite frequently lately in patients who suffer from an arthritic condition called osteoporosis.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For years I have been commiserating with my wife who has had osteoporosis.

Then, at 65, having pain in my spine, I went to a radiologist for a roentgenologic survey. Guess what? I'm the one who now needs commiseration. He found that I not only have osteoporosis, but a fracture of my seventh thoracic vertebra. My doctor has me on the usual treatment with hormones, vitamins, high protein diet with calcium supplements. He plans fluorides, too. But because of my pain he has suggested that I get complete rest in bed for two to three weeks. Then I'm going to have a brace. Is there anything else you can suggest? — Mr. G.

Comment: I think most doctors will agree that you have had — and are having — about everything known to be helpful for osteoporosis. Although rest in bed is quite hopeful of the beneficial effects of fluorides in strengthening bone, it is still in the experimental stage. Prolonged bed rest in itself sometimes further intensifies demineralization of bone, but with a fracture complication such immobilization is often necessary.

Be thankful you have the diagnosis; Mr. O. Many who treat themselves are unaware they have osteoporosis.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What is the most common ailment for a woman of 35 who has smoked all her life? — Mrs. D.

Comment: This is almost like playing charades. But I'll get into the spirit of it. For number one I nominate emphysema. Chronic bronchitis is also a probability. There is also the possibility of beginning heart failure. And last but not least, cancer of the lung.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: If a patient is on digitalis for the heart can it affect her eyes? — Mrs. Y.

Comment: Some patients occasionally complain of yellow vision. This is temporary and disappears after adjustment of dosage.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My mother has a fast, irregular pulse. The heart specialist occasionally gives her an electric shock to her chest. Is this something new? — Mrs. c.

Comment: It has been used on occasion during the past few years to supplement drugs like digitalis, quinidine, etc., in the control of such heart irregularity as auricular fibrillation.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: After five years of smoking a pack a day a person quits. What damage has been done? Will it go away? — Mr. S.

Comment: Much depends upon individual reaction and smoking habits. Did you inhale? Did you smoke them right down to the end? Did you smoke fast or slow? You may or may not have some bronchitis or emphysema. But whatever your condition you can depend upon it that it will improve after you quit. There is always hope for betterment after you stop smoking.

NOTICE

CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SIDNEY

BY-LAW NUMBER 1646

A BY-LAW TO prohibit and regulate the sale and use of fireworks.

WHEREAS pursuant to the provisions of Sec. 379 (1) S.S. 26 and (2) of The Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1960 and amendments thereto the council may pass by-laws for the sale and use of fireworks within the Township of Sidney.

AND WHEREAS it is deemed expedient that a by-law be passed for the sale and use of fireworks within the Township of Sidney.

THEREFORE the council of the municipal council of the corporation of the township of sidney enacts as follows:

1. THAT no person shall sell or offer for sale any fireworks or combustible or explosive or any combination or any contraindications of substances, or any substance or thing intended for the purpose of producing a visible effect by combustion, explosion, deflagration or detonation, and shall include blank cartridges, toy pistols, toy canes, toy guns in which explosives are used, fire balloons, sky-rockets, Roman Candles and any fireworks containing explosives or flammable compound, or any blasting caps or detonators or any other explosive substance, except that the term fireworks shall not include any device, mixture, substance or thing in such form or packed in such manner or in such limited quantity that no danger of explosion or injury to person or property will result from the use thereof, or any toy pistol, toy cane and other devices for the use of which only paper caps are used which shall be permitted at all times, and any fireworks which may be used without any danger to person or property from explosion or fire.

2. THAT this by-law shall be deemed to mean and include persons, firms or corporations.

3. THAT no person shall display, offer for sale, sell, use or explode any fireworks within the limits of the Township of Sidney except fireworks displays by the Sidney Lions Club Kinsmen Day on the Kinsey Day Celebrations, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labour Day, Thanksgiving Day, July first on Dominion Day and December 31st.

4. THAT any person who contravenes any provision of this by-law is guilty of an offence and on conviction of the Township of Sidney may grant a license for the display of fireworks by a person, firm or corporation having regard to the safety and circumstances of the display. Any licensee may revoke any such permit at any time.

5. THAT every person who contravenes any provision of this by-law is guilty of an offence and on conviction is liable to a fine not exceeding $300.00 and costs or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to both fine and imprisonment.

6. THIS BY-LAW shall come into force and take effect from the date of the final passing thereof.

READ A FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD TIME, finally passed this fourteenth day of April, 1968.

Diefenbaker and Lewis Duel On Homosexuals and Abortion

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker and David Lewis, the deputy NDP leader, two of the most able debaters in the Commons, crossed swords Friday as debate on the report stage of amendments to the Criminal Code continued through its third day.

Mr. Diefenbaker made an eloquent plea to the government not to insist on clauses of the bill permitting consenting adults to perform homosexual acts in private or to allow abortion where the health of the prospective mother is endangered.

"The result can only be that young Canadians will say the Parliament of Canada approves of these two acts, homosexuality and abortion," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

"The government is attempting to give a freedom which will do nothing to elevate Canada or Canadians," he argued.

Mr. Lewis replied that Mr. Diefenbaker's remarks "are a complete contradiction and negation of the great work he has done in the field of civil liberty and individual rights."

Mr. Lewis said the philosophy underlying Mr. Diefenbaker's speech "is simply out of date."

"It simply has no relevance to modern society."

It was "simply, utterly and completely wrong" for the former Conservative leader to say that Parliament, in passing the bill, "will say to the young people of Canada . . . these things are right."

The Commons has made little headway in three days of debating the report stage—the step before third and final reading—of the 125-clause bill. The legislation proposes changes in laws on lotteries and drinking drivers, as well as on abortion and homosexual acts.

Opposition MPs moved 49 amendments in committee—the stage immediately after second reading—and while these have been grouped under four headings, only two of the amendments have been debated so far.

Creditiste MPs, aroused by the homosexuality clauses, have dug in for a long debate. They knocked out possible agreement Wednesday to end the debate in five days and refused Friday the unanimous consent needed to spend an extra hour to end the first stage of the debate.

The debate continues Monday.

Mr. Lewis said all that the proposed clauses on homosexuality do is exclude from prosecution two consenting adults engaging in private acts.

Rene Matte (Creditiste — Champlain) noted that the intent of the legislation seems to deal with mentally-sick persons.

"A kleptomaniac is a sick person," he said. Why not issue them cards saying so "and then anyone over 21 will carry a card permitting him to conduct hold-ups."

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) said the bill is criminal, stupid and socialistic. It was another blow at the Canadian family.

Both Conservatives and Creditistes also hammered at the government for a clarifying phrase in the clause dealing with consenting acts done in private.

They said the wording leaves it open for such acts to include bestiality. An interpretation denied by Justice Minister John Turner.

The clause referred to humans only and no interpretation "no matter how liberal" could read bestiality into it.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For April 19

Your birthday today: Action is the dominant pattern for the coming year. Your moves have to be all thought through before you make them. It will be necessary to involve a great many other people, and part of your job is distributing the task. Today's natives are usually noted for creative endeavors.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Ap. 19): Put on your best smiles this Saturday. Take the initiative, but within the limits of local customs. Have eye contacts in the afternoon, evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Today you are better able to organize your energies. Start a fresh line of action as calmly as tensions around you will permit. Let it be mostly your own doing rather than a group action.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The temptation is to play both ends against the middle — impatience and criticism pop out so sharply and so freely that you risk a quarrel over even a brief comment. Self-discipline!

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Every door is ajar Sunday you will be proud of how gently you led your loved ones through all the stress. It is better not to include extra people, outsiders in your group.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Home and family arrangements are subject to confusion. Keep quiet and wait for things to settle as the day wears on. Much depends on your perspective.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The day begins well but runs into dissent. Use great care and patience with loved ones. Outside activities are just as well left off today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your best area of self-expression is your home and family. Mechanical equipment, telephones tend to balk. Relatives, strangers, casual acquaintances all are contrary (for no apparent reason).

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Wait until you understand fully what is bothering other people before taking sides or a position on any issues. Check your information since some of it is probably incorrect. Let meditation help you find the key to preserving your health against nerves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This is the final round-up of recent tensions.— a little patience accompanied by physical activity to work out the overload — and you are over the hump.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Let other people risk sharp tempers best times you have done the minimum of your share, settle for home and fireside comforts nothing. Look through your souvenirs of earlier times, and reflect on how far you have come.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Discussions get far beyond the intended subjects all too easily. Avoid personalities and controversy, and you will be satisfied with yourself later.

PISCES (Feb. 19 —Mar. 20): Although it is the weekend, your formal or business concerns become crucial. Skip no chance of keeping them open and operating. Your home is like the place to entertain at this time. Find neutral ground.

For April 21

Your birthday today: Your path through the year ahead will encounter countless decisions. Speculation becomes extremely risky; gambling is undesirable. Family affairs, romantic interests seem, paradoxically, to thrive. Today's natives are serious-minded, pleasant. They will not involve themselves in petty quibbling.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Use your ingenuity. Creative upset plans into fresh opportunities. Much can be done on the spur of the moment where you are.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Today is one of those subtle turning points: your sense of what is important is shifting. Newer things take on added importance.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The temptation is to buy your way out of the tensions or to distract yourself by shopping. Neither has the desired results. Romantic contacts are thwarted by odd circumstances — wait for another day.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): The day begins unsettled. but persistent effort finally opens up the situation. Personal plans are more readily promoted in the evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): New acquaintances provide interesting possibilities. Children and their adventures can leave you baffled. This time you must figure it out yourself, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Everything seems much better for you today, so settle the leftovers of the last three days. Your money spends wings if you open your wallet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Keep your ears (and eyes) open for information you will need later. If you will omit any secrecy, this is a good day for dealing with any problems of mate. Business matters in the later hours become usually upset. Meditation, study, or serious music this evening would be helpful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): New partnership arrangements are appropriate now, but do not put up the capital or materials. Your mate has some fresh tricks some of them enjoyable, all surprising.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Insist on a prosperous employer. Take the day off and make the rounds looking for different ideas, new angles. Romantic interests stronger in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Conservative approaches will get you further ahead today. The situation of parents comes to your serious attention. Bear with interruptions as the people who have a hand in your schedules cannot help it. At home this evening, see what the state of affairs may be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Do what you can to ease conflicts between friends and relatives. Offer your own apologies. It can even be fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Creative activity is ready to bubble up at any encouragement. Young people provide a little surprise and special interest. Romance beckons from nearby!

Bishops Oppose Abortion

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's Roman Catholic bishops reiterated Friday their opposition to a bill now before Parliament that would legalize therapeutic abortions.

If it becomes law, it should respect the freedom of conscience of doctors unwilling to perform abortions, the bishops said in a resolution passed unanimously at the end of their semi-annual meeting here.

The resolution said the bill should at least be amended to prevent harm against doctors who refuse, for reasons of conscience, to perform abortions.

The government proposes to permit an abortion if a select hospital committee, composed of at least three doctors, decides that it is necessary to the life or health of the mother. This provision is contained in a general Criminal Code reform bill that missed more than a year ago, that has finally reached the floor of the House of Commons.

The Roman Catholic Church teaches that life begins at conception and abortion therefore means putting an end to a human life.

Most Rev. Alexander Carter, Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and president of the national bishops' conference, told a news conference:

"We are concerned that if abortions become legal, Catholic hospital authorities or doctors might become liable to lawsuits in certain circumstances if they refuse to perform abortions."

The government bill "protects those who will, but not those who won't," said Most Rev. Joseph-Aurele Plourde, Archbishop of Ottawa.

Husak Vote Strong

PRAGUE (AP) — Gustav Husak, Czechoslovakia's new Communist party chief, has declared political war on those who do not toe the Kremlin line but Informants said today that Husak has made some concessions to get the support of liberals in government.

One source said Husak got all but five votes of the 180-member Central Committee, which ousted reformist party chief Alexander Dubcek in a secret ballot Thursday.

Informants cited two reasons for his strong showing:

—Husak assured Dubcek supporters he would not, for now, accept the Soviet invasion as justified.

—He assured reformers that political arrests will not be made for any "violations" committed prior to his assumption of power.

Despite these concessions, few doubted that Czechoslovakia is in for a more authoritarian brand of communism under the 55-year-old Slovak. The news agency CTK today circulated Husak's first major foreign policy address, made at the Thursday-Friday Central Committee session, in which he promised to "take up the glove" against rightists and anti-Soviet elements.

"We shall not back down," said Husak. . . . We shall not call it child's play, but a struggle, and I am absolutely sure of political victory. Anti-Sovietism is incompatible with the ideology of this party. It is in sharp contradiction to the state policy of this state."

He repeated criticism that the Dubcek regime had allowed "anti-Communist" elements to plunge Czechoslovakia into a crisis.

"Where can it lead if our Central Committee and central organs do not intervene?" he asked. "To what aim? To civil war?

"Should we wait until some body provokes the Soviet troops on our territory into taking some action in their defence?"

Husak said the March 28-29 anti-Soviet demonstrations in Prague included "acts that were precisely counter-revolutionary."

These demonstrations broke out after Czechoslovakia had beaten the Soviet Union in the world hockey championships in Stockholm and they precipitated the crisis that increased the pressure from Moscow and led to Dubcek's ouster.

Dubcek was demoted to president of the parliament, a largely ceremonial job since parliament merely rubber-stamps Communist party decisions.

Husak said his "organized political struggle" against anti-Communist forces within and outside the party would go "so far as allowed by law."

To fulfil its tasks, Husak said the party must re-establish its "essential influence in television, radio and the press" in Czechoslovakia. He denounced "rightist streams which hide behind patriotism and by all legal means spread anti-Sovietism, including hatred."

Husak also condemned independent tendencies in the Czechoslovak labor unions and the network of alliances between workers and students.

Rapport Is Won At Parley

TOKYO (Reuters) — Canadian and Japanese ministers ended their fifth round of top-level discussions with agreement to keep in close touch on important issues.

Japanese Foreign Minister Kiichi Aichi told a news conference that he felt he could call up External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp to discuss important problems.

Sharp nodded vigorously in smiling approval of Aichi's remark.

The meeting was attended by five ministers from each country.

Sharp said 60 to 75 per cent of the meeting was devoted to Canadian explanations of its efforts to establish diplomatic relations with mainland China.

A six-page joint communique issued by the two sides mentioned China only once, it said: "The ministers reviewed the general international situation with emphasis on the situation in Asia, including China and Vietnam."

'Walk' to Assist Indians Blocked

OSHAWA (CP) — An Indian chief Friday accused an organizer for a Miles-for-Millions marathon walk of blocking a planned student walk in aid of Indians and Eskimos.

Chief Wilmer Nadjwin said the organizer, Ray Gosling, urged R. S. McLaughlin high school students to cancel their April 26 walk because it was scheduled only one week ahead of the Miles-for-Millions walk.

Chief Nadjwin is head of the Cape Croker band near Owen Sound.

Miles-for-Millions promotes marathon walks mainly for foreign aid, with Oxfam of Canada, UNICEF and the Canadian Save the Children Fund participating.

Nixon Says Plane Loss Unlike Pueblo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says the shooting down of a U.S. reconnaissance plane this week "was a completely surprise attack" involving a different crisis than that faced by President Lyndon Johnson when the U.S. spy ship Pueblo was seized.

Hazards perhaps by a campaign taunt last year in which he referred to North Korea as "a fourth-rate military power," Nixon drew some distinctions Friday between the two incidents.

In his campaign for president, Nixon promised he would not allow the U.S. to suffer another dilemma such as the Jan. 23, 1968, capture of the Pueblo by North Korean patrol boats.

Faced with the downing of the navy intelligence plane this week, Nixon has chosen—as did Johnson—to follow a course of diplomacy rather than retaliation.

But, Nixon told a White House news conference, the two incidents are not parallel.

He said the Pueblo was threatened in advance. Had there been a similar threat against reconnaissance flights over the Sea of Japan, Nixon said, he would have ordered protective action.

The Pueblo seizure, Nixon said, "was quite different in two respects.

"One, there was some uncertainty for some time as to where the Pueblo was. Present indications are that the Pueblo was in international waters. But there was some uncertainty."

Nixon said there was never any doubt as to the location of the plane—at least 26 miles outside Korean airspace at its closest approach to North Korea.

"Also," he said, "in the case of the Pueblo, the North Koreans had warned and threatened the Pueblo for a period of weeks before they seized it."

He said flights such as the one the North Koreans shot down have been going on for years without incident.

"Under these circumstances, it was a completely surprise attack . . . and therefore did not give us the opportunity for protective action that I would have taken had it been threatened," said Nixon.

U.S. Can Read Enemy's Radar

OTTAWA (CP) — The arms traffic between Canada and the United States under the 1959 defence production-sharing agreement has reached approximately $4,000,000,000, informed sources said Friday.

For the first time since the big arms trade began a decade ago, authorities refused to make public official figures.

One said the reason for keeping the figures secret at this time is that the subject is too sensitive because of the Commons debate next week on Canadian foreign and defence policy. Most Canadian armaments sold to the U.S. are used by the Americans in Vietnam.

In the first nine years of the production-sharing agreement, from 1959 to 1967 inclusive, Canada sold the U.S. $1,798,300,000 worth of arms, mainly aircraft, electronic equipment and explosives. In the same period, Canada bought $1,808,000,000 worth of armaments from the U.S.

Officials declined to reveal the 1968 figures but informants said they were about $300,000,000 each way.

Two Papers Are Suspended

SAIGON (Reuters) — The South Vietnamese information ministry today suspended two Chinese-language papers for an indefinite period, one for reporting the Communist party congress in Peking and one for alleged obscenity.

A ministry spokesman said the daily Tan Quoc Te (International News) printed an article on Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung March 23 and carried a report April 8 on the ninth congress of the Chinese Communist party. The ministry said this was virtual publicity to Communist propaganda.

Flood Threat Eases

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Souris River in western Manitoba recorded a drop of about one-tenth of a foot in 24 hours Sunday, easing the province's tense flood situation.

The town of Melita, 90 miles southwest of Brandon has several feet of water over its low-lying areas and high water is not expected to recede for several weeks.

Residents of the community of 1,100 will still have to contend with a second crest of the Souris which is currently causing heavy damage in Minot, N.D.

The Souris rises in Saskatchewan and loops through North Dakota before flowing northward into Manitoba.

Flood forecasters in Winnipeg said Sunday night that the Red River is rising along its course toward Winnipeg. However, crest predictions were revised downward six inches to a foot this weekend.

(By The Associated Press)

Swollen rivers, swollen by heavy rains, posed new threats to New England dike U.S. South today.

In northern New England, some rivers began rising above flood stage during the weekend after a heavy rainfall.

In the south, flooding was predicted today along the Savannah River at Augusta, Ga.

The situation was generally under control along the Mississippi, which began its rampage last week.

Hospital Gets Its 'Exercise'

TORONTO (CP) — Queensway General Hospital had planned a simulated disaster exercise to see how the staff would respond.

"We were discussing it on Friday," said Kenneth Box, hospital administrator. "We planned to hold it three weeks from now. The disaster was going to be a train wreck."

Sunday night he had trouble believing the news when told that a passenger train had been derailed in northwestern Metropolitan Toronto, that two persons had been killed and that many injured were being brought to the hospital.

Extra nurses were called into the emergency ward from other parts of the hospital to handle the 15 injured, but they found no extra doctors were needed.

(Box was formerly administrator at Belleville General Hospital).

Girl, Fireman Die at Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A teen-age girl and a fireman died Sunday when Canadian National Railways' Train No. 151 skewed off the rails near Toronto International Airport in what a CN spokesman termed "foul play by person or persons unknown."

The express, carrying 250 passengers from Toronto to Sarnia, Ont., smashed into a line of stationary tank-cars in a siding after hitting an open switch at 60 miles an hour at 5:40 p.m.

Fireman Charles Baker of Sarnia was trapped under two feet of mud when one of the two diesel units flipped on its side and settled in marshy ground just south of Woodbine race-track in northwest Toronto.

The dead girl, identified as Gladys Brennan,"18, of Barkers Point, N.B., was crushed in the vestibule between two cars. Rescuers had to hook a diesel onto the wrecked cars to separate them and free her body.

About 30 persons were injured, none seriously.

John Noel, public relations manager for the railway, said the train was derailed after someone tampered with switches.

He said investigators found hacksaw marks on a padlock holding the switch. It had been sawn through and the switch was deliberately opened, sending the train into the siding."

Mr. Noel said the engineer could have had no idea anything was amiss until he could actually see the open rails.

"Our switches have targets which point in the direction for which the switch is lined. In this instance, the target showed the siding was closed and the mainline was open."

He said whoever tampered with the switch cut the padlock, then reached down into the rails themselves to move the switch bar and cause the rails to move without moving the target.

He said the switches are checked at least once daily.

CNR officials brought in two wrecking cranes and said it hoped the line will be clear today.

The train, known as the Tempo, was westbound on the 5:10 p.m. to 9:15 p.m., 174-mile run that includes stops at Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford, London and Sarnia.

CNR officials organized a special train to transport the injured. Most were released from three Toronto hospitals after treatment for minor injuries and shock.

The body of fireman Charles Baker was removed from the wrecked diesel at 11:15 p.m., after firemen used cutting torches to get to him.

Bruce Strand, 33, a night security patrol officer at a nearby factory, said: "It could all have been so much worse."

Nixon Planning Retaliatory Action If More Ships or Planes Attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration considered attacking a North Korean target in retaliation for the downing of a U.S. reconnaissance plane, a member of Congress said Sunday.

Representative Dan Kuykendall, a Republican from Tennessee, said the idea was abandoned when no suitable target could be found.

"There may have been other reasons, too," he added in an interview.

On Saturday, responsible sources in Congress said President Nixon will order drastic retaliation, without warning, for any future attack on U.S. intelligence planes or ships.

These sources said Nixon made this statement in reviewing with congressional leaders the reasons he feels it necessary to continue flights of electronic monitoring planes such as the one shot down by North Korea last Tuesday over the Sea of Japan.

Nixon announced Friday that the surveillance flights will go on, with protection provided.

In outlining reasons for the surveillance, Nixon told the Congress leaders information on the movements of Communist Chinese planes are important in assessing Chinese-Soviet relations and possible aggressive intentions of the Chinese, the sources said.

On Friday, Nixon had said the intelligence flights are necessary to detect any threat against South Korea, where the United States has 56,000 troops. But it seems probable that more is involved than checking on North Korean troops movements.

Asked at the White House about the informed sources' reports on Nixon's retaliation plans, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said:

"I know of no such discussion. I have no information on it."

Kuykendall said Sunday that his information about Nixon's search for a target for retaliation came from sources he could not reveal.

He said the targets considered included the airfield from which the North Korean MiGs took off to attack the U.S. plane, and North Korean ships.

U.S. Warships Approach Korea

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. carrier Hornet and 10 other American warships sailed into the Sea of Japan today, apparently to join in protecting U.S. spy flights off North Korea.

The Japanese Maritime Agency said that between 2 a.m. and 8 a.m., the 23,000-ton Hornet, an escort of five destroyers and five other warships passed through the Tsushima Strait between Japan and South Korea.

U.S. officials would not comment. They said warship movements are classified.

The arrival of the Hornet indicated that the reconnaissance flights off North Korea, which President Nixon has ordered continued, will be covered by carrier planes.

Japan's Kyodo news service said the U.S. government had informed the Japanese government that the escorts would not come from bases in Japan.

The spy flights were suspended after North Korea shot down a U.S. Navy reconnaissance plane with 31 Americans and special electronic equipment aboard April 14.

North Korea said the plane invade its air space but the United States insisted it had stayed far out over international waters.

Ben-Gurion Urges Giving Up Conquest

ROME (AP) — David Ben-Gurion, 82-year-old former prime minister of Israel, said Saturday that to secure peace in the Middle East, it would be worthwhile to give Arabs back all the land captured from them, except Jerusalem.

"Something must be done quickly," said Ben-Gurion in an interview taped in Israel and shown on Italian television. "We may be on the brink of a terrible new war."

"It is still possible for Arabs and Jews to go back and live together on the same land, as in the time when we were all sons of Abraham."

All Air Canada Flights Halted

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of the federal department of labor met separately with union leaders and Air Canada officials early today in a bid to bring both sides together in the dispute which grounded the airline at 11:59 p.m. EST Sunday.

Late Sunday, union negotiators were considering a request by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey that formal negotiating sessions be resumed.

Air Canada officials, asked by Mr. Mackasey to stand by, waited in a separate room.

Air Canada has said it is up to the union to resume talks because "they're the ones who broke off negotiations" last Tuesday.

All Air Canada flights were grounded for the second time in the company's 31-year history when 6,300 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers walked off their jobs to back up job demands.

Union negotiators flew into Montreal from across Canada Sunday, the last one arriving from Vancouver only 29 minutes before the strike began.

Mr. Mackasey cut short a vacation in Spain to return to his Montreal home Friday. He was not available for comment Sunday night.

Armed Students End 36-hour Siege

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Armed Negro students wearing bandoliers of ammunition led a march from a Cornell University building after a signed agreement with school officials ended a 36-hour siege.

The evacuation followed day-long talks Sunday between Cornell administrators and leaders of the campus Afro-American Society, during which the school agreed to take no action against the students involved.

The occupied building, Willard Straight Hall, was entered at 6 a.m. Saturday by about 100 Negro students.

The hall houses the Cornell Student Union, but was being used as a weekend guest house for 30 adults attending the annual Parents Weekend. The invading students ousted the parents and 40 maintenance workers.

White students, led by some university athletes, attempted to evict the occupying group Saturday night but were beaten back in a fist-swinging melee.

The Negro leaders said the guns were brought into the building later for self-defence. Ithaca city police said the weapons were not loaded and therefore no city law was violated.

The agreement calls for 36-hour protection of the society headquarters and of Wari House, a co-operative residence for Negro women which was the scene of a cross burning early Friday.

The university also agreed to assume responsibility for any damage to the Student Union. School officials described the damage as minor.

It's Official : Bay Now Open

Commercial navigation into Belleville harbor officially opened shortly after noon weekend With the arrival of the Bay Transport, an oil-carrier from Montreal.

The boat arrived Saturday and left early Sunday morning.

Harbor Master Donald Barrett presented the traditional tag line to the ship's captain as the skipper of the first boat of the season.

Buoys marking channels were put out by the buoy tender Kenoki as far as Belleville early last week. With the Bay Bridge closed for repairs the ship was unable to proceed on up to Trenton.

When the bride repairs are completed the Kenoki will return and pick up the buoys from the inland depth for placement further up the bay.

est military aircraft when Ottawa officials visit CFB Trenton to outline the lifting CX-84 project.

The group will be led by Lt.-Col. Ken Dixon who arrives April 28.

The CX-84 is specially designed for vertical take off and short landing procedure. Three of these have recently been purchased by the Canadian Forces and a team has been organized to evaluate the plane through its comprehensive testing.

The team consists of pilots, engineers and ground-support personnel who will determine the planes most effective military role.

The flight-test schedule is to continue until 1970 when the aircraft will begin working trials. The CX-84 covers every operational phase of conventional aircraft. It has the versatility of a helicopter coupled with short take off and landing facilities.

In high speed flight the plane flies like a conventional turboprop aircraft.

Breaking Ground

Roy Thrasher, representing pioneer Centenary district family, and young Brian Sine, team up with shovel to turn first sod at site of new Westminster United Church in Sidney township.

Will Build New Church

Members of the Westminster United Church pastoral charge in Sidney township are looking forward to next September when hopefully they will see their new $113,000 church opened.

Sunday afternoon more than 150 congregation members attended sod-turning ceremonies at the site of the new church on Wallbridge Road, half a mile north of 401 highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, representing two of the pioneer families of the Centenary area, had the honor of turning the first sod, marking the official start of construction of the new edifice.

Greetings and good wishes were extended by Dr. H. G. Lester, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference and superintendent of home missions.

Also in attendance were clergymen Rev. John F. Bunner, Rev. H. Y. Kennedy, Tweed; chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, Harleigh Hamilton, chairman of the building committee; and Rev. William A. Watson, and builder F. McConnell of Napanee.

Building committee chairman Mr. Hamilton, promised that at least one service would be held in the new church before the end of September.

The new Westminster church will serve the congregations of the present century-old Centenary and Wallbridge United Churches.

But it will draw attendance from a much wider area than these two centres. Families of the former Bayside and Sidney Presbyterian charges will also attend the new church.

In fact, the new church will serve congregation members of eight small rural churches either now closed or to be closed with the completion of the new building.

Included are the Bayside and Wesleyan Churches on the "Front Road", Aiken's Church on the 2nd of Sidney, Stone Church on the 4th, and Scott's Church on the 6th concession.

Those churches were closed as the result of the United Church re-organization of pastoral charges a couple of years ago.

Over-crowding at the present Centenary Church, built in 1908, was one of the primary reasons for the decision to build a new church to serve congregations both at Centenary and at Wallbridge.

Frequently, additional chairs have to be placed to accommodate the congregation at Centenary. The church normally seats about 150 people.

The new church is being built on a lot slightly more than an acre in extent, on the west side of Wallbridge Road just south of Tucker's Woods.

Its 40 - by - 80 foot dimensions will seat 300 people. The brick structure with slender spire will be faced with brick.

The basement area will be finished for children's Sunday School classes, but members hope they will be able to eventually construct an educational wing.

Mr. Bunner, pastor since January 1968, says the new church will serve approximately 210 township families.

City Cadets Top Shots

Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte won the Margeden trophy for marksmanship for the sixth successive year Sunday afternoon.

Quinte was host for the event, which saw 30 cadets from RCSCC Howe, Peterborough, 'SRSCC Skeena, Port Hope and RCSCC St. Lawrence, Kingston, compete for the award.

Members of the winning team were Pierre Mercier, Perry Girvin, Thomas Prewer and Michael Callaghan. Second place team, also from Quinte, was composed of Peter Fargey, Dean Stockwell, Douglas Johnston and Alex Oberson.

Winners of cash prizes with their scores were Peter Mercier 95, Michael Callaghan 95, Perry Girvin, 94, Thomas Prewer 92, and Pierre Mercier 91.

JACK IRELAND
President

After 18 years as Chamber of Commerce member, Jack Ireland now is its president. He has been a director for the past four years, and a member of the committee on tourist development.

Mr. Ireland feels that the projects the Chamber of Commerce should undertake are extensive tourist development, the business community protection bureau, improved dockage facilities and a winter carnival.

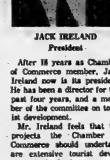
Many of these projects already involve the Chamber, and Mr. Ireland feels "that the Chamber is presently fulfilling an important role in the community especially through its tourist and consumer protection bureau and acting as a general information centre."

However, Mr. Ireland also feels a thorough inspection of the inner chamber workings is necessary.

"It is my feeling that a thorough analysis of our chamber objectives will result in a more effective program for community promotion," he says.

Besides his role in the Chamber Mr. Ireland is also active in the community. He is a member of the Lake Ontario Development Association, the Belleville YMCA, Belleville Businessmen's Association, Rotary Club, Shrine Club, and is past president of the Canadian Appliance Dealers' Association and a former alderman of the city of Belleville.

City Chamber of Commerce Opens Week-long Program



Chamber of Commerce week begins today and Belleville members are set to join the national program.

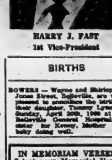
The week will be observed by over 850 chambers across Canada as well as by business and government. In Belleville, there will be a series of articles on the Chamber and its activities in the Intelligencer as well as a number of Chamber discussions on Radio Station CJBQ's daily open-line program, Why Not Call?

Highlighting the week will be a panel discussion Tuesday night at the Shrine Club on the topic "Is the Chamber of Commerce Worthwhile?".

J. C. Dempsa, Ontario School for the Deaf superintendent, will act as moderator. Panelists will be Ray Bradshaw, president of the Belleville and district Labor council, Alderman Robin Jeffrey, Chamber vice-president Harry Fast, and G. A. Wishart, past-president of the Belleville Chamber.

Top Men of Chamber

As one of the panelists debating the role of the Chamber of Commerce at the Shrine Club Tuesday night, first vice-president Harry Fast feels the Chamber is making adequate progress.



With three years as a Chamber director (he has been a member for four years) the Ridout-area CNR manager has taken an active part in community affairs.

He is a member of the Rotary club, the YMCA and United Community Services and chairman of the finance committee of the Chamber.

On the question of studying the role of the Chamber, Mr. Fast says "such a study should be made periodically to ensure that its activities are relevant to community needs and current in sponsoring action."

Mr. Fast also feels that Chamber projects should be those "that are a benefit to the community as a whole . . ." These include action on water pollution, education and as a voice of commerce to encourage co - operation in the business community.

Mr. Fast says the Chamber should also co-perate with district labor councils to ensure a good business climate.

HARRY J. FAST
1st Vice-President

New Construction Program

Bell Goes Underground for $160,000

Improving telephone service in northwest Belleville, Bell Telephone today embarks on a construction program costing $160,000.

By installing coaxial cable capable of carrying 1,020 telephone conversations simultaneously, Bell manager Charles Buckley said that service to the city would be greatly improved.

Underground cables will replace poles from lower Bridge St., up Coleman St. to Harriet St., North Front, and across Highway 401.

The cable, which is a 12-tube installation about three inches in diameter, carries long distance telephone calls by radio and is even capable of relaying television.

Calls are transmitted through relay towers, one each in Belleville, Ottawa and near Smiths Falls, Mr. Buckley said the quality of calls will equal or surpass quality of regular cable calls.

Inspiration Construction Co. Toronto, will carry out the installation, expected to be completed by mid-summer.

"The actual digging and installation will only take a couple of weeks though," added Mr. Buckley.

In early June, another construction project will start at 75 Bridge St., location of Bell's main office in Belleville.

Underground wire will be installed all the way up Bridge St., to Plaza Sq., to eventually service the incoming Unemployment Insurance Commission Regional offices.

"We are virtually out of cable there," said Mr. Buckley, "and the installation of 800 wires in that section of Belleville is a necessity."

Inspiration will also construct the Bridge St. link costing $164,000.

Faulty Wire Blamed For House Fire

PICTON (Staff) — Faulty wiring is believed to have caused a blaze Saturday night which destroyed the two-story frame home of Raymond Book and family, a half-mile south of here.

The blaze was fought by Bloomfield Fire Department, assisted by Camp Picton brigade.

Bloomfield fire chief Ralph Rolston said that "faulty wiring had pretty well been determined as the cause of the blaze. No loss could be given until the damage was assessed by fire insurance adjusters.

The interior of the house was completely gutted with only the walls remaining standing.

Chief Rolston expressed his appreciation to spectators who assisted in laying the 2100 feet of hose necessary to reach the nearest fire hydrant in Picton.

The Bloomfield chief said that although the fire was only a half mile from Picton, firemen from that town could not answer the alarm as Picton has no fire-fighting contract with Hallowell township.

The village of Bloomfield sells fire protection to the township therefore all Hallowell fires are fought by them.

Motel Theft Nets $800 Haul

Over $800 in goods were stolen Saturday night from the Riverbend restaurant on Highway 14 in Foxboro.

The break-in was discovered Sunday morning.

A quantity of cigars, 60 cartons of cigarettes, transistor radios, 19 to 15 watches, an electric clock, a rifle and an electric guitar and other small articles made up the $800 loss.

Police say the theft is still under investigation.

One More Protest On School Levies

Another municipality has added its voice to the clamor over increased costs of education.

Chandos township in Peterborough county last week balked at paying the 103 per cent increase in school costs assigned to it by the new county board.

The township, adjacent to Wollaston township in north Hastings, faces the second-highest increase among Peterborough county municipalities. Its reeve and council have passed a resolution saying they will collect only the amount of last year's levy plus 10 per cent.

Under legislation setting up the county boards, the councils of each contributing municipality is responsible for collecting the school tax levied by the county board.

Reeve Ernest Tanner of Chandos said his township has many people over 70 living on old-age pensions and fixed incomes and it will be impossible for them to pay the large increase demanded.

Harvey township is the hardest - hit Peterborough County municipality, with an increase of 108 per cent over last year.

In every, Bruce Hall, said he believed his council was in favor of following Chandos' lead, and is meeting with its solicitor to consider the matter.

Harvey has also opposed its assessment equalization factor which determines how much it will pay.

A delegation from Prince Edward county board of education held meetings with department of education officials in Toronto Monday to discuss its expected 100 per cent rise in education costs. This was the third such session in the Prince Edward county delegation.

John Winkermeyer, formes Liberal leader in Ontario, was warmly greeted by an admirer following his speech Saturday night at Club Canara to Prince-Edward-Hastings separate school teachers and trustees.

Wintermeyer: Warning To Separate Schools

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Ontario's Roman Catholics must "determine shortly" whether to go forward with providing a complete high school program or scrap the separate school system entirely.

John Wintermeyer, former Ontario Liberal leader and now president of the Roman Catholic high school board of Toronto archdiocese, outlined the choice Saturday night. He spoke to the staff-board banquet given by trustees of Prince Edward - Hastings separate school board for their teachers.

"Can we ask our youngsters to pursue an education under a system bound to be inferior unless it is extended through to grade 13?" he asked his audience.

At present, government grants are given to separate schools for the first 10 grades. Schools such as Nicholson Catholic College, which offer grades 11, 12 and 13, are private institutions and receive no government support.

"It is very difficult to carry on a system up to the end of grade 8 or 10, and then transfer our pupils, when the best pedagogical opinion suggests we have one continuous system from kindergarten to grade 13," the speaker said.

Mr. Wintermeyer asked his listeners to support groups now calling for extended government grants for Catholic education.

"Let us persuade our non-Catholic friends our request is constitutional, enshrined in the British North America Act," he charged.

"Under the Act, Catholics were ensured a basic education, interpreted as grade 6 then, but now considered to include grade 13, under their own system," he said.

Mr. Wigermeyer added that Catholic parents have a right to Catholic education for their children, "although don't expect all Roman Catholic parents to agree with me."

"I think the government will agree with me," he asserted. "This is not the bugaboo problem some think it to be. Extension of separate schools to include grades 11, 12, and 13 is not unnecessarily expensive duplication of what we already have."

"We already have 32,000 pupils in grades 11 to 13 in Ontario now. Our enrolment will grow, and unless our schools' capacities keep pace, our pupils will have to transfer to public secondary schools, where the government will pay for them anyhow."

Mr. Wintermeyer urged his listeners to approach "our non-Catholic friends in a non-belligerent fashion."

"There is nothing divisive in having different streams in the total education picture," he declared.

A dual system of education in the province would tend to strengthen democracy he asserted.

"Democracy was never intended to be a method of counting heads," he said. "It was intended to express the Christian concept of the human being, to be the expression of compassion for minorities such as we."

City Awaiting OMB on Costs

Belleville city officials will wait for written confirmation from the Ontario Municipal Board before releasing information respecting the city's 1969 capital works allotment.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said this morning that word from the OMB was expected either in today's or Tuesday's mail.

It follows a letter from the OMB at last week's council meeting. The letter stated that a study of the city's financial position indicated it appeared the city would be unable to accommodate its 1969 proposed capital works budget of $2,722,000, with its share of the 1969 Hastings County Board of Education costs foreseen.

The letter stated, however, if it could be shown the $1,815,000 cost of the water filtration plant extension would be fully self-liquidating, this might change the picture materially.

On Friday City Manager J. R. Reynolds will meet with the OMB and said he hoped to be able to show that the water filtration plant would be self-liquidating.

Included in this year's capital works program, in addition to the water plant extension, is the construction of a $700,000 sanitary sewer up the Moira River bed, and the first phase construction of the Sidney street bridge.

"We'll know exactly what the picture is when we get it in writing from the Municipal Board," the mayor said today.

It's Fishing Time Again!

These three youn ganglers got the bait-fishing season away to an early start Sunday. Their efforts at Belleville's Lower Bridge were productive of only suckers.

His Raft Made Quite A Splash!

For a time Saturday police feared there had been a fatal attempt to shoot the flood-swollen Moira River.

It all began when an unnamed Belleville juvenile built a homemade raft and decided to put it in at Riverside Park and go cruising down the river.

The youth made it safely to the Upper Bridge. Then the raft hit the bridge and was partly demolished.

Meantime, police had received a call from a passerby who had seen the youth coming down the river.

-Back at the bridge, the youngster was not going to give up even with a broken-down raft. He stayed put until he reached the Catherine street bank, jumped off and waded ashore.

Meantime, police had lost sight of the boy at the CNR bridge. They arrived at Catherine street and found the broken-down raft — but no youth.

By this time the fire department were also on the scene. However, the youngster soon was located, safe, if slightly shivering.

Bishop Visits His Hometown

TRENTON — A distinguished church leader, and editor of two church publications, returned to his hometown during the weekend after 28 years' absence.

Most Rev. John J. Fitzpatrick, D.D. auxiliary to Archbishop Carroll of Florida visited relatives — the Pelkey and MacDonald families — before starting back to Miami today.

The bishop was accompanied by his brother Robert a Jesuit who came from the Philippines to America last August when he was consecrated.

Bishop Fitzpatrick who has lived in Florida 22 years is editor of two church newspapers, The Florida Catholic and The Voice.

Trade Booms

"Canada Courier" is a bright publication put out by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Illustrated with--attractive color prints, the current issue contains a wealth of information on Canadian products from Belleville's Black Diamond cheese to high-styled mukluks made by a Winnipeg firm.

The mukluks — Eskimo-style leather footwear — have drawn inquiries from as far away as the Soviet Union, where all 34 members of the Canadian Embassy are wearing them.

A wheat problem in Canada? You would not think so from Courier's information that Canada sold 303,000,000 bushels of wheat to 50 countries during the first ten months of 1968. The figure does not include a 50,000,000-bushel sale in December to China which in 1968 was the biggest buyer with 70 million bushels.

Want a summer home? Well, a Vancouver firm is having big success with its A-frame chalets. Orders have been received from France, Italy, Spain, and the United States, including Hawaii.

What else is new on the Canadian trade scene? Believe it or not, this country exports Chinese food to Hong Kong, toys to Japan, fashions to France, computers to the United States, watches to Switzerland, electro-medical equipment to Germany, whisky to Britain, potatoes to Ireland, and even brassieres to Italy.

Overall, Canadian sales abroad rose 19 per cent between 1967 and 1968 — to $13,576,400,000. The greatest individual rise in sales was to the United States — 25.4 per cent, to $9,186,200,000. Britain bought 3.9 per cent more than in 1966-67, totalling $1,224,100,000.

As Canada Courier puts it, Canada is the place to buy almost anything.

Summer Dream

Spring can be a rainy period, but then it does promote the growth the countryside needs and brings us a step closer to the Summer season. For sunnier climes most of us have to depend meantime for such glimpses of tropical paradise as was afforded on television recently by Polynesian Adventure.

A National Geographic production it told the story of a year spent in Tahiti by U.S. photographer and lecturer Stanton Waterman, his wife and three children. And for anyone who has seen Tahiti there were those same nostalgic reminders of an island which, though comely more and more into the main-stream of world tourism is still surrounded by an aura of legend.

There is busy little Papeete (Pa-pal-alta!), and Quinn's (a bar and night spot known the world over), and dusty streets and busy stores, and girls with long black hair and men of the Foreign Legion (yes, they are still there) and the nuclear test force and the accents of France.

And there is the lush vegetation of the tropics and the scent of flowers and the green volcanic mountainside and the lonely valleys and savage peaks.

But see Tahiti in the early morning as the sun touches bay and the ship heads for shore and there is Moorea on the port side and you think it is all a dream.

And then suddenly the ship is at anchor and it is only 6 a.m. but the air is hot and the temperature is 86 and it is January. And yes it is real although you have never before set eyes on such a heady scene.

On the dockside there is a cluster of European residents and there is a fellow there in a bright shirt and he might be Jean Pierre Aumont.

Polynesia . . . the South Pacific . . . Tahiti . . . is it all real, yes it is.

An Evening Gone

"A thousand ages in Thy sight are like an evening gone. . ." So runs the line of a familiar hymn. We were reminded of it while reading of Justice Minister Turner's Northern tour with Mr. Justice Morrow.

Mr. Morrow's jurisdiction covers a 1,300,000 square miles of territory and it was the first time in the 3,500 years Rakkos have lived at Igloolik, a community of 400 on Foxe Basin, that a trial had been held there.

It has been a long time since the native peoples of this continent came across the Bering Strait from Asia. Their origins, much of it still shrouded in legend and mystery, remain a subject of unusual fascination.

Isle Royale, an island in Lake Superior, is another example. It has links with the early Indian population of this continent. Copper mines on the island, their remains still visible today — were worked by the Indians some 5,000 years ago.

Symbol of Freedom

Alexander Dubcek Eased Out of Czech Leadership

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In its heavy-handed and somewhat vicious effort to stamp out the seeds of freedom in Czechoslovakia, the Kremlin has finally found a way of ensuring that its orders will be more strictly enforced by a more docile Czechoslovak leadership.

Alexander Dubcek, the most obvious choice of the masses, has been demoted from Communist party leadership and replaced by Dr. Gustav Husak, the Slovak who strongly supports the Moscow viewpoint.

Dubcek still is in leadership ranks but his presence may be more window-dressing than assurance of influence or authority. He might have called on his followers to fling themselves against the Soviet wall of tanks and guns and undoubtedly many would have followed him. But this might have led to his death and Dubcek has shown that while he is brave, he is neither foolish nor heroic.

The most shattering threat is the presence of the Soviet military machine.

It is likely that the Russians will gradually keep moving Dubcek back into the ranks of obscurity and perhaps deal with him more harshly once his relationship with the masses becomes remote.

But there also is a danger of elevating Dubcek to martyrdom which has little popularity with the people. The gap between the rulers and the masses will widen and the underground may spread, though the police and army have taken steps to arrest hundreds and perhaps thousands who have shown reluctance to bow to the Soviet supremacy.

This roundup of the dissidents undoubtedly will continue. Some of the more strident voices may be stilled but it may take much effort to destroy the obvious will of the people. The undercurrent may be more difficult to crush.

Meanwhile, the Czech tragedy points a lesson for all Eastern Europe and the Balkan region. For those who threaten to revolt from Soviet "protection" there are always ways of forcing policy changes.

The Czech clampdown has the most sobering lesson for Romania and Yugoslavia.

While the United States has blinded it would not remain inactive if Yugoslavia was invaded, it is unlikely that the West would take any action if Romania was brought forcibly under Soviet control.

The Yugoslavs maintain they can look after themselves but they are more likely to try to come to terms with Moscow than risk an invasion that might possibly bring Western help but more likely would bring extreme hardship for the population and the suffering of years of guerrilla action in rugged mountain hideouts.

Morality and the Facts of Life

Letter to The Montreal Gazette

In her letter about abortion (April 1) Mrs. Gaudreau states in an oversimplification of the problem "What modern woman needs is re-education in morality."

This is a fine-sounding sentiment and I'm sure many people believing themselves to be moral have nodded sagely in agreement when reading it and so will have shelved the difficult question of abortion again, in the hopes that they will never have to do anything about it.

It is not re-education in morality which is needed it is education in the simple facts of life about the human reproductive system and the physiology and psychology of sex. It seems to me that it is wrong for anyone to moralize on the subject of abortion to women who have suffering of the function of their own bodies and who are often totally ignorant, even after having had several babies of how conception takes place. Since they do not know how it happens how can they avoid or prevent conception, and possible abortion? It is even more wrong to allow young men and women in this day and age to leave home or school without a thorough knowledge of conception and the prevention of conception. These facts should be taught straightforwardly without any moralising or other religious propaganda.

I often think when I hear people talking and condemning couples who have sexual relationships without getting married and who use contraceptives to avoid having a child that such couples have a more responsible attitude to life than the many who marry and who spawn in ignorance. Because they have been told it is all right and quite moral for them to go on having children as long as they are married, even if they are incapable of giving those children the emotional and economic support they need from the time they are born.

Cars Versus Mass Transit

Ottawa Journal

The past year was "unquestionably. . .the blackest the Ontario motorist has ever had to face," an Ontario Motor League publication laments. The article complains that gas taxes went up two cents a gallon; license plate fees were raised one-third; a law was passed requiring cars be inspected before being sold; and the federal Government was responsible for its "disturbing development" of proposing mandatory Breathalyzer tests.

Even the province's five per cent sales tax is branded an "unjustifiable burden on the motorist-taxpayer" and the article claims "most people will agree that today the car is no longer a luxury."

That statement is open to argument. The man who drives his car to work and grumbles at having to pay $2 a day to park on land worth $50 an acre a square foot has made his choice. The buses would, in many cases, get him there as fast and at lower cost. And as for the man who claims quick transit would be an inefficient enough, how many times have we heard the OTC say if more people used the system it would improve immensely?

City planners argue that mass transit is the only way to prevent clogging of the centre of our cities by cars. It may take much more almost-punitive measures by governments to do it, but if this trend continues the motorist will have to admit that driving a car is a luxury.

Arctic Defence Force

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker's call for a 500-man Arctic Force at Eskimos to defend the northern frontier is a commendable idea — though the Far North has, for at least the past 15 years, had a pretty efficient volunteer defence force in existence.

Called the Rangers, this group consists of Eskimo and white trappers and hunters, prospectors, fur traders, missionaries, schoolteachers and civil servants. North of Yellowknife, on the north shore of Great Slave Lake, the Rangers' primary responsibility is acting as scouts and as aircraft spotters, and few have — aside from strange faces — operate in the Northwest Territories without the RCMP or Department of National Defence becoming quickly aware of their presence. Radio-equipped Hudson's Bay Company posts, police detachments and DEW Line sites are the centres to which these scouts report, and the air force has long maintained regular aerial patrols beyond the inhabited areas of the Arctic Islands (though it has never admitted so publicly).

Waiting for the Mail

Windsor Star

Waiting for the mail is one of the pleasures of the leisured past that has all but disappeared. Now, with the help of the Post Office, its last vestiges will go.

In a slower age of less insistent communications, waiting for the mail was a social pleasure. Villagers gathered in the post office as the train was due, and offered no objections to waiting while the postmaster left his grocery counter to sort the mail. Farm children watched for the rural mail delivery's approach. Even in the city, the mailman was known and awaited.

Today, in a much faster age, nobody has time to wait for the mail. The expert technique is to keep busy until well after the mail is due, add an hour for delays, then pick up the mail. Chances are that it will be mostly bills and junk, anyway. All the glamor is gone, at very little gain in efficiency.

Now, to add the final blow, the Post Office is considering closing up to 3,000 offices across Canada, all on grounds that they're too small. Perhaps there will be a gain in efficiency, although that will remain to be proved. Certainly the image of Canada as a rural economy will have suffered one more blow, and a social gathering that was a distinctively small-town pleasure will end for good.

Red Chinese in Bid for Railroad Job in Africa

Vancouver Sun

Some alarm is being sounded in Western Europe because of something that hasn't happened yet but conceivably will.

this is no less than a massive invasion of East Africa by thousands of Chinese from mainland China.

Nearly 1,000 technicians from China have almost completed survey work on a projected railway link from Dar-es-Salaam in Tanzania to Lusaka in Zambia. The probable result will be that the Chinese will get the contract for laying more than 1,100 miles of track. If this happens, the first of 50,000 Chinese are expected to arrive in Africa by September.

There has been some skepticism in the West about China's ability to do a job of this sort. The proof, one way or other, will be forcoming if China does get the job. But what is more important from a Western point of view is that 50,000 Chinese will be established in what is currently a powder keg — next door to Rhodesia and South Africa and Portuguese Mozambique.

The Zambian drive for this railway has arisen in the main out of the Rhodesian trouble. Zambia wants to get away from dependence on the white minority government of that country for outlets for its abundant resources.

Western governments and private capital spurned the opportunity to build the railway. Now not only they but the Russians have reason to be nervous because China after successive rebuffs, seems likely to get a large foot in the African door.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Red Knight, German air ace Baron Manfred von Richthofen, was shot down and killed over the Western Front 51 years ago today—in 1918—by Capt. Roy Brown of Carleton Place, Ont. A flight leader in the 209th squadron of The Royal Flying Corps, near Bertangles, Brown was suffering from a stomach ailment during combat and sent three weeks in London hospital immediately after landing. He was later awarded a bar to the DFC.

1919—American author and humorist Samuel Clements—Mark Twain—died.

1948—Prime Minister Mackenzie King set a record of service for a Commonwealth prime minister —20 years, 10 months and 10 days.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—Allied planes bombed Bucharest; German troops increased shelling of the Anzio beachhead; RAF planes bombed Cologne, Germany.

Battle of the Sexes

Peterborough Examiner

The male animal being what he is, it would be easy to generalize that man would favor the convenience of the Pill even taking into consideration some of the physiological effects that it presents for women.

Women are thought to be the more zealous advocates of pregnancy because of their instinctive maternalism and because child-bearing seems to be their expected function. Indeed, a wiman who does not have a child of her own to boast and complain about usually picks upon someone else's or turns to raising cats.

With typical contrariness, however, a woman in England has brought about a sucessful divorce action because her husband tore up her doctor's prescription for birth control pills, the result of which was the creation of three children to add to the two there produced before she found rest with the Pill.

Admittedly her domestic duties were increased considerably by the fact that she was also looking after three of her husband's seven children from a previous marriage, but has she considered the psychological wounding that she may have inflicted on her husband by taking him to court? Is it not better for a man to have living testimony of his virility and prowess in the form of little models of himself rather than coming home occasionally with turkeys and cheap trophies from the bowling alley?

Trenton Hosts Legion

TRENTON — An area resident was honored during the weekend by delegates attending a district "F" Canadian Legion convention here.

Earl Brant of Deseronto was elected to serve as vice-president on the district executive for a one-year term.

Elected new district commander succeeding Gerald Simpson of Brighton, is Eric Hogg of Peterborough.

Earl Bronson of Peterborough was re-elected district sports' officer.

The delegates presented 14 resolutions to the executive for study and approval. All the proposals concerned veteran welfare.

Yesterday more than 200 Legion members paraded to the cenotaph at Bayshore park for a prayer service. The wreath was placed on the memorial by Donald Wilson, vice-president of Ontario veterans.

Delegates voted to hold the next district convention at Campbellford in 1970. The annual drumhead service that year will be held in Haliburton.

Film Producer's Gamble Has Chance to Pay Off

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hall Bartlett has long been considered an idealistic film maker, but lately it appeared he has carried idealism too far.

The evidence: Bartlett had invested two years of his time and all of his savings in a movie about today's hippies—without violence, motorcycle gangs, rape or dope.

"Poor Hall's gotta go broke," said his despairing colleagues.

Maybe not. The product of Bartlett's time and money, a beautifully-photographed film called Changes, opened to critical acclaim in New York and Los Angeles. He cautiously observes that it's too early to determine if the investment will pay off. But the auguries bode well.

A Kansas City boy and Yale graduate, Bartlett tried to make it as an actor in films, failed and turned to the production side. An early influence was Stanley Kramer, who instilled in him a sense of independence and altruism. Bartlett spent two years making a true-life picture of Indian life, Navaja, financed by $52,000 from 20 friends.

His subsequent films have dealt with such subjects as penal reform (Unchained), race (All the Young Men), mental health (Zero Hour), and the United Nations (A Global Affair).

The producer-director-writer discussed the origins of Changes.

"There are a lot of young people in my family, and they felt that no one had tried to tell an honest story in films about today's youth. The kids I knew are laughing at the pictures that purported to depict the 18-25 age group. Those adults believed that all of the young generation were hippies. I knew that wasn't true.

Bartlett began touring the U.S. to talk to young people. He drew along an unpublished writer, Bill Kelly, 25, and stepson Kent Lane, whose mother is Brenda Fleming. Together they interviewed thousands of young people.

During the process, he used a board of 26 young people to review what was being written.

"They said, 'that's phony,' the offending passage came out of the script," said Bartlett.

He ended up with a tight schedule that called for 27 shooting days, two-thirds on location. For his actors he chose unknowns; 22 of the speaking parts were cast with those who hadn't appeared on the screen before. The leading role of the purpose-seeking young man was given to stepson Kent Lane.

When Changes was completed and scored—the contemporary music is one of the film's best elements—Bartlet offered it to the 14 major releasing companies. Eleven offered him deals, and he chose the Cinerama Corp. The results of the crapshoot will be forthcoming; as of now, it appears to be a natural.

Replacement Time

Summer Catching Up to TV Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — If, upon us. It doesn't happen all watching television these spring nights, you frequently have the feeling that you've seen all this before, it is probably because you have.

Summer is coming apace in televisionland. The fierce ratings race is over and rerun time at once, but sneaks up rather quietly.

On Wednesday night, for instance, NBC's The Virginian started its warm-weather schedule with the re-broadcast of an episode first shown more than a year ago.

Here Come the Brides on ABC wound up its first season with a rather weak episode in a series that has proved to be a lusty, amusing switch on the tired western theme.

Also launched on their rerun seasons are a clutch of CBS series—The Good Guys, Beverly Hillbillies, Green Acres and Hawaii Five-O. Bob Hope disappears until fall after tonight's NBC comedy hour.

Viewers have seen—almost—the season's quota of Laugh-In until early fall. The special starring the Monkees on Monday night started a period of specials, mostly new shows but with one repeat. On June 9, however, there will be one more fresh Laugh-In—the hour preempted at the end of March after the funeral of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

June and half of July will be filled with Laugh-In repeats and NBC is still trying to decide what to do about that Monday night hour during August.

CBS continues to wrestle with the problems growing out of the cancellation of The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour. Plans now are to come in a few repeat programs, then launch a light-hearted country-western show originating in Nashville. Last summer the brothers' replacement was the variety show starring Glen Campbell which established him strongly enough to give him a winter-season show of his own.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Broadway Tony awards, which in two previous television programs led the other awards shows in pace, class and general interest, seemed on Sunday night to be falling into the old Oscar trap.

With awards voted in 15 categories and five special Tonys to hand out—plus scenes from several top plays to present—the show bogged down with the introductions of the presenters, the envelope-opening and the thanks speeches.

Just about every great theatrical name, however, was on stage at some time—Sir Laurence Olivier flew over from England to pick up his special award. The program, scheduled to run 90 minutes, was close to 45 minutes late in winding up.

Tony's charm few the average viewer with little access to the Broadway theatre is always the liberal sampling provided from top shows. There were scenes from Zorba, The Leaves From Psmises, Promises, 1776 and Hair the last perhaps a bit disappointing since the cast sang a production number completely clothed.

It was interesting to note the close relationship between the branches of show business. Alan King and Diahann Carroll, certainly two familiar TV faces, served as host and hostess. Carol Burnett, who certainly belongs to television, received a special Tony.

But even if the show does seem to be getting a big long-winded, it is still the most rewarding from the viewer's standpoint.

The Great White Hope, a drama about the first Negro heavyweight boxing champion, drew top honors for its author, producer and star in the award ceremonies of the 23rd annual Tony Awards for the Broadway theatre.

A comedy about the American Revolution and the framing of the Declaration of Independence, 1776, was named best musical and its director was cited as the best director of a musical.

The Great White Hope, which chronicles the career and private life of fighter Jack Johnson, was named the best dramatic play of the season and its star, James Earl Jones, was named the best actor in a drama. Jane Alexander, who plays Jones's white mistress, was honored as the best supporting actress in a drama.

Other recipients of top awards included Julie Harris, best actress in a drama, for Forty Carats; Angela Lansbury, best actress in a musical, for Dear World and Jerry Orbach, best actor in a musical, for Promises, Promises.

The ceremonies were televised live from the Mark Hellinger Theatre.

The Tony Awards were founded in 1947 in memory of Antoinette Perry, the actress and director, who died in 1946.

New Forces Budgets Explained

A new system of budget control will be adopted throughout the Canadian Armed Forces within the next couple of years.

Major W.J. Bath of Air Transport Command at CFB Trenton explained "the analysis of budget variations and control at work" at a recent meeting of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants.

Maj. Bath said that the Canadian Forces had introduced a new system of budget preparation and control centres in Air Transport Command.

He explained that the officer in command of a control centre was held responsible to maintain his expenditures within his overall budget.

Budget reports are prepared by the computer centre and returned to the officer in charge of a control centre. This officer is responsible for providing reasons for any variations of expenditure.

The officer is also responsible for reducing expenditures in some areas in order that the expenditures are kept within the overall budget.

Pope Pleads With Jesuits

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul pleaded today with the Jesuit order, troubled by dissension and resignations because of celibacy, to come to the aid of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Pope, addressing 25 provincial superiors on the Society of Jesus, declared that the church is undergoing a "postsilly" decisive moment for its spiritual and historic vitality."

He said the church must preserve its conception of the priesthood and particularly of what he called "the sublime law of celibacy."

Toronto Nazi Leader Beaten

TORONTO (CP) — William Beattie, self-styled leader of the Canadian Nazi party, Sunday afternoon was beaten unconscious in a park by a man striking him with a pair of binoculars.

Beattie was marching in Allan Gardens with a sign reading "Free Speech or Death" to protest the city's refusal to permit him to speak in the park.

He had walked only 30 yards into the park, staffed with extra police expecting trouble, when a man leaped forward swinging the binoculars.

Charged with assault causing bodily harm is Eugene Lawrence, 43, of Toronto.

Foul Play' is Blamed

He said two cars came to rest only ten yards from a stack of drums containing highly-flammable paints and thinners.

One passenger, Dennis Yeoh, 21, who had been visiting his parents at Bath, Ont., near Kingston, was detained with possible internal and back injuries.

He is a student at the University of Waterloo and was on his way back to school to complete a co-operative work program before returning to school.

"I was walking down the aisle when I heard a screech of brakes and was hurled forward from almost the back of the car to the front. I could hear people screaming. I was pretty lucky. It was a hell of a feeling."

Also detained were Mary Jane Wodkowski, 26, of Detroit, and Stewart Vince, 55, an engineer from Sarnia.

Staff Sister Edna McGuire, principal of a French school in Sarnia: "It was all in slow motion. I was expecting the worst."

Sharon Bell, 19, of London, Ont., said it "seemed like the walls were coming in. Luggage fell on top of me and I was thrown all over the car."

Steward Michael Catras, 28, of Sarnia, was back at the rear of the train, said several women passengers became hysterical as they tried to get out of the cars.

Most of the passengers had to wait about 15 minutes before help arrived.

Among other persons released from hospital after treatment were Jane Logan, 18, Susan MacKenzie, 18, and Milton Gerber, 30, of Sarnia; Debbie Koerner, 17, Stratford, Ont.; Leslie Ann Madill, 10, and her sister Kathy, 8 Kitchener, Ont.

Daphne du Maurier to Leave Greystone Mansion

FAR, England (AP) — Daphne du Maurier is leaving her old greystone mansion Menabilly, the house she immortalized in Rebecca.

"It is rather like death to have to leave a place that has been home for me and my family for a quarter of a century," the 61-year-old novelist says.

Cromwell's troops gutted the house during England's civil war in the 1640s and bricked up a cavalier in one of its buttresses. It was rebuilt during the reign of Queen Anne in the early 1700s and now it stands amid wild cherry and rhododendrons with a milky sea mist creeping up to it from Cornwall's southern coast.

Miss du Maurier vowed that she would one day live in the house after seeing it at dawn when still a girl.

"I finally rented it in 1943, five years after writing Rebecca, but the landlord never wanted to sell it and now his second cousin wants to move in," she said.

She will not move far away. Her next home, Kilmarth, looks out over Cornwall cliffs to the sea.

She now is engaged in the task of gathering together all the family treasures to move there.

"I have the memories of three families, really—my own, those of my children and my husband's," she said.

Her husband, Lt.-Gen. Sir Frederick Browning, died in 1965. During the Second World War he commanded airborne forces and was chief of staff to Lord Mountbatten when he was Supreme Allied Commander in Southeast Asia.

Since he died, Miss du Maurier has lived alone at Menabilly—"but my three children and all my grandchildren come and visit me often."

She has just finished a novel called The House on the Strand which features her new home Kilmarth. "The foundations of the house were laid in 1327 and this really set my imagination working," she said.

What about women writers today?

"Perhaps it may sound like sour grapes in a woman of my age but I do get bored with all this sleeping around they seem to write about all the time," she said. "I think there are far more interesting things in the world."

MR. AND MRS. ROSS WOODCOCK

Woodcock — Alexander

Wellington United Church was the setting of the April wedding when Dorothy Isobelle Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Alexander, of Hillier, exchanged wedding vows with Ross Vernon Woodcock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Woodcock, of Belleville. Rev. Newman J. Truax was the officiating clergyman. Reading appropriate nuptial selections was organist Muriel McNeil. Soloist was Doris McFaul.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length gown of white embossed brocade voile in princess lines with scalloped neckline, featuring long lily-point sleeves and a long detachable train with scalloped edges, falling from the shoulders. Her finger-tip veil fell from a rose headpiece of brocaded voile. She carried a bouquet of pink-tinged shasta daisies.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Jean Allison, sister of the bride, was attired in a full-length gown of pale blue and silver taffeta, with long sleeves and featuring a scalloped neckline. Her headdress was of rose, of matching fabric and blue voile. She carried a bouquet of blue-tuped 'mums.

Bridesmaid was Victoria Woodcock, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of pale pink and silver taffeta with scalloped neckline. Her headdress was of matching fabric, and her bouquet was pink-tipped 'mums.

Best man was Jim Woodcock, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Frank Karnik, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Barrie McFaul and Harvey Allison, brother-in-law of the bride.

For the wedding reception at the church hall, the mother of the bride received the guest swearing a sky blue suit of patterned crimpolene with a pink hat and gloves, complemented by a corsage of pink carnations. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a dress of lime green taffeta with lace overdress, and black accessories. Her corsage was of coral carnations.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride donned a suit of pink crimpolene with pink and white accessories, and a complementing corsage of pink carnations. Upon their return, the couple will reside at 80 John street, Belleville.

CENTENARIANS COMMON

SOFIA (AP) — Bulgaria has 259 women older than 100, the most since the BTA reported. It said case histories show most come from big families, married early and thrived on 70 to 90 years of housework.

Advocates Walking

MONTREAL (CP) — C. K. Hetrr, president of the National Council for walking, says walking is an inexpensive and easy way to relieve tension and worry. Starting with a brisk 30-minute walk and gradually lengthening both time and stride won't reduce poundage but it will tighten slack muscles and maintain a healthy weight.

National Secretaries' Week To Be Observed in City

Every year since 1952, the last full week of April has been set aside for the observance of secretaries' week, and this will be a special event locally as this the first time in Belleville.

The week of April 20-26 is proclaimed as secretaries' week in Belleville, and Wednesday of this week is highlighted as secretaries day. That evening the local association will hold "Executive Night" at the Hotel Quinte when the "Boss of the Year" award will be presented.

The purpose of secretaries' week is to bring recognition to secretaries for the vital role they play in business, industry, education, government and the professions.

Secretaries' week is officially acknowledged by Federal and Municipal governments, usually by the issuance of official proclamation decreeing that this week shall be officially known as secretaries' week.

The theme for the week is "Better Secretaries Mean Better Business' and all programs and publicity material are geared to emphasize the message conveyed by this theme.

Ann Landers

Husband May Resent Doing Housework

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please excuse the mistakes in this letter. I can't see very well. I have two black eyes and a broken nose, which is why I'm writing.

ANN LANDERS

My husband hit me a lot but it's always an accident. Usually it happens when Mike is helping me, like a good husband. This last thing was the worst. We were putting away the week's groceries. Mike was standing on a ladder and I was handing him the canned goods. A canned ham fell on my face. The bleeding wouldn't stop so Mike drove me to the hospital. The doctor said my nose was broken.

Two months ago Mike was mopping the floors. He forgot to tell me the bucket was behind me. I stepped in it, fell and broke three ribs. A week before that, Mike was vacuuming the living room. His elbow caught me in the mouth and I lost a front tooth.

A friend who teaches psychology told me Freud said there are no accidents. What she means is Mike does these things on purpose. Is this possible? I think she is jealous because I have such a nice husband and she is 33 and still teaching school. Please comment. — RIVERSIDE.

* *

DEAR RIV.: It's interesting that all the accidents occur when Mike is performing domestic chores. It might be that subconsciously he resents doing housework. So why don't you increase him in the future to like cleaning only one day a week? It would be cheaper than the doctor bills.

* *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife started to write to you but she broke down in the middle of the letter and asked me to take over. The problem is our 17-year-old son. Don is a handsome kid (looks like Otis Chandler of Los Angeles). He makes good grades and has a world of friends. Don didn't date until last year, when he started to go with Molly, a lovely girl of 16. Suddenly he dropped Molly for a new interest. Today we learned the details and are in a state of shock.

The "new interest" is a 29-year-old divorcee with two kids. She sings hash in an all-night diner. Don wants to bring her to the house so we can get acquainted. My wife says she doesn't think she could stand it.

Why would a woman 29 years old look twice at a high school kid? What does he want with her anyway? Please don't say he is looking for a mother. He has a mother — a very fine mother — and she is only eight years older than this tramp. Please advise. We are — BESIDE OURSELVES.

* *

DEAR B.: Urge Don to bring his new friend to the house. Say you'll be delighted to meet her. The odds are good that she'd be ashamed to come. If she does show up, be gracious and friendly — even if she has three eyes and a Smith Brothers beard.

Parents who talk against the choice of a child make it necessary for that child to defend his choice. Sometimes they go so far as to marry just to prove the parents wrong. Usually those marriages are disastrous.

Montreal Bachelor 'Adopts' Ten Children

TORONTO (CP) — A bachelor who likes children. Fred Lindsay has "adopted" 10 of them through the Foster Parents Plan.

When 35 such parents met here recently for a social evening the Montreal investment counsellor was found to be one who had adopted the most kids.

Mr. Lindsay has so many pictures of the children he is supporting in foreign countries that he carries them in a big binder.

The five boys and five girls range in age from four to 14 and live in 10 different countries. They cost him about $2,500 a year to support, counting gifts.

To provide the necessities of life for one child under the plan costs $17 a month or $204 a year.

"I live in a home with my folks," the 45-year-old bachelor said in an interview. "So really the money I spend on the children is money I would have to spend on rent if I were in an apartment."

His interest doesn't stop with the financial support and a monthly letter to each of the children, who either live in a slum with poverty-stricken parents or are orphans.

He visits them. So far he has seen five of the 12 he has supported since becoming a foster parent in 1964.

Three no longer qualify. The real parents of two improved their situation so they can manage financially themselves. The third is a boy in South Vietnam who hasn't been heard from for a year.

He has seen children in Italy, Greece and Brazil—"a good way to see the world. This year he plans to see them in Korea, Hong Kong and the Philippines.

In November, 1968, he was asked to serve as a director of Foster Parents Plan Inc., and he accepted the job, which meant attending at least nine meetings of the board in New York each year.

However, recently the branch in Canada has been incorporated and Mr. Lindsay serves as its secretary-treasurer.

About 50,000 children are being helped through the plan and there are about 1,500 foster parents in the Metropolitan Toronto area.

"It's not just the people who are well off who are foster parents," said Mr. Lindsay. "I know of more than a few pensioners who are—and it's a real sacrifice for them."

Reassurance Best Cure When Children Ill

By DORIS CLARK

"Mummy, why am I sick?" Then Susie adds that she is bewildered. She may really be wondering what she did to deserve to be sick; not what germs, where, got the better of her.

Your favorite little companion may have the idea that being ill is a sort of punishment for being bad. A quick way to add insult to injury!

Calls for some friendly reassurance that just about everybody gets sick once in a while. For a reminder that even Mummy got the flu — remember? And it's a good time to make the point that bodies need coziness and rest while they fight the germs.

Dear Doris: Our daughter is graduating this year. I am asked to answer the toast to the parents. I have never been to a graduation exercise and have never had an ounce of talent in preparing a speech. Could you please send me a short response that I could give? — Bothered.

Dear Bothered: Even the smoothest talkers are apt to get shaky at a daughter's graduation. This is an exciting time.

Speak of the excitement. Appreciate the tribute to parents. Add something like this:

"It makes us feel good that our young people see us as friends as well as people who stand behind them and push. On our part, I know I speak for all of us when I say we have enjoyed every minute of these serious, goonified Friday-for-four years. There was fun, heaps of it.

"Shall I tell you one incident that was all pure fun?" (Here pull something out of memory that will produce a laugh.)

"Along with study went, unnoticed, formation of character. We delight to find in our young people a sense of honor, truth, responsibility and keen humor.

"Our wishes and love go with you as you move on to your next port of call, wherever that may be."

* * *

Dear Doris: What does a girl do when the boy she loves tells her that she is just a friend to him? He is 21 and the girl is 17. I know that I like him. I feel for him is love, not infatuation.

I think he is a little conceited because so many girls fall for him (because of his looks. I think) and he knows it. But whether he knows how I feel I'm not sure.

Should I forget about him? — know it won't be easy but I am a mature person and if that is the best thing to do — I'll try to.

I heard a saying that "Love is blind" and that a person doesn't see a person's faults. But then I read some place that that is wrong because when you are in love you see the other person's faults and still love him even though he has faults, and I think that is true. I know he has faults. He says things sometimes that hurt me even though he may not realize it. — This Love Is Not Blind.

Dear Love: Two things I suspect:

(1) You are not in love.

(2) He knows you think you are. — May even think you are, himself.

Whatever the case, moonlit ground over a conceited guy who thinks you are "just a friend" will get you nowhere. At 17, you'd be smart to keep it on the level of friendship whether he does or not.

Points for Parents

Mother: "I would like to see that play on television tonight but it would upset the children so if they had to miss their programs."

"Our wishes and love go with you as you move on to your next port of call, wherever that may be."

Child: "You mean we have to skip our program tonight?"

Mother: "Yes, there is a special program I want to watch at 7:00. You've seen me watch it with me if you wish."

Grandmother: "It doesn't seem as if parents have any rights these days."

Children should learn that adults do have certain prerogatives, and parents should not have to do battle to achieve their rights.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Perfect Addition to Any Suppertime Meal

By MARY MOORE

The news from the government is that there is an oversupply of peas from the 1968 pack of canned and frozen.

The news from me is that on our market there were lots of lovely clean parsnips at various prices but all below average.

So we should cash in on these plentifuls.

For my pea dish I selected the fresh frozen "Petite Peas" (two 12-oz. pkgs. for 59 cents).

BUTTERED PETITE PEAS

(1 pkg serves 4 or 5)

NOTE: Of course you can use same method for ungraded fresh frozen peas.

Tip the frozen peas into saucepan, add ¼ cup boiling water and time them after they come to full boil and boil no longer than three minutes for you want to retain their bright green color. Drain (saving liquid for soup). Add ¼ tsp. each salt and MSG and 1 tbsp. each butter and chopped fresh or dried mint or parsley. Reheat gently stirring and serve hot.

CRUMBED PARSNIPS

(2 lbs. — Serves 7 or 8)

NOTE: As you know there are parsnip lovers and parsnip haters. To the parsnip haters ours looked like fresh frozen French fried potato balls and they were enticed into eating them and liked them.

Scrub and pare parsnips. Cut into ¼" to ¾" slices, cutting wide slices in half crosswise. In saucepan barely cover with boiling salted water and cook, not more than 10 min. Drain and discard liquid. Let them dry off and then dredge them with flour — it takes ¼ .to ½ cup. Beat one egg with 1 tbsp. water and ½ tsp. salt. Have ready about 1½ cups very fine dry breadcrumbs. Line the three dishes up from right to left: the floured parsnips, beaten egg and crumbs. Dip parsnip pieces in egg, then in crumbs. Transfer to large frying pan in which you have melted 2 tbsps. butter and fry until golden on both sides.

NOTE: Halfway through this operation which my assistant, Shirley, was doing, she was bored with all this fiddling and boldly tipped the egg over the floured parsnip pieces and gave them a good stir. That "egged" all the parsnips. Encouraged she tipped all the crumbs in and gave the whole business a good stir. For the second half of the batch Shirley had to add two more pats butter to the frying pan. Shirley and I are parsnip lovers so naturally we thought they were great.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

Successful Livin — RIVER VALLEY WI — 233 hytgrygr

The annual meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute was held last week at the home of Mrs. Ernest Carr with 18 members in attendance.

The first vice-president, Mrs. Roy Tucker, chaired the meeting, and all the officers presented their reports.

The average attendance throughout the year was 17, with J. L. Donohoe, Mrs. Roy Tucker and Mrs. Percy McMullen attending every meeting.

The total expenditures were over $2,000 for the year, it was announced.

Mrs. Ernest Carr was tendered a vote of thanks for her six years as secretary.

Mrs. Percy McMullen summarized the work of the public relations department. She told members that the total amount spent was over $450. This included four institute projects, delegates to Guelph, district annual and area and a variety of gifts.

Mrs. J. R. Donohoe read the report of the nominating committee Mrs Glenn Bush conducted the election and installation ceremony.

A report of the recent board meeting was given. It was announced that the District Annual will be held on May 13 in Centenary Church.

A special collection was taken for "pennies for friendship".

The following are officers elected for the 1969-70 season.

President, Mrs. R. Tucker; first vice-president, Mrs. A. Wilhelm; second vice-president, Mrs. V. Harry; secretary, Mrs. G. Brooks.

The treasurer is Mrs. J. L. Donohoe; district director, Mrs. G. Bush; P.R. officer, Mrs. P. MacMullen; curator, Mrs. R. Bush; pianist, Mrs. S. McIntosh. There were 10 committee convenors and several alternate officers elected also.

U.C.W. Meeting

MOUNT PLEASANT RAWDON UCW

The April meeting of the Mount Pleasant Rawdon United Church Women was held in the Church hall with 27 members in attendance.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Garth Joslin and Mrs. Walter Wrightsman. The refreshments for the social hour were provided by Mrs. Douglas Fyear and Mrs. James Hagerman.

The president, Mrs. Burton Shalpe presided for the business. Reports were given by Mrs. Harry McAdam and Mrs. James Hoard. Thankyou notes were read from Mrs. Frank Hutchinson and Miss Debbie David.

Mrs. Ira David read a poem and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver conducted a sing song. Mrs. Percy MacMullen and Mrs. Robert H. Hoard gave readings.

Mrs. W. G. Cox conducted the mission study on China. She displayed maps, pictures, books and conducted a discussion following her message.

The devotional opened with a hymn on the given theme, with Mrs. Mac Sharp as pianist.

Mrs. Milton Shaw read the Bible selection and Mrs. Garth Joslin gave the meditation. Mrs. W. McAdam and daughter Judith conducted a vocal duet.

Mrs. George Grills gathered the Easter offering, which Mrs. James Hoard dedicated. At the close a social half hour was enjoyed.

Needs of Volunteer Service Vary

All the Volunteer Bureau services are made possible by public funds through United Appeal donations to United Community Services.

The Bureau finds volunteers to do worthwhile jobs requested by local health, welfare and cultural organizations. The Bureau Director's services are donated to creative, meaningful community work.

This month's special requests:

- volunteers as guides at the Hastings County Museum for school children's tours from April 21 until June 30, mornings and afternoons.
- occasional help with cartage for furniture donated to Furniture Exchange (Furniture Exchange is also a United Community service)
- volunteers to assist nurses in health and welfare clinics
- volunteers with public relations background
- volunteers who would be willing to work on surveys to provide research information for United Community Services

For an interview call: Mrs. F. E. Burrows, Director, Volunteer Bureau, United Community Services.

Pelletier Asserts Free CBC Prerequisite for Free Society

QUEBEC (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said Sunday night the CBC must remain free of any political interference "as a prerequisite for a free society."

Speaking to members of the Liberal Association of Quebec East, Mr. Pelletier said:

"To leave in the hands of any government at all complete freedom to manipulate at its pleasure a radio-television network, to give to any power whatsoever complete control of an implement of such effectiveness, was to create a situation where no democratic means could any longer prevent a government, or such a power, from becoming a dictatorship, no matter how slight might be its desire to do it."

Mr. Pelletier, who reports to Parliament for the state broadcasting network, said it is even more important to protect the freedom of the broadcast medium than it is to protect the freedom of the press.

Hundreds of thousands of Canadians now rely on television alone for their information, Mr. Pelletier stated.

"Moreover, whereas in the newspapers we read only the big headings, our attention is held, on the other hand, for the entire newscast on television."

Mr. Pelletier said the CBC's sole obligation was to conform with the parliamentary act that created it—to present a balanced service for information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming and to contribute to national unity and expression of Canadian identity.

Mr. Pelletier quoted CBC President George Davidson's recent statement in which he said it would be criminal for the corporation "to turn a blind eye and show Canadians only those insipid, sentimental, satisfying myths of what we would like our lives to be."

Said Mr. Pelletier:

"I heartily agree . . . to choose the easy way out and give in to popular pressure or the dictates of ratings is a dangerous trap into which public broadcasting must not fall."

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I got tired of all those old receipts and things cluttering up the desk drawer."

West Coast Tow Boats Are Called Death Traps

VANCOUVER (CP) An official of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild said Saturday he is prepared to recommend a lineup of all steel-hulled tow boats on Canada's West Coast following the sinking of the Emerald Straits with a loss of three lives.

Captain Cecil Rhodes, secretary-treasurer of the Guild's western division, representing about 2,300 masters, mates and pilots said:

"At the rate we are losing officers on these ships on the West Coast, we're going to take a hard look at the situation.

"I'm prepared to recommend to the executive that we bring these ships in. . . . They are floating death traps."

There is one known survivor from the Emerald Straits, a steel-hulled tug owned by Straits Towing Co. of Vancouver. It went down in a storm early Saturday in Howe Island, about 30 miles north of here.

The tug was towing an empty barge to Vancouver from Squamish, at the head of the sound, at the time it foundered.

Committee Fights Pollution

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Committee of a Thousand only has about 500 members, but they're confident.

The committee is 10 months old and already its vigilante tactics have uncovered 150 instances of pollution in lakes, streams and rivers of the Niagara Peninsula.

When a committee member hears of a possible case of pollution he leaves whatever he's doing and rushes to the scene.

"What we've really got is 500 people you might call field workers, sort of spies," says Joe Montgomery, the committee's president and co-founder.

"We can be places the government can't be simply because it can't have enough inspectors out looking."

Mr. Montgomery says the group was formed following a meeting last June.

"We got a little bot about all this on the Niagara River. All these ducks that had wintered here were getting killed by it.

"We never did find the sources of that oil, but we did get our group started."

He says the committee "tries to get to people to find out about the individual incidental acts of pollution."

"There are some mistakes by big industry, but pollution is largely the work of individuals.

"I don't give a damn if a firm spends $100,000 on pollution control. A man will still spoil a batch of something on the job and dump it out right away so no one finds out about it."

Mr. Montgomery thinks a mistake other anti-pollution groups make is taking a general, widely-alarmist view of pollution.

"We don't have to alert the newspapers or go right to the Ontario Water Resources Commission. A good talk will do it."

World's Refugees Seventeen Million

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's refugees grew in number in the last year to a record 17,228,915—a vast, scattered, multitude of fugitives from violence, fear, famine or oppression.

"Whether man, woman or child, the refugee is the tragic result of the violent pace and ferment that characterizes our time," the United States Committee for Refugees said Saturday, in reporting the new figures.

"Wherever the refugee is—whether Africa, Europe, Asia, Latin America or in our own country—he, by his rootlessness and need personifies modern man's inability to cope with his personal life, his religion, his ambitions and his hungers, with or without reason for his fellow man."

The new world total is up 1,400,000, or more than 10 per cent, from the 15,594,090 a year ago, with much of the increase resulting from the Nigerian-Biafran war.

There, more than 3,500,000 persons have been forced from their homes, the report said.

In the Middle East, the number of refugees has decreased fractionally, but still stands at more than 1,700,000 with totals up on both the east and west banks of the Jordan and in Gaza.

In Southeast Asia, the over-all total has declined to 7,200,000 from 8,100,000, but in Africa, it has risen to 3,000,000 from 1,500,00. Europe still has 95,000 refugees, most from Communist areas, and there are 2,200,000 in the Western Hemisphere, up 100,000.

Pearson Film Given TV Airing

OTTAWA (CP) — The film Mr. Pearson finally reached television screens Sunday night.

It was made for television five years ago but amid a blaze of controversy, it didn't make it.

The CBC said the film could not be shown on television because it didn't reach the required technical standard.

Your Car

'Engine Shampoo' Vital

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"After paying for an engine tuneup recently I noticed that I had been charged for an "Engine Shampoo". This is the first time I have heard of such a thing. Just what is an engine shampoo and is it a necessary, worthwhile expense, or just another gimmick to pry me loose of a few more bucks?" — Mr. L.O.V., Toronto.

While the word shampoo would possibly be more fitting around a beauty parlor, in garageman's language it simply means washing the grime and salt off the engine, especially the electrical components.

The engine's cooling fan draws in grime from the roads, which mingles with oil seepage that settles on various parts of the ignition system. In damp, foggy weather this coating of muck becomes a conductor and tends to ground the high voltage long before it has a chance to reach the spark plugs and ignite the fuel.

Until the past year or so, few garages suggested this vitally important service to their customers. When tuning my own car, if I had to skip one or the other, I'd be tempted to miss the tuneup and take my chances on washing down the ignition system.

After everything is thoroughly cleaned and the tuneup is completed, the ignition system should be sprayed with a moisture-proofing chemical.

This washing and spraying operation only costs a few dollars and it does not call for expensive equipment. When running my own shop we made balk use from copper tubing and before starting a tuneup the engine was blasted down with cleaning solvent. Such defects as a cracked coil or distributor cap, or deteriorated insulation on the high tension wires, cannot be detected when buried under a coat of grime.

In the wee hours of the morning while driving through heavy rain on the highway recently a friend of mine found out the hard way about the effects of a dirty ignition system. After hitting several deep paddles the engine quit and he and his fiancee shivered for an hour on the side of the road before an O.P.P. officer dried out the ignition with paper tissue and got him going.

We sometimes hear that certain engines will not start when damp, but this is strictly a myth. Properly maintained, a car will start regardless of moisture. A washdown and moisture-proofing spray each spring and fall is usually enough, but when a car is continually driven through muddy grime and mud, it may be necessary as often as once a month.

NOTE: Letters from readers with hard to pin-point car problems are most welcome, but please include: year and model, number of cylinders, mileage, standard or automatic transmission, power equipment, brief outline of previous repairs and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Campbell Hints Leafs Could Find Selves In Western Ranks

LOS ANGELES (CP) — President Clarence Campbell hinted Sunday night that Toronto Maple Leafs may be moved into the Western Division of the National Hockey League if Vancouver is awarded a franchise for the 1970-71 season.

Campbell told an impromptu news conference that one of the conditions for Vancouver's entry into the 12-team league will be that it must compete in a division with another Canadian club—either Toronto or Montreal Canadiens.

"It would be extremely unfair to ask Vancouver to play in a division dominated by American clubs," Campbell said.

"The next expansion will be two teams and will entail a realignment of the teams we now know them. Geography is a prime factor, but there must also be a parity of play."

Campbell said the 1970-71 expansion would bring a balanced schedule of 78 games with the clubs playing each other six times during the regular season.

Campbell was in Los Angeles for the third and fourth games of the Stanley Cup semi-finals series between the Kings and St. Louis Blues and said this could be the year for a surprise in the finals.

The Blues won their eighth consecutive playoff game Sunday, eliminating the Kings with a 4-1 victory and now await the winner of the Montreal-Boston Bruins series, now tied 2-2.

"St. Louis is getting closer to the Eastern Division clubs . . . they have a solid hockey team with enough experienced players to break out and win if the game is close," Campbell said.

"The Eastern winner is going to be tired and bruised after a tough series and St. Louis will be well-rested. I'd be surprised if they don't win a few games."

The Blues met the Canadiens last year in the final bowing in four games and they haven't beaten Montreal in two years.

It says right here in my beginner's handbook of hockey that when a penalty causes the team of the first part to play at a numerical disadvantage, the team of the second part shall have a better opportunity to score.

The Bruins of Boston obviously do not make it to the library very often, and Messrs. Edwin Westfall and Derek Sanderson are positively illiterate in the ignorance they display of the aforementioned standard shinny procedure.

There is absolutely no excuse for their blatant stubbornness in refusing to abide by one of hockey's most honored traditions while cheering to play OFFENSIVELY in killing penalties.

To rub salt into Montreal wounds, the pair each contributed a goal to the 3-2 Bruin cause Sunday afternoon while staving off the Canadiens' power play.

Their antics marched the fourth and fifth comedians the Boston dogs have turned the trick in this spring's Stanley Cup festivities.

Montrealers find the foot particularly awkward to explain, their constipated power play being the prime reason for the 1966-67 NHL rule change permitting a player serving a minor penalty to return to the ice when a goal was scored by the opposition.

Meanwhile the Habs had five manpower advantages yesterday, with Jacques Lemaire's first-period shot providing the only power of the power play.

Largely through the efforts of Westfall and Sanderson, the Bruins now have the enviable accomplishment under their belts of only giving up five playoff goals in 61 enemy power play situations. (It should come as no surprise — the Bruins only had 53 regular-season power play goals against them in a whopping 351 opposition chances.)

Boys being boys, the boisterous Beantowners have already logged over 300 penalty minutes in their eight playoff outings to date. This makes penalty-killers Westfall and Sanderson prime candidates for the Conn Smythe Trophy — still up for grabs secretary of the Toronto Police Department — for post-season conduct above and beyond the call of duty.

And how about that Bobby Orr!?!?

Or, as Claude Ruel would punctuate it, %x%&dra%&%$!

Master Orr, who passed up his third straight year of junior hockey eligibility to be here in Boston . . . got his first Stanley Cup goal Sunday, the winner as it turned out.

Not scoring a playoff goal was about the only thing short of starring in the Ice Follies, that Orr had not accomplished on skates before Sunday.

The bashful 21-year-old has been really tossing back the cods up home in Parry Sound as he continues to dominate a team's game while in the infancy of his NHL career.

Orr has been toeing on a dime to side-step would-be Hab grabbers. In contrast, the once-agile J. C. Tremblay appears lucky if he can make the same pivot in the confines of the Royal Canadian Mint.

Now that the Bruins have galloped out of the valley of death to square things with the Habs, what may be the critical factor in Tuesday's fifth game in Montreal is the expected absence of charleyhorsed Derek Sanderson.

If Boston can generate enough electricity without their sideburned spark plug, they could scratch their first Cup engravings since 1941.

Steady Eddie Squares Set for Bruins

Sanderson Out At Least a Game

BOSTON (CP) — He is proclaimed as "Steady Eddie" by the banners in Boston Garden but he has an unsteadying influence on the opposition—Montreal Canadiens.

Steady Eddie is Ed Westfall, the Bruins' centreman, penalty-killer and jack-of-all-trades.

Westfall was the prime mover Sunday in Boston's 3-2 win over the Canadiens that tied the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final 2-2.

The fifth game is scheduled for Montreal Tuesday, the sixth in Boston Thursday and the seventh, if necessary, likely Sunday afternoon in Montreal.

Westfall scored near the three-minute mark of the first period Sunday with Boston newcomer Garnet Bailey in the penalty box. At 15:49 of the same period he assisted on Derek

ED WESTFALL

Sanderson's eighth playoff goal —also with a team-mate in the box—and then fed a perfect pass to defenceman Bobby Orr, who scored the winning goal late in the third period.

For Canadiens, Jacques Lemaire got a power-play goal in the first period. Lemaire's goal —his third of the playoffs—was sandwiched between the Westfall-Sanderson efforts.

Montreal defenceman Serge Savard got the other Montreal goal late in the third period.

Sanderson received a severe charleyhorse in the first period and missed the rest of the game with the exception of a short turn in the second.

"The doctor told me I wouldn't be able to make the trip to Montreal," the player said. "I might be out for a week because the bruise is a big one."

Westfall said he feels the pressure now is on Montreal.

"The momentum is in our favor now and remember Montreal had to come from behind in both games there to win in overtime," he said.

Westfall filled in for Sanderson as well as doing his regular shift with his own wingers.

Montreal coach Claude Ruel claimed that Gilmour didn't call a penalty against Boston's Ken Hodge when he caught Montreal's John Ferguson along the left eye with a stick near the eight-minute mark of the third period, Ferguson was forced to retire for repairs, but returned in time to set up Savard's goal.

"And he (Gilmour) was there when another Boston player gave Rogatien Vachon the stick behind our goal, but he didn't call a penalty," Ruel said.

Vachon, who replaced Gump Worsley—out with a hand injury —in the Montreal nets had an altercation with Bailey late in the third period. Vachon swung his stick at the Boston player and players from both benches stazed out to menace each other. However, nothing serious developed.

Westfall's opening goal came at 2:55 of the first period on a long pass from defenceman Dallas Smith.

Lemaire's power-play goal, with Boston's John MacKenzie in the box, broke Boston Gerry Cheevers' shutout string on home ice at 108 minutes and 51 seconds. Cheever's was working on his fourth consecutive home-ice playoff shutout when Lemaire scored.

At 15:49 of the period, Sanderson picked up a loose puck behind the Montreal net, skated around in front and jammed it between Vachon's legs.

There was no further scoring until Orr's winning goal at 18:13 of the final period when Boston power playe combined on a nifty passing play with Westfall.

Ruel yanked his goaltender with 70 seconds remaining in favor of a sixth attacker and it backfired when Savard tipped in Ferguson's long, low shot from the left side.

A crowd of 14,650 Boston fans had the Gardens in a constant uproar during the hectic third period.

Montreal's Bobby Rousseau suffered a charleyhorse when he fell with Orr in the third.

The Bruins outshot the Canadiens 32-28 and drew seven minors, one major and Murphy's misconduct. Montreal had eight minors and one major.

The Bruins host for Montreal and Tuesday's game late today.

Derek Sanderson played less than two periods Sunday as Boston Bruins beat Montreal Canadiens 3-2, but the scrappy centre still managed to score a goal and add an assist.

The Bruin centre is tied for most goals in this season's playoffs, eight, the same as team-mate Phil Esposito and Red Berenson of St. Louis Blues.

BREAKS DEFENCE — Boston Bruins' Ed Westfall plows into Montreal Canadiens' Jacques Laperriere (2), and goalie Rogatien Vachon, as he scores Boston's second goal in the first period of their National Hockey League playoff game at Boston Garden Sunday afternoon. Watching is Canadiens' Serge Savard (18). Boston won 3-2 to even the series 2-2.

Roughest Cup Ride Still Ahead of Blues

LOS ANGELES (CP) — St. Louis Blues are two-thirds of the way to their first Stanley Cup, but the final third of the journey will be difficult.

"I know it's going to be tough in the finals," said St. Louis manager-coach Scotty Bowman Sunday night after his National Hockey League team downed Los Angeles Kings 4-1.

That victory, coupled with a 5-2 decision for the Blues from Saturday night, gave St. Louis the best-of-seven semi-final series in four straight games.

The Blues will meet the winner of the semi-final series between Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens. That series is even at 2-2.

The Blues have never defeated the Canadiens and will be underdogs against either Montreal or Boston.

Bowman was bursting with pride Sunday night about his team's undefeated record in Stanley Cup play this season. The Blues ousted Philadelphia Flyers in four consecutive games in a quarter-final series.

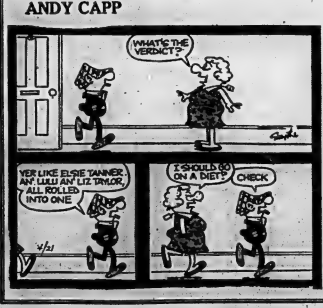
Los Angeles coach Red Kelly refused to discuss widely-circulated rumors that he will not be back with the Kings next season.

"I'm not saying anything right now," he said. "I'm downhearted about the game and so are my players."

Kelly credited the St. Louis sweep to the Blues' superior defence and checking.

Sunday night's game was dreary, with the Kings playing as if they realized the series was over.

Scoring for the Blues were Terry Crisp, Red Berenson, Gary Sabourin and Camille Henry. Ed Joyal replied for the Kings.



Los Angeles fans also sensed that the Blues were too much for the Kings. Only 7,388 showed up Sunday compared with 12,523 Saturday night.

St. Louis scorers Saturday were Frank St. Marseille, Ab McDonald, Noel Picard, Crisp and Sabourin. Bill Flett and Skip Krake connected for the Kings, who defeated Oakland Seals in a strenuous seven-game quarter-final series.

One of the few highlights for the Kings during the weekend was an assist gained by goaltender Gerry Desjardins Saturday night on Flett's goal.

He became only the third goaltender in Stanley Cup history to be credited with an assist. Jacques Plante of the Blues gained one last Thursday in St. Louis and Johnny Bower had one in 1963 with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Player Has $30,000 to Finance 3-week Vacation from Golf

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Gary Player went flying home to South Africa today for a three-week vacation from golf and armed with $30,000 to finance the holiday.

"From tee to green, this is the finest I've ever played," Player said Sunday after winning golf's $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

He had a final-round 72 for 284, four strokes under par for four trips over the demanding 7,114-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Lee Trevino, U.S. Open champion, took a pair of one over pars on the back nine, fell out of a share of the lead and finished in second place, two strokes back at 286. He had a final round 74.

Arnold Palmer, with a 71, and Dave Stockton, 70, tied for third at 288.

The final round was strictly a two-man fight between Player and Trevino as most of the rest of the elite field of 32 struggled and strained with the deep, clinging rough.

They were tied starting out and remained there most of the way. Player finally moving in front to stay when Trevino had a stroke on each of the 13th and 14th holes.

It was Player's first tour victory in the United States since he won the U.S. Open at St. Louis in 1965. And the $30,000 was the biggest cheque he's ever pulled down.

"I can use the money," he quipped. "I've got a wife, five kids and 30 horses to feed."

Player, current British Open champion, lauded the tournament "as one of the top six of the world."

"I may have had a slight advantage. I'm more used to playing a course like this, one with rough that penalizes a bad shot.

"Most of the tour events in this country are just beautiful contests. But this course is different. It makes you earn your pars. I think that's right. You should have to earn them. Just like you have to earn everything else in life.

"It's a lovely feeling to win this one. Their Tournament of Champions. It's self-explanatory."

Hawk Sits Tight

BOSTON (AP) — The baseball world awaited the final outcome today after Boston Red Sox traded Ken (Hawk) Harrelson, who responded by retiring from the game.

Trade of the long-haired, mod-dressed, outfielder-first baseman to Cleveland Indians produced the biggest furore among New England sports fans in years. Many of them picketed Fenway Park Sunday, carrying signs and chanting "We want the Hawk" as the Red Sox defeated the Indians 9-4 in the windup of a weekend series.

Meanwhile, all of the players involved in the deal were kept out of action at the request of American League president Joe Cronin pending final disposition of the case.

Harrelson, 27, said in announcing his retirement Sunday that it would cost him between $500,000 and $700,000 in lost business opportunities to leave Boston.

"It was just not economically feasible," he told a news conference.

The trade, announced Saturday, sent Harrelson and lefthanded pitchers Dick Ellsworth and Juan Pizarro to Cleveland for catcher Joe Azcue and right-handed pitchers Sonny Siebert and Vicente Romo. The status of the deal, and of the other players, was up in the air in the wake of Harrelson's announcement.

Galt Nears Goal

VICTORIAVILLE, Que. (CP) — Galt Hornets jumped into a 2-1 lead in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals Sunday night when they defeated hometown Victoriaville Tigers 3-2 before 1,700 fans.

The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played here tonight before the series, if necessary, returns to Galt for the last two games Thursday and Friday.

Corby Adams, a reserve player from Barrie Flyers, scored two Galt goals, the third coming from Orillia Terriers' Doug Kelcher.

Sports On All Fronts

Buffalo Bisons finally found home ice in their advantage Sunday and pounded Hershey Bears 8-0 in the fifth game of the best-of-seven semi-finals for the American Hockey League's Calder Cup. The Bisons, who dropped their first two home games in Hershey, now trail the Bears 3-2 in games with play resuming Wednesday in Hershey.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Golf professional Wayne Vollmer, 24, of Vancouver says he may forsake the Canadian circuit this year because the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association won't invite him to its championship tournament here in August. Eligibility for the $25,000 event requires Class A status, meaning in Vollmer's case five years' membership in the CPGA. He joined in 1967.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Santa's Fury, with Herve Filion in the saddle, captured the featured $30,400 Spirit of '76 pace at Liberty Bell Park Saturday night. Filion, a Montreal native, went on to win three other races and moved into a tie with Jim Larsents for leading driver at this meeting. Each has 48 victories.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ralph Hutton of Campbell River, B.C., went on a record-breaking swimming spree during the weekend but had to share the limelight with two girls and a youth from Washington clubs. Three of Hutton's wins in the Canadian short course swimming championships Friday through Sunday set both open and native records. His fourth victory broke one of his own native standards.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elgin Baylor scored 29 points, 12 of them in the crucial final period, to bring Los Angeles Lakers a 104-96 victory over Atlanta Hawks Sunday and a 4-1 triumph in their Western playoff final series of the National Basketball Association. The Lakers advanced to the NBA championship best-of-seven set against Boston Celtics with the opening two games in the Los Angeles Forum Wednesday and Friday night.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — John Cannon, formerly of Montreal, defeated a field of 21 Sunday to win the Riverside continental grand prix for Formula A cars. Cannon, 32, a former RAF pilot now living in California, was 30 seconds ahead of California Lothar Motschenbacher. Cannon drove a Chevrolet-powered Eagle and Motschenbacher a McLaren Chevy. Toronto's George Eaton, out for his first race in an open-wheel Formula A car, finished seventh and won $600.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Dale Douglas finished with 66 and 69 Sunday to win $1,000 top money in the Azalea open golf tournament by three strokes with a 275 total. It was his first victory in seven years on the tour. The 35-year-old from Denver, Colo., had opened the tournament with a pair of 70s, giving him a nine-under-par total over the 6,575-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. Al Balding of Toronto finished with 71 and 70 for 282, worth $800. Also tied at 282 were Wilf Bloemsilt of Winnipeg who had final-day rounds of 70 and 73 and veteran Sam Snead who shot 82 and 71.

Clendenon Clouts One

Northern Exposure Warms Up His Bat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Donn Clendenon's first exposure to springtime in Canada left him cold, but the second time around it was Chicago Cubs' turn to suffer.

Clendenon, acquired in a winter trade from Houston Astros, finally started swinging for Montreal Expos during the weekend.

Saturday, the big first baseman went 0-for-5 at the plate as the Expos dropped a 6-5 extra-inning verdict to the Cubs in 30-degree Montreal.

Sunday, the mercury at Jarry Park soared to 46-plus and Clendenon hit a three-run homer that carried Montreal to a 4-3 victory in the nightcap of a doubleheader, ending Chicago's winning streak at seven games. Rookie Mike Wegener, with late relief help from Dan McGinn, stalled Clendenon's first inning blast stand up after the Cubs took the opener 6-3 behind the five-hit pitching of Dick Jenkins, a native of Chatham, Ont.

In NL single games, New York Mets handed St. Louis Cardinals their seventh loss in as many home games, 11-3; Los Angeles Dodgers ran its winning string to five games by ripping Houston Astros 7-1; San Francisco Giants shaded San Diego Padres 3-2; Cincinnati Reds drubbed Atlanta Braves 9-3; Cincinnati Reds drubbed Atlanta Braves 7-1 and Philadelphia Phillies took Pittsburgh Pirates 7-1.

After striking out twice in his Saturday debut, Clendenon collected as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning of Sunday's opener. Then, after Sandy walked and Mack Jones singled in the first inning of the night-cap, Clendenon tagged Joe Nieknro for his first hit, as an Expos opposite field homer over the right field fence.

Kevin Collins' two-run homer keyed a five-run fifth inning burst that swept the Mets past the Cardinals, who have lost four games in a row and eight out of 12 over-all. Jerry Grote belted a three-run double in the ninth and Ron Swoboda delivered three more New York runs with a double and triple.

Wes Parker's third homer of the year broke a 1-1 eighth-inning deadlock at Los Angeles and gave Claude Osteen, 3-0, the pitching decision in a southpaw duel with the Astros' Denny Lemaster.

Pitcher Bob Bolin's two-run double in the ninth inning propelled the Giants to their sixth victory in seven early-season meetings with San Diego.

Jim Maloney fired a six-hitter for his first bit, as an Expos-an opposite field homer over the run honor, leading the Reds past Atlanta.

Rich Wise, who pitched the first seven innings, and reliever Barry Lersch held Pittsburgh to three hits while Rick Joseph drove in three runs to spark the Phillies' attack.

In Saturday games, Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 8-6, New York nipped St. Louis 2-1, Atlanta shutout Cincinnati 4-0, Los Angeles defeated Houston 5-4 and San Francisco beat San Diego 5-3.

Harrelson Hardly Missed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ken Harrelson had hardly said goodby when Gerry Moses made a bid for the replacement role.

Rookie Moses knocked in five runs—four with a grand-slam homer—to power Boston Red Sox to a 9-4 victory over Cleveland Indians Sunday.

The 6-foot-3, 205-pound catcher from Yazoo City, Miss., unleashed his production just a few hours after Harrelson announced he would rather give up baseball than report to Cleveland to complete Saturday's six-man deal.

In other American League games, New York Yankee rookie Bill Burbach made his first major league victory a 2-0 success over Detroit, after the Tigers won the first game of a doubleheader 5-3; Chicago White Sox checked Seattle Pilots 3-2 and 13-3 thanks to a pair of timely homers by Bill Melton; Minnesota Twins socked California Angels 13-1; Kansas City Royals trimmed Oakland Athletics 7-5, after dropping the opener a doubleheader 5-1, and Baltimore Orioles defeated Washington Senators 2-1 before losing 5-3.

Moses, who had two homers in 18 trips during a brief trial with the Red Sox last year, socked his homer in a six-run second inning. He doubled home another run in the eighth.

Meanwhile, rookie right-hander Ray Jarvis yielded only two hits after coming on in relief in the first inning.

Burbach not only stopped the Tigers on five hits, but also scored the only run he needed.

Joe Pepitone's homer gave the Yankees a 2-1 lead in the sixth inning of the first game, but the Tigers wiped that out with a four - run seventh, climaxed by Norm Cash's two-run homer.

Melton cracked an upper-deck homer in the 10th inning of the first game to give the White Sox their victory, then lagged scoreless to spark a splurge of four second game homers.

Ron Hansen's three-run shot capped a five-run fourth in the nightcap and Duane Josephson, Buddy Bradford and Melton all homered in an eight-run sixth.

In the opener, Wayne Comer's leadoff homer in the sixth permitted the Pilots to move into a 2-2 tie, setting the stage for Melton's sixth inning clincher.

Minnesota's Dave Boswell allowed California only five hits.

New Commercial League Entry

Junior Softball Revived

STAFF — The area's junior - age softball players will have an opportunity to play for a Belleville team for the first time in three years this season, with the recent announcement that Richard Ellis will once again sponsor a junior softball team.

Ellis' team, to be called the Richard Ellis Printers, will play in the Commercial Softball League this summer and enter the Ontario Amateur Softball Association's provincial playdowns later in the season.

Printers' manager - coach Harold Reid said "I anticipate a good club this season; we've got the nucleus for a strong team and we'll hold open tryouts at the Alemita Park for any local boys who are interested in playing for the team this season."

"It's always hard to tell what you'll have in the first year, but the boys should gain valuable experience because they'll be looking at some pretty good pitching in the Commercial League this summer," the veteran softball coach and manager added.

Anyone under the age of 21 as of January 1st, 1969 is eligible to play for the Printers who will hold open tryouts at the Alemita Ball Park starting this weekend.

The initial practice will be held Sunday, April 27th at 1 p.m., and will be followed by practices on Monday, April 28, and Wednesday, April 30th, at 6.45 each night.

Reid added that the new uniforms which sponsor Richard Ellis' team will wear this season will likely be cream colored with blue and red piping.

The Printers entry into the Commercial Softball League makes it appear that the league will sports with a seven team setup this season, one team larger than last year's six team operation.

THIS IS HOW IT'S DONE — Former Junior "A" and Senior "A" lacrosse star Ken Lytle shows 14-year-old David England how to string a lacrosse stick at Saturday's OLA instructional clinic at Quinte Secondary School as other Belleville youngsters look on.

Lacrosse Veterans Run OLA Clinic

STAFF — More than sixty Belleville youngsters attended the Ontario Lacrosse Association's clinic, sponsored by the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association, Saturday at Quinte Secondary School, and received expert instruction from a pair of talented former lacrosse stars and referees.

Bob Dobbie, a member of Victoria B.C.'s three Mann Cup titlists in the years 1955-57 and Ken Lytle, a member of the Long Branch Minto Cup champions of 1955, and more recently a senior lacrosse star, gave the Belleville youngsters a comprehensive breakdown of Canada's National sport.

Lytle, an Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "A" referee, and Dobbie a former Senior "A" referee who officiated in the Eastern Division of the professional National Lacrosse Association last season, had a wealth of experience and wisdom to impart to the youngsters and coaches of the sophomore Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association, who attended Saturday's clinic.

The pair, who have been running the Ontario Lacrosse Association's clinics for the past five years, stressed the mastery of the game's fundamentals using films and diagrams to explain the game and various forms of strategy and then worked as a team to demonstrate moves and rule violations.

Films of past Mann Cup finals were used to explain offensive and defensive formations and strategy. Other films were shown to reveal the necessity and nature of equipment and pads and to explain the duties of lacrosse referees.

The clinic was termed a "tremendous success" by Minor Lacrosse Association officials, who are considering the possibility of sponsoring an advanced clinic through the cooperation of the Ontario Lacrosse Association.

Gold Cup Classic Draws Near

STAFF — Defending champion Glen Hamilton of Belleville will be among the top local bowlers who will compete in the fourth annual Intelligencer Gold Cup Classic five-pin match play tournament, Wednesday, May 14th at the Bowl-O-Drome.

The Intelligencer Gold Cup Tournament Committee of Jack Canning, Bill Bateman and Orrel Hardwick have invited the top bowlers in Belleville and district, within an approximate radius of 25 miles, to compete in the tournament, which will have either 24 or 32 entries, depending on the response of area bowlers.

The field will be divided into groups of eight each and will play a round-robin schedule of single game matches with the two high bowlers in each group advancing.

Survivors will draw for opponents and lanes with each pair of bowlers playing a two-out-of-three series and the losers being eliminated.

Match play will commence between the remaining keglers until a winner emerges to take the top prize, of $60, and a supply of groceries donated by A and P Food Stores for a field of 24 entries, or $30, plus the groceries for a field of 32 entries.

An entry fee of $10, will be charged to cover lunches and the prize fund, and the bowler with the high single in each of the starting group of eight will receive $5. in prize money.

The prize money is scaled so that second place in a field of 24 entries is worth $30., with third spot being worth $20, and the next three places $12. each.

Forty dollars will be awarded to the second place finisher in a field of 32 entries. Third and fourth spots will be worth $20. each, while the next four places are worth $12. each in prize money.

Garrison Club Shows Well

STAFF — Members of the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club warmed up for this week's club championship tournament by travelling to Kingston Saturday and making a strong showing in the Limestone Invitational Tournament, which was held at Queen Elizabeth Collegiate.

Competing against players from Kingston, Cornwall and Prescott, the Belleville delegation showed well in all divisions, led by the fine performances of Bill Latchford.

Latchford advanced to the semi - finals of the men's Class "A" singles competition, then teamed with veteran Doug Grant to capture the runner - up title in the Class "A" men's doubles, and with Lorena Potts to earn a semi - final berth in the Class "A" mixed doubles event.

Lorena Potts teamed up with Billie Waldron to win the runner - up spot in the ladies' Class "A" doubles. Billie Waldron also paired up with Mike Church to advance to the semi - finals of the mixed doubles as local players did everything but capture a championship.

Chris Goyer of Belleville, who was eliminated in the quarter - finals of the men's singles by the eventual winner, Bernie Houghton of Kingston, also paired up with Mike Church to reach the quarter - finals of the men's doubles competition.

The club tournament will be held this week, with trophy presentations to take place Saturday, May 10, at the Garrison Club's official season - ending party at the Armories.

Midget Teams Get Royal Treatment

A pair of Belleville Minor Hockey Association midget house league teams got the royal treatment from their sponsors at weekend banquets.

Mayor Russell J. Scott was present Sunday at the Elks Lodge when that organization held a banquet and presented the Elks Black Hawks house league playoff finalists, with team jackets.

Don Francis, who is retiring after ten years of coaching Elks Lodge house league teams, presented a $100 cheque on behalf of the lodge to Hugh Sutherland, the past president of the BMHA, to help support minor hockey in Belleville.

Sponsor Richard Ellis threw a dinner banquet Saturday at the Sun Luck Gardens for his Kings, the midget house league champions, as the local hockey scene slipped into its summer respite.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE—Mrs. Elden Anderson and Mrs. Austin Dunk, of Rylstone; and Mrs. Ellis Hoard and Miss Alva Long, of Campbellford, spent a day recently in Peterborough, where five of the ladies celebrated April birthdays.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lisle and family, of Toronto spent Easter Monday with his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spencer and family.

Rawdon

RAWDON — Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Merrick spent a few days at Easter with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Taylor, Montreal.

Mrs. George Johnston Berkeley was a weekend guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Oliver, of Peterborough were a visit at the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Sharpe.

The women of Mount Pleasant made a presentation of gifts to Mrs. Frank Hutchinson on the occasion of her retiring today. Mrs. Robert H. Hoard and Mrs. Ralph Jeffs did the honors.

Mrs. Herbert Smith returned home recently from the Belleville General Hospital.

Miss Suzanne Bailey, Toronto spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Baileey.

The April group of the United Church Women at Mount Pleasant catered for a group of men at the church hall this past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Baker, of Peterborough spent some time recently with Mr. and Mrs. Will McAdam.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Milne, of Oshawa were weekend guests of her mother, Mrs. Leonard Sharpe.

Frankford

FRANKFORD — Mrs. Ralph Howard of Rochester, spent a few days last week with Mrs. Blake Patrick.

For the last dozen years a determined fight has been on against the smog—combination of fog and smoke—that enveloped London and other industrial areas for centuries. The scientists are obviously winning, with the backing of tough laws, though it will be a long time—if ever—before the air of this town gets really pure.

On an allied front, a big push to clean up Britain's inland waters is in progress. Slowly over the centuries the much-hymned pastoral streams have given way to industrial and other pollution until stretches of some resemble the dead waters of North America's factory-side rivers.

Many of the fish have disappeared. The salmon, for instance, once a highly industrialized Tyne and Tees rivers in the north. The Thames once river basin has been brought back to life. Even the Thames can be smelled by the fishermen of the Houses of Parliament.

Recently, the Thames has been making a comeback for fish, with the help of a $500,000,000 sewage system purifying the 300,000,000 gallons of sewage that goes into the Thames daily. STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: You see him slowly disintegrate before your eyes. Not his mind, but his body. At first we never suspected my husband might have Parkinson's. All he had was a tremor of one hand and what he called a "slowing up of his reflexes." Then gradually came the tremor of the arm, the expressionless face, the mincing steps — and now above all — the rigidity of his entire body. He is bent and stiff all over.

The doctor has prescribed the usual drugs for my husband and says everything is being done for him. I have heard lately of a new drug that may be helpful. Will you explain? Thank you. — Mrs. C.

Comment: Seeing your husband as you describe him, I doubt that you will agree that Parkinson's is occasionally called a "friendly" disease. Relatively it is, when compared to cancer, brain tumor, leukemia, etc. For it is true that Parkinson's doesn't shorten life, it is not inherited, there is no actual paralysis, it is not a disease so pain, it is not contagious, and there is little impairment of the mental faculties.

Your first answer to these observations, and a valid one, will be, "What's the good of all that? Who wants to live long with progressing Parkinson's disease?"

To live with a slowly disintegrating human being, formerly a strong voice in the family, a dynamic father or mother, husband or wife, is the most soul-trying experience one can endure.

I know how you must feel, Mrs. C., but as you suggest, there may be some new hope on the medical horizon.

The U.S. Public Health Service is studying a new drug in the treatment of Parkinson's. Scientists Seymour S. Kety and Marion, M.D., director of the National Institutes of Health, L-dopa may help "up to 75 per cent of patients." But he cautioned that it has "serious and unpleasant side effects that must be checked carefully. "Dramatic improvements are seen . . . NIH will carry out, within the shortest time compatible with sound scientific principles, a cooperative program for testing L-dopa and other compounds for efficacy and safety."

So you see, Mrs. C., there is hope. Parkinson's is no longer "the forgotten disease."

* * *

For Mr. V.: I have long suspected that there is some connection between weather and ulcers. A number of patients I have known would have flare-ups (hemmorrhage, increase in symptoms like pain and burning) every spring. It is therefore interesting to report the results of a four-year study of 365 men and women patients at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center in Chicago. They found that in persons under age 50, peptic ulcers are more likely to bleed or perforate when the barometer rises or falls.

For Mr. M.: When testes like scrotum, the technical name for it is "cryptorchidism."

As your son is not yet quite 2, it is still possible that they may descend to their normal habitat. If not, medical or surgical treatment may help. Some believe in a series of injections; others, in surgery.

One method is to wait until age 5 and then try the injections. If the testes do no descend, then surgery is performed.

As of now, I suggest further investigation. If there is no improvement by 5 years, let your pediatrician and surgeon decide on the best treatment indicated.

New Hope Is on Horizon For Parkinson's Disease

Science Winning War On London Peasoupers

LONDON (CP) — Once, a standby of the thriller writers and the yellow London fog from which a disembodied arm would emerge, a knife and then all would disappear again into the murk.

Sherlock Holmes would dive into it on occasion, to emerge with the solution, and around Limehouse Saz Rohmer-type Orientals would glide through it on evil errands.

Real-life Londoners more prosaically bumped into lamp posts, fell off curbs or bashed headlights.

But now the London peasouper of romance and nuisance is well on the way out, thanks to science. A heavy fog these days is one where you can't see more than half a block and getting around is somewhat less tough than, say, the Nova Scotia shore on a thick evening.

For the last dozen years a determined fight has been on against the smog—combination of fog and smoke—that enveloped London and other industrial areas for centuries. The scientists are obviously winning, with the backing of tough laws, though it will be a long time—if ever—before the air of this town gets really pure.

On an allied front, a big push to clean up Britain's inland waters is in progress. Slowly over the centuries the much-hymned pastoral streams have given way to industrial and other pollution until stretches of some resemble the dead waters of North America's factory-side rivers.

Many of the fish have disappeared. The salmon, for instance, once a highly industrialized Tyne and Tees rivers in the north. The Thames once river basin has been brought back to life. Even the Thames can be smelled by the fishermen of the Houses of Parliament.

Recently, the Thames has been making a comeback for fish, with the help of a $500,000,000 sewage system purifying the 300,000,000 gallons of sewage that goes into the Thames daily. Coal and lakes Chemicals and fish Salmon Harrymore Kind of Arabia's neighbor Military Frost Kind of weld Metal Important part of Holland

If he has any difficulty breathing, a machine registers its relationship to the amount of pollution in the air.

White-haired Prof. Lowther is optimistic about the battle for clean air.

"I think we are slowly winning," he says.

Besides this project, there are air research undertakings under way in such organizations as the weather office and such ministries as agriculture, health, fisheries, power and housing. Local councils conduct a continuing national survey based on research every 24 hours on measurement of smoke at 1,200 sites. School youngsters help gather these.

Now more than 3,000,000 premises—including about 500,000 residences—are covered by smoke-control orders. Domestic users can be forced to use smokeless heat such as gas, oil or electricity. The smoke from industrial users — including even those—has to conform to standard.

Officials say that most of the improvement has come from industry, with domestic users trailing. To the surprise of no one in London, special improvement is noted here. Heavily - industrialized Sheffield, once a dark spot, has picked up sharply.

One eye-opener has been the Black Country of the Birmingham area, so-called for the clouds of smoke from its factory chimneys. Now it may lose that name for it turns out a better grade of smoke than many other places.

Canada's Only Carrier

Bonaventure's Refit: Necessary Expense or Costly Waste?

HALIFAX (CP) — HMCS Bonaventure's position as the only aircraft carrier in Canada's navy has brought her into the limelight often, but never more so than in the last few months.

Built in Belfast, the Bonnie, as the 36,000-ton flattop is known to her crew, joined the Atlantic fleet in 1957 and became the saviour of Canada's anti-submarine forces.

She's been the subject of debates in the House of Commons and a current investigation by the parliamentary public accounts committee, which recently criticized the federal defence production department for the cost estimates it prepared for the carrier's mid-life refit.

Cost of the refit had been estimated at $8,000,000, but by the time Bonnie returned to the fleet 18 months later—in September, 1967—the cost had risen to $13,000,000.

Donald Jamieson, Defence Production Minister, has ordered a review of the work done on the vessel. Among some of the costs which shocked members of the committee were $734.40 for other repairs to a wooden desk and $258.20 for minor repairs to an 18-by-24-inch medicine cabinet.

An armed forces spokesman says the expensive refit was needed to prepare the carrier for service into the 1970s.

The Bonaventure was built and equipped specifically to hunt and destroy enemy submarines, the prime concern of Canada's navy. She carries up to 18 fixed-wing tracker aircraft and Sea King helicopters, both containing anti-submarine warfare equipment.

The keel for Bonaventure was laid in November, 1943, in Belfast and she was launched in February, 1945, as HMS Powerful, a fleet carrier of the Royal Navy.

However, at the end of the Second World War, the British navy didn't need another carrier and in May, 1946, final construction on the ship was ordered stopped.

She then went into mothballs until 1952, when the Canadian navy bought the hull and machinery and ordered construction resumed.

She was commissioned as HMCS Bonaventure—named for a small island bird sanctuary in the Gulf of St. Lawrence—on Jan. 17, 1957.

A crew was sent from Canada and the 700-foot Bonaventure underwent sea trials off the Irish coast.

A dense fog and crowds of shouting people greeted the carrier when she arrived in her dockyard berth in Halifax for the first time on June 27, 1957.

On board the Bonaventure when she returned were 335 members of the crew of Canada's old carrier, the Magnificent which was returned to its owners, the Royal Navy, earlier in the year.

The carrier, with a crew of 1,250, then joined the operational fleet. At the time she was carrying tracker aircraft, helicopters and Banshee jet fighters. However, the Banshees were taken out of service in September, 1959.

In the fall of 1962, while steaming towards a NATO exercise in the eastern Atlantic, Bonaventure became involved in a rescue mission which made the exercise anti-climatic for most of her crew.

A Flying Tiger Lines Super-Constellation, with 76 people aboard, crashed into the Atlantic, west of Ireland, after three of its four engines failed. The Swiss freighter Celerica picked up 68 of the passengers and transferred four of them to the carrier by helicopter for medical treatment.

The Bonaventure stayed on the search for two days, but no other survivors were found.

Two years later, in March, 1964, the carrier was back in preparedness again when she was ordered to carry a United Nations peacekeeping force from Canada to Cyprus. In her flight decks were stored 54 vehicles, 125 half-ton loads of ammunition and a similar amount of quartermaster stores. She made the 5,000-mile trip in 12 days.

She went back to the relative quietness of military manoeuvres only to come back into prominence two years later in February, 1965, when she put into Rio de Janeiro following an exercise in the Caribbean.

A Rio newspaper accused the Canadian sailors in port of being an extremely rowdy lot. Navy officials were concerned until a second newspaper in the Brazilian capital reported the reason for the story—the young lady who wrote it was peeved because she had not been invited to a press conference on the carrier.

The Bonaventure, now under the command of Captain R. H. Falls, is scheduled to go into drydock again this year for a hull inspection and to have barnacles scrapped from her bottom. Estimated cost of the job is $1,000,000.

A navy spokesman said ammunition has been unloaded from the carrier and she's ready to go as soon as word is received from the defence production department.

New Brunswick Pins Expansion On Multiple Industry Project

FREDERICTON (CP) — Possibility of a multiple-industry development, at a site yet to be announced, still dominates New Brunswick's economic prospects.

The proposal is for a massive project of 20 to 30 interrelated metal-working industries with a total investment of up to $700,000,000 and employment for 10,000 to 20,000 workers.

A decision calls for completion of the design by next fall. Robert J. Higgins, economic growth minister, has said it should be known in 1970 whether the project can be started.

The New Brunswick Development Corp., a provincial government agency, originated the idea and hired two European consultants for the planning. Half of the $400,000 cost for this study came from the Atlantic Development Board.

"If it pays off," said C. N. Mulder, New Brunswick acting economic adviser, "it will change the whole face of the area. If New Brunswick is to prosper, it must be in this secondary manufacturing area."

Metal-working plants were chosen because they require quite numerous intermediary industries and a large labor force.

Projects in the construction stage include a $14,500,000 deep-water general cargo port at Lorneville, a fishing community also on Saint John's outer limits.

The Bonaventure refit was approved by the ADB but no decision has been announced from Ottawa.

Clearing started at the site last summer. Tanks have been installed and facilities will include a floating dock far off shore. The first super-tanker is expected to arrive at the terminal, called Canaport, by next fall and the 220,000-ton vessel will be the largest ever handled on the Atlantic's eastern seaboard, excluding the Gulf of Mexico.

Less definite is a provincial proposal, still under study, for a $30,000,000 deep-water general cargo port at Lorneville, a fishing community also on Saint John's outer limits.

At Nackawic, north of Fredericton, construction work continues on the $70,000,000 St. Anne Pulp and Paper Co. Mill, an enterprise of Parsons and Whittemore Inc., New York.

A 50-per-cent increase has been predicted in the value of base metals produced in the Bathurst-Newcastle area during the next five years.

Premier Louis J. Robichaud has listed the government's priorities as education, industrial development and alleviation of poverty.

Provincial economists predict 1969 will be an average year in New Brunswick. The gross provincial product increased 7.2 per cent in 1968 and reached a record $1,300,000,000.

Experts Ask Gold Price Be Retained

TILBURG (AP) — "The official price of gold should remain unchanged at $35 an ounce, a group of monetary experts meeting in this Netherlands city agreed Saturday.

"A minority opinion favored a substantial increase in the price," their final report said, "but this was judged by the majority to be a regressive method of increasing world reserves and one which could distribute its immediate favors unfairly."

Biggest immediate benefits would go to South Africa, the world's biggest producer of gold. The Soviet Union also would profit.

The experts' opinions emerged in three days of discussion on "The Future of the International Monetary System, sponsored by the John F. Kennedy Institute at Tilburg's Roman Catholic University.

There were 125 participants. Representatives from the Soviet Union and other East European countries were invited, but only a group of Czechoslovaks turned up from that area.

Paul Bareau, economic adviser to the British publishing group IPC, said both academic experts and practical bankers viewed special drawing rights as a great new experiment on the way to an international monetary system independent of gold.

The main difference of opinion on the rights, he added, was whether the first issue should be $2,000,000,000, as planned so far, or whether there should be an initial "bonus issue" of as much as $5,000,000,000 to help meet accumulated shortages in world reserves.

He predicted that in either case the first issue would be made in 1970.

Bureau said there also was great interest in a proposal to allow the exchange rates of national currencies to fluctuate more than the one per cent now officially permitted. But no one, he added, came out for allowing rates to move with complete freedom.

The report said it would be highly desirable to link the Communist countries into a world-wide monetary system, but that this does not seem "realizable in the near future."

Caution Is Requested In Limiting DDT Use

CHICAGO (AP) — Governors of five states Sunday urged the United States government not to act hastily in setting maximum limits on how much DDT and other pesticides would be permitted in Great Lakes fish cleared for human consumption.

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie of Illinois, Gov. William G. Milliken of Michigan, Gov. Harold E. Knowles of Wisconsin, Gov. Edgar D. Whitcomb of Indiana and Gov. Harold Levander of Minnesota attended the two-hour conference.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration recommended recently that pesticide levels in Lake Superior and Lake Michigan fish be reduced to 3.5 parts a million.

The governors said, however, that present DDT levels of 12 to 20 parts a million are not harmful. They issued a joint statement saying "that available information indicates no demonstrated health hazard in the current pesticide levels in fish."

The governors asked the federal government for $200,000 to expand existing insecticide monitoring programs in the five states.

Senator Praises Press For Its Impartial Role

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Canada is blessed with a press that seldom abuses its freedom and "is usually able to distinguish between liberty and license," Senator Keith Davey told about 150 newspaper men Saturday.

Chairman of a Senate committee studying the problems of Canada's mass media, he told the 15th annual Western Ontario newspaper awards dinner that freedom of the press is the cornerstone of democracy and "one of our most cherished freedoms."

He praised The Canadian Press, Canada's national news-gathering and news-distributing service, for what he called its full, fair and factual coverage of Senate activities.

"Unhappily, not enough of that CP coverage . . . finds its way to your newspapers."

He said he believes the Senate is the "least known and most misunderstood institution in the country, considering its intrinsic worth to Canada."

Senator Davey said that teachers no longer are the most underpaid cross-section of Canadian society. Considering their role of social responsibility, members of the media must be "in many parts of Canada are underpaid compared to teachers."

He indicated that the economic situation of the newspaper industry will be one of the factors looked into by the senatorial committee on mass media of which he is chairman.

He said the committee's study will in no way infringe upon, tamper with or otherwise concern itself with freedom of the press.

He referred to 19 years he spent in private broadcasting.

"I suggest a mixed system of broadcasting with both public and private dissensions is required. To me the CBC set certain standards. It serves many uneconomic areas and it guarantees minority interest and minority coverage . . .

"The CBC does its very best at this time to make it most difficult for those of us who are its proponents. Separatism I think is an excellent case in point. I quite agree that the CBC should cover separatism in depth, but I hardly think it necessary for the corporation to finance the separatist activities."

Luvisi Presents Finale Of City Concert Season

By EUGENE LANG

If we could describe this season's attractions of the local Community Concert Association in terms of various gaits we could say that the first musical event of last fall limped across the BCI auditorium stage while the final one had the solidarity of an elephant and the fleet footed agility of a gazelle.

Both of these latter two qualities were much in evidence in the playing of the young pianist Lee Luvisi who made his debut here on Saturday evening before a large attendance that brought the 1968-69 series — the 35th season — to a close.

Having studied with such eminent keyboard masters as Rudolf Serkin and Mieczyslaw Horszowski at the famed Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, upon graduation from that institution he became its youngest faculty member and, in 1962, he took on his present position as artist-in-residence of the University of Louisville. He became a Laureate of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Concours in 1960 and since then has also staged concerts widely both in solo and with the leading American orchestras, besides being a regular participant of the Marlboro Festival in Vermont. This year he has made a five-week tour with the Indianapolis Symphony.

His program here was solidly entrenched in the 19th century classic and romantic literature for the piano in music of serious intent. The very seldom heard Polonaise Op. 89 of Beethoven provided the opener, this setting of the national Polish dance in three-quarter time being treated in a light-hearted and whimsical guise replete with introductory cadenza and gaily decorated embellishments. Mr. Luvisi gave a crisp rendition of this dance form which one associates with Chopin more than the mighty "B" with every measure breathing freshness and clarity.

In the realm of piano music we tread on hallowed ground when the late sonatas of Beethoven are mentioned. Of the five of these, Mr. Luvisi chose the first, namely the A Major Op. 101 which is a glorious work where all is expression and nothing constitutes mere display or technical contrivance. Our soloist relegated his brilliant technique into the shade (although this is a very difficult composition to play) so that all was detailed and immersion into the very core of the musical message. The opening movement was traced with suavity as opposed to the restless dotted rhythms that the pianist contrasted with insistent impatience in the second section.

Prefacing the soulful searching of the short introduction to the finale, we had the unclothed for marring of the entire sonata by the intrusion of applause by the usual segment of the audience that has not yet figured out how to read the printed program plus the sloppy seating of the latecomers.

The last movement, which is the weightiest was given a brisk interpretation that was interspersed with cheerful playing in the more lyrical thematic ideas. A robust handling of the fugue in the development section mingled with masculine muscularity as the sonata rushed on to its inexorable closing chords.

The first three of the six Moments Musicaux of which make up Schubert's Opus 94 were treated to subtle shadings and expressive colorings as Mr. Luvisi took th epiano into an excursion of classical simplicity tinged with romantic viewings. Chopin's Barcarolle, Op. 60, the only composition that he was to write under this title was treated to swaying motions that built up with ever increasing accuracy as chords pile upon each other in heaving bursts of ardor. Mr. Luvisi gave a most sensitive reading of this by clear articulation overlapping with deftness of pedaling that is so desirable in fully revealing the beauties of this 'little piece' so wrongly described by the program notes — it's really an elaborate number of large proportions.

To finish off an excellent recital, Mr. Luvisi gaily imbibed off the Steinway under his command as he tackled the major piano work of Morcete Moussorgsky, the tremendously difficult "Pictures at an Exposition," here using the composer's original score. This is a most descriptive suite that holds its various sections together by a connecting Promenade that always shows up in new plastic attire at each presentation. With every possible expression sprinkled throughout the gargantuan work our soloist spared neither his prodigious technique nor his art of keyboard portraiture as he sketched from eccentric strokes in "The Gnome" through whimsical etchings in "Tuileries" to massive delineation in "Catacombs" and wild brushings of octave displays in "The Hot on Foot's Legs". This all culminated in a full upheaval of the entire keyboard as "The Great Gate at Kiev" brought the pianist's hands into worn after waves of surging tone as brilliance paralleled power in the closing measures. A stupendous performance of a work not overly-endowed with niceties of writing for the piano, with stunning pleniism by the soloist. Two encores followed, both of popular appeal to pianophiles. The Berceuse Op. 57 of Chopin was played a trifle too fast, maybe because Mr. Luvisi was not fully unwound from his just finishing the Moussorgsky, but filigree of right hand was carcssingly poised over bass monotony that never seems so. Mendelssohn's "Hunting Song" Op. 19 No. 3 in A Major Closed a first-rate recital with rustic horns penetrating foliage of surrounding piano verdancy. Following the recital members of the executive along with the guest artist were entertained at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Wil-

Nixon Discovers Some Issues On Which to Fight Election

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, who concluded a two-day tour of Northern Ontario here Saturday night, says he has found some issues for the next election campaign.

"The government's certainly in bad shape over the new county school board system," he said in an interview after visiting Espanola and Sudbury Friday night and Kapuskasing and the Sault Saturday. "I think we've got ourselves a real issue."

The trip, in a chartered two-engine plane, was the first of what party officials called "saturation blitzes" of every area of the province.

The meetings, all regularly-scheduled Liberal riding-association gatherings, drew between 30 and 50 persons at each stop. Future trips will include public meetings.

At all three of the major meetings—Espanola, Kapuskasing and the Sault—Mr. Nixon said the government has too long treated Northern Ontario as "some kind of remote frontier."

Before leaving Sudbury Saturday morning, he announced the Liberals will hold a party conference there this fall in formulate policy on Northern Ontario.

"It is my decision that by the end of 1970 we have a full northern policy," he said.

He told the meetings it is not enough to promise that all minerals from area mines will be refined in the province. The Liberals believe they should be refined in Northern Ontario.

The party also believes the area should be central in the federal government's proposed satellite communications system because it is "the electronic crossroads of the world," free from man-made interference. Kapuskasing could be the nerve centre of North America.

He also proposed creation of a northern development board, composed of local representatives from labor, business, industry and political parties, to promote industry in Northern Ontario and provide a direct link to the legislature.

Mr. Nixon said he found discontent everywhere he went about the new system to consolidate county school boards.

Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton should bring down a new school raising education grants before some communities get too deeply in debt from increased school costs, he said.

Grants decreased to 42 from 48 per cent this year, but the government should be paying 50 per cent of education costs, he said. The Liberals favor a gradual transfer of 80 per cent of school costs to the province.

The education issue brought an unexpected visitor to the Espanola meeting—Max McNally, the Progressive Conservative mayor of nearby Massey. He and his council have threatened to resign rather than accept higher education taxes.

"If we still a Conservative," he said as he exchanged pleasantries with the Liberal leader. "I'm sure the government is going to do something about the situation."

Anglican Asks More Meetings To Study Church Union Plans

HALIFAX (CP) — More public meetings should be held to allow people to express their feelings on union of the Anglican and United churches, says Canon Ralph R. Latimer of Toronto.

Canon Latimer, Anglican executive secretary of the general commission on union which wound up a four-day session Sunday, said Saturday much of the apathy, indifference and opposition to union rises from misinformation, lack of information and myth.

He said there are pockets of isolation "big and small" where the information about union has not reached.

"Although there is very little co-operation in these places, the situation is improving."

Rev. A. B. B. Moore of the United Church, president of Victoria College in Toronto, told a public meeting Sunday that the proposed union must produce a church involved "in the world around us."

He was speaking at one of four congregational meetings held to wind up the sixth meeting of the commission.

Rev. R. B. Craig, United Church executive commissioner of the commission, said people must be assured they will not be cut off from the rest of the world when union occurs. "We must encourage the people to read the various publications dealing with union discussions," he said.

Mr. Craig said a large percentage of the clergy would like to see things remain as they are because they are afraid of being swallowed up by union.

Most Rev. H. H. Clark, Primate of the Anglican Church in Canada, said people at the local level must play a larger role in union discussions. Action on union must be taken now "or it will be too late, as the young people are becoming impatient and may not wait for us."

During the meetings, the commission agreed to publish a 6,500-word document, entitled A Declaration of Faith, and wait to get reaction from the congregations.

The report, prepared by a commission to aid in settling long-standing doctrinal controversies between the two churches, will be published in the June issue of The Observer, the United Church magazine, and the Canadian Churchman, a publication of the Anglican Church.

Seven Thousand Walk Forty Miles

OTTAWA (CP) — About 7,000 of an estimated 27,000 walkers in the Miles-for-Millions march Saturday completed the entire 40-mile route, officials of the walk for charity said Sunday.

Among the finishers in the walk, led off by Prime Minister Trudeau, was a prisoner of the federal penitentiary at Joyceville, Ont., for whom the RCMP, national penitentiary service and national parole board had pledged more than $10 a mile.

Officials were predicting they would exceed their goal of $400,000, which was calculated on the basis of only 23,000 walkers. No form estimate was expected before the end of the week.

Mr. Trudeau led off the march from Parliament Hill at 8 a.m. and completed 3½ miles before leaving for an engagement.

Sponsors pledge to pay various amounts for each mile their candidate walks. Marchers must have their mileage confirmed at checkpoints.

Last year 5,000 of the 23,000 walkers completed the 40-mile circuit.

Strictly Personal

Linguistic Hazards

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

An American manufacturer of brassieres and lingerie, recently opening its first advertising campaign in Europe for its products, found (to its surprise) that in some countries the languages have no exact equivalent for our word "sexy."

Where the word "sexy" appeared in the American ads, some such euphemism as "softly elegant" or "softly feminine" had to be substituted in the foreign copy — not, for the reasons of taste or morals, but simply because there was no brief and easy equivalent in the other language.

Actually, it is hard to believe that our own use of "sexy" is quite recent. My 1937 edition of the Webster-Merriam Collegiate Dictionary does not list the word; but it is to be found in the new 1967 Random House Collegiate edition, which is of comparable size and scope. (And even here it is tagged as "informal," rather than as "Standard.")

Translating even a commonplace word from one language to another is a hoodynoodoo of complication, where the wariest linguist might detonate a charge without meaning to. For instance, even in so international a game as bridge, what we in English call "the dummy" is known in France as "le mort" — the dead one. Unless a translator also knows bridge, he would unwittingly use the wrong word.

Again, if he were translating the bridge "dummy" into German, he would have it call it "Strohmann" — literally meaning "scarecrow" or "straw man." I once heard of an English bridge player telling an Italian kibitzer that he had "a leg toward rueber." Word for word, it was: "Io una gamba verso la gomma," but what the puzzled Italian got out of it was "I have a limb toward the eraser."

There is one breakfast food that cannot be advertised in Italy, because its brand name is a dirty slang word there. When Esso internationalized its "Put a tiger in your tank" ad slogan, it was forced to change it in France from "reservoir" (meaning "tank") to "moteur," because the former word was too suggestive in that particular context.

In the same way, advisers for General Motors quickly learned that "Body by Fisher" came out "Corpse by Fisher" in Flemish; and "Chevrolet Corvair" went what changed in Italy to "Tonica," because "water" is the idiomatic word for a bathroom, as in "W.C." And when Ivory Soap first got to Russia, it was called "soap made of elephant tusks."

Ironically, if you went to Paris and asked for "brassieres" and "lingerie," you wouldn't, get what you wanted — for in French, a brassierre is a child's vest, and lingerie is linen drapery. What you want are a "soutien-gorge" and "nouvelements."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For April 24

Your birthday today: Business and all material advantage are favored during the coming year, perhaps at the expense of some of time with loved ones. The opposite sex simply cannot be taken for granted now. Definite reward comes where e'er you make your deeper feelings known despite discouragement.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Emotionally important plans can be pressed successfully today; leave older people out. Use a simple approach!

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Pay no attention to delays except for further reflection on the important subtle changes that are at work. There is plenty of support if you stand firm.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Tact and patience assume peak importance today. The people most likely to cause you difficulty are beyond your reach; the people you can get at have no control over the issues.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Influential people may inadvertently mislead you with offhand comments. Follow your own intuition: make your own slow choices.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Trial and error search patterns (what you are doing) have some unknown factors. Don't let delayed responses, which are par for the course, bewilder you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Stick to well-worn routines. Crowds are not comfortable environment for you in this present phase. Be on the alert for an effort to exploit your sympathies for questionable causes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your tendency to take impersonal, offhand stances comes in good stead today. Let yourself gracefully out of the hassles. It is a day of confrontation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Co-operation is hard to come by today. Make use of the waiting to lay out more detailed plans. Some chance-taking has to be done, so pick the handiest alternatives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your tendency to immediate actions seems frustrated. You will simply have to stop and think carefully where you are and what you are trying to do, then figure some way out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Stay on the conservative path despite emotional urgings from various people for all sorts of reasons. Someone important measures beyond your range or ability without realizing the discrepancy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): For a quiet day, this one has a remarkable range for bickering. For once, try to remain silent while others prattle.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Everything depends today on the depth and quality of your emotional ties to those with whom you work. Adequate help is at hand if you will simply ask for it (quietly).

260 Hurt at Londonderry

British Troops Guard North Ireland Points After Bombings

BELFAST (CP) — British troops guarded key installations against sabotage today after weekend bomb blasts rocked Northern Ireland and rioting scarred the city of Londonderry.

The 6,000 British troops in Northern Ireland were under orders not to intervene in any civil disorders, leaving anti-riot duties to the police. The 3,000-man Royal Ulster Constabulary was reinforced by 1,000 special reservists and another 1,000 were to be called up, officials said.

Prime Minister Terence O'Neill called on the British army for help Sunday night after explosions crippled Belfast's power and water facilities and a series of firebombings left nine city post offices and a bus station blazing.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson returned to London from his country home at Chequers to confer on the situation and it was reported that Defence Minister Denis Healey would arrive in Belfast today.

Civil rights leaders warned that Ulster was on the verge of civil war.

The bombings were believed to be politically motivated, protesting the division of Ireland and Northern Ireland's membership in the United Kingdom.

The Londonderry riots were sparked by religious feuding, aggravated by charges of police brutality.

Two days of rioting in that city left an estimated 200 persons injured—116 Saturday and 150 Sunday. The official casualty toll listed 100 policemen and 79 civilians in hospital.

Roman Catholics, who comprise about a third of the province's 1,500,000 people, first took to the streets of Londonderry last October, charging that Protestants were favored in jobs, housing and local voting powers. The Protestant Unionists in turn accused the Catholics of seeking to sever ties with Britain.

In Londonderry on Saturday, the police intervened to head off a clash between Catholics and Protestants, but the demonstrators turned on the police. In the fighting that followed, a mob tried to storm a police station but was beaten back by police charging with nightsticks.

Fighting resumed Sunday when a crowd of about 300 in Londonderry's predominantly-Catholic Bogside district stoned the police, and the police charged the crowd.

Demonstrators in at least six other Northern Irish towns blocked main roads in sympathy with the Londonderry rioters.

Bernadette Devlin, a 21-year-old civil rights leader elected to Britain's Parliament last week, joined a sit-down demonstration at Dungiven, 15 miles from Londonderry on the road to Belfast.

She said she witnessed the Londonderry riots and accused the police of "sheer animal brutality."

Police spokesmen denied the brutality charges and said the fact that 180 officers were injured "speaks for itself."

While the Ulster constabulary were occupied in Londonderry, an explosion cut water supplies to Belfast from the Silent Valley reservoir in the Mourne Mountains. Engineers said water would have to be rationed in large areas of the capital.

Another explosion heavily damaged an electricity pylon at Kilmore, eight miles from Armagh.

Both bomb blasts were near the Irish Republic border, lead to speculation that the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which has been mostly quiet during the civil rights campaign, has gone on the offensive.

O'Neill's decision to call on British troops, described as the most significant taken by an Ulster government in 25 years, was reported to have been reached after telephone consultations with Wilson and his cabinet.

After a five-hour session of his own cabinet Sunday, O'Neill also set up an emergency security committee of four cabinet ministers to deal with all matters affecting the province's security.

The announcement which, followed the meeting said:

"In response to a request from the government of Northern Ireland, her majesty's government in the United Kingdom have agreed to make military personnel available for guard duty at key public utility installations."

The announcement stressed that the troops would be used for guard duty, not riot patrol.

Since the partition of Ireland in 1920, Northern Ireland has remained part of the United Kingdom with a considerable measure of domestic autonomy, including its own parliament and government. The ruling Unionist party, which is Protestant-based, is committed to maintaining its ties with Britain.

"I'd like the butter on my toast to be spread exactly one thirty-second of an inch thick this morning."

Municipal Voice in Setting Policies Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities today demanded a voice in intergovernmental bodies dealing with policy on major municipal concern.

In its annual brief to the Canadian government, the federation said the constitutional review now under way should be expanded to consider the request.

If the federal government agreed, the federation was ready to make specific proposals to the secretariat of the constitutional conference, the brief said.

A federation delegation led by Mayor A. M. Campbell of Scarborough, Ont., presented the brief to Prime Minister Trudeau and several of his cabinet ministers.

The brief said municipalities have the responsibility of achieving a variety of goals in society, but they lacked the constitutional ability, the taxing authority and the legislative powers to achieve these goals.

No longer could Ottawa shrug its shoulders and say the municipalities were the creatures of the provinces, the brief went on.

"This kind of constitutional argument is not meaningful," it said.

"In the first place, the problems of the municipalities are provincial problems and conversely: in the second place, with over 30 per cent of Canada's population accounted for by 18 urban areas, the federal government cannot take the view that the spectrum of urban frustrations suffered by these Canadians has no constitutional relevance to federal jurisdiction."

It was beyond dispute that Ottawa had a responsibility "with regard to the financial health of municipal financial institutions and the federal government cannot disregard urban and municipal financial requirements when discussing fiscal arrangements with the provinces."

In determining financial priorities, the federal government was failing to recognize the limited revenue potential of the lower forms of government.

The brief said treasury board, cabinet and the finance department "must make absolutely sure that the facts on urban needs are available to it in all and any future assessment of priorities."

Resolutions passed by the federation's annual meeting in 1968 had called for a simplification of the tax system and improvement of the municipal finance picture.

The brief asked for an early opportunity to discuss these resolutions with Finance Minister Benson.

In other matters the brief expressed concern over the halt in the approval of urban renewal studies, schemes and projects.

Municipalities now faced serious uncertainties because of the Ottawa action and the government was asked to define and announce its new urban renewal policy "without delay."

Public housing should be proceeded with as a matter of special urgency.

Catholic Pupils to Put MPPs on Spot

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Catholic Student Federation intends to put members of the provincial government on the spot concerning Roman Catholic secondary school grants.

A motion to have each elected legislature member interviewed was passed here Sunday at a conference of the fledgling federation.

A total of 250 delegates and federation governors representing 65 of 75 Roman Catholic secondary schools across Ontario attended the two-day meeting.

The federation became an official body six months ago as a non-violent, non-demonstrative student organization concerning itself with educational needs.

President Joe Redican, 17, a Grade 13 student at Michael Power school in Toronto, said the primary aim of his organization is "to keep the schools open" but he stressed that the federation wants to deal with all aspects of education.

The Ontario government supports Roman Catholic separate schools through grants only to Grade 10. Separate school supporters claim they are burdened with extra taxes and lack of grants put a financial hardship on the secondary schools. They fear a take-over by the provincial school system.

Humane Society Protests

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Humane Societies has sent a strong protest to Premier Robarts and his Ontario government against proposed provincial legislation allowing the release of animals from pounds for use in research.

It asked the government to allocate part of its medical research grants for development of alternate methods of research not involving the use of live animals.

Israeli Planes Mangle Egypt's Radar Network

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli warplanes streaked over Jordan again today and an Israeli military spokesman said they knocked out the major part of Egypt's early warning radar network. Amman Radio said it was Israel's heaviest air attack in more than a year.

A senior member of the Israeli general staff said the attack on two Egyptian radar sites in south Jordan was a partial answer to Egyptian artillery bombardments over the Suez Canal during the past month.

"There are still a lot of options open to us, and I think we will make use of them in due time," he added in a warning of further action.

Egypt meanwhile reported that its patrols crossed the Suez Canal again during the night to attack Israeli positions on the east bank.

Israel said its planes also hit two Arab guerrilla bases in north Jordan.

The Israeli spokesman told a news conference the radar sites hit today were Egypt's sole watch posts for Israeli aircraft and had compensated to some extent for the loss of the Sinai Desert during the 1967 war. Another spokesman said the sites blanketed Israeli air activity from Tel Aviv south to the Suez Canal.

It was believed Egypt's only radar stations left are within its own boundaries west of the canal.

Concessions Possible

Husak Goes to Moscow

PRAGUE (CP) — Czechoslovakia's new Communist party chief, Gustav Husak, went to Moscow today and his party's reform faction hoped he would return with some Soviet concessions.

Husak was welcomed at Moscow airport by Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev, Premier Alexei Kosygin, President Nikolai Podgorny and other top officials. This red carpet treatment indicated the Kremlin's pleasure that the pro-Moscow Husak had replaced Alexander Dubcek.

Husak formally took over the party controls Monday from the reform leader and left Prague a few hours later to attend a summit meeting of Comecon, the Soviet bloc economic organization.

The Prague reformists hope that Husak's energetic efforts to please the Kremlin will result in Soviet approval of a substantial credit in dollars or some other convertible currency to help Czechoslovakia ease its economic troubles.

They also hope Moscow can be persuaded to cease publication of Zpravy, the Czech-language propaganda sheet which the Soviet occupation troops distribute. It is particularly hated by—Czechoslovak students and other militants.

Though they realize there is little chance the occupation force will be withdrawn this year, the reformists are hopeful the Kremlin can be persuaded to move its troops in more isolated areas for the summer. Some of the garrisons now stationed in small towns around the country are a constant source of friction.

In Prague, students at the philosophy college of Charles University were expected to continue their protest sit-in today but with little hope of worker support.

Sirhan's Sentence Undecided

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Sirhan B. Sirhan may learn today whether he will receive life imprisonment or the death sentence for assassinating Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

A decision on the fate of the 25-year-old Jordanian immigrant was expected Monday from the seven - man, five woman jury which Thursday found him guilty of first-degree murder.

But after deliberating for 2½ hours, they reached no decision and were locked up for the night at a downtown hotel.

Prison Guard Tells Court Electric Torture Common

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — A former prison guard told a court today that African prisoners were given electric shocks — sometimes to their genitals — to get information from them.

The man, whose name was not disclosed by order of the judge, was giving evidence at the trial here of Laurence Gandar, editor-in-chief of the Rand Daily Mail, and Benjamin Pogrund, a senior reporter of the paper.

The two have pleaded not guilty to charges of publishing false information about prisons without taking reasonable steps to verify the information.

The guard said he worked at Cinderella prison in 1964 and 1965 and resigned after 1965.

He said Cinderella prison electric machines were used in the hospital on prisoners, who were stripped and put on a table on a wet waterproof sheet. Their bodies were then soaked, he said, and wires and electrodes then attached to any part of the body.

When prisoners were shocked, they usually screamed and had to be restrained by other prisoners.

He said he saw the procedure used on many occasions and was told it was to get information from the prisoners.

Police in Belfast Stoned by Rioters

Wilson Wants Voting Reform

BELFAST (CP) — Rioters stoned two police barracks Monday night in Belfast and threw flaming gasoline bombs in the streets, but British troops guarding key installations in Northern Ireland stayed out of sight.

Police scattered the crowd of about 100, and by midnight the city was quiet. There were no casualties.

The British government announced that Prime Minister Harold Wilson will meet soon with Prime Minister Terence O'Neill to grant more concessions to the 500,000 Catholics, one-third of Northern Ireland's people.

Officials of the Catholic civil rights movement issued a statement supporting the use of British troops and warning their supporters to stay off the streets to prevent more violence and bloodshed. The Civil Rights Oxford Committee sent a telegram to Wilson warning that civil war was possible and asking for further British intervention.

Premier John Lynch of the Irish Republic announced after an emergency cabinet meeting that he is seeking a meeting with Wilson and is sending Foreign Minister Frank Aiken to confer with United Nations Secretary-General U Thant about the situation in Northern Ireland.

Wilson was reported prepared to get tough over the one-man, one-vote issue in local elections in Ulster.

The main civil rights case is that present laws, which bar nearly 250,000 persons from voting in local elections because they are not home owners, are unfairly weighted against the Catholics.

Reports in Belfast today said O'Neill is ready to agree in the one-man, one-vote principal for local elections. His supporters said this concession would be accompanied by a postponement for at least one year of local elections due in 1970.

Poor Aided By Nixon's Proposals

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon today appeared destined to win new friends among the poor, the needy and state political leaders with a sweeping new tax reform proposal announced Monday.

But he also could become one of the least popular presidents among the business community and the rich, who usually look to Republicans in the White House as their friends.

Nixon sent a tax reform message to Congress Monday which calls for easing the tax load on the poor, imposing a minimum tax on the rich, taking away the seven-per-cent tax credit on capital investments—a favorite of the business community—and reducing for everyone the income tax surcharge to five per cent from 10 as of Jan. 1, 1970.

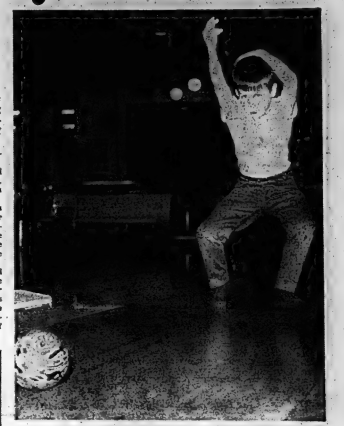
Last Miles Prove Tough

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — British yachtsman Robin Knox-Johnston hailed his way through a near gale into this old Cornish port today to complete man's first known solo nonstop voyage around the world.

A harbor cannon boomed a salute to the rugged 30-year-old merchant marine officer as he crossed the finishing line in his 32-foot ketch Suhaili after a 29,000-mile expedition.

High winds and a heavy sea foiled his attempt to sail directly into Falmouth harbor. Northeasterly winds forced him to zig-zag over the last few miles, delaying his entry by more than seven hours.

Air Canada Talks Delayed



MONTREAL (CP) — Two top trouble-shooters from the federal labor department met union negotiators today in an attempt to settle the strike that grounded all Air Canada planes Sunday night.

The negotiating team for the striking International Association of Machinists was originally scheduled to meet the management team face to face at 10 a.m.

But an hour later, there was no sign of the face-to-face encounter.

Teen-agers Sought In Probe of Wreck

TORONTO (CP) — Police said today they are looking for two teen-agers who were seen shortly before a CNR train derailment Sunday that killed two persons.

They said witnesses gave them the description of the two and a special seven-man team has been trying to trace them. Railway officials said the track switch had been tampered with, causing the accident.

Meanwhile, a CNR spokesman said the engineer of the derailed train probably didn't see he was running into an open switch until it was too late to stop.

One of the detectives working on the case said persons responsible for the accident must have known about CNE operations.

Korean Guard Duty Curtails U.S. Navy Role in Vietnam War

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. naval air operations in Vietnam are being curtailed and its 7th Fleet stretched to the limit with deployment of a 32-ship task force to protect U.S. reconnaissance missions off North Korea.

"We've got no slack," a navy officer commented after the defence department Monday announced assignment of an armada to the Sea of Japan, where a navy plane was shot down by North Korea last week.

One aircraft carrier and possibly other war ships of the 7th Fleet have been pulled from the Vietnam operations to form a new Task Force 71 deploying somewhere off North Korea.

Officers said this means the navy, contribution to the U.S. bombing campaign in South Vietnam and Laos will be cut by roughly one-third. The United States has been keeping three aircraft carriers on the firing line in the Gulf of Tonkin; for the time being this will be reduced to two.

The 7th Fleet's remaining four aircraft carriers are going into Task Force 71 along with three cruisers and 16 destroyers.

Thus, officers pointed out, all 7th Fleet carriers now are tied down on two fronts—the Sea of Japan and the Gulf of Tonkin.

How long the fleet can maintain both assignments under present conditions is a matter of concern to the navy. With its six carriers occupied, the 7th Fleet has no replacement flexibility.

Officers said that if the task force has to remain in the Sea of Japan for any extended period—a few weeks or more—the 7th Fleet would have to get some relief in the way of replacements from the U.S. Atlantic fleet.

Board Chairman Views Furor:

Education: 'Popular Hobby Horse'

BANCROFT — "Education is the popular hobby horse for people to ride this year."

James Clarke, chairman of Hastings county board of education gave this explanation for the current furor over education costs in the province, to the Bancroft Lions Club last night.

"It's a double-edged word," countered director of education Eric Runacres. "Grants are down at the time costs are up."

"The county budget for 1969 has been prepared," Mr. Clarke admitted. "It will be set by the board April 28."

Although Mr. Clarke refused to reveal any details of the budget before it is presented to the board, he admitted costs are higher this year.

"Teachers salaries will total $10 million this year," he told the Bancroft group. "We have begun this year to pay Canada pension plan contributions for teachers to the tune of $80,000 a year. We must pay a quarter-million-dollar bank interest because some municipalities will not collect their tax revenue until Dec. 15."

* * *

In former years, the independent boards now merged into county system, budgeted for a surplus to carry them through part of the following year until tax revenue was received. The purpose was to avoid interest rates on borrowed money. This practice was dropped by many boards in 1968 when creation of the county board was announced.

Mr. Runacres added that inclusion of the Belleville school for retarded children in the county system will increase the budget by $100,000.

"Costs are up in most areas because of the rising cost of living, but administrative costs are down," he assured his listeners.

Mr. Clarke said the combined salaries of all trustees in the county last year totalled $62,000. This year, under the county board, the figure has dropped to $42,000.

"People have still discovered the size of educators' salaries," the board chairman said. "Until this year they failed to realize that superintendents with small boards got $22,000 a year and many teachers were paid in the neighborhood of $10,000 a year."

Under the new provincial grant structure, "it's possible for costs to go down and the property tax levy to go up at the same time," the chairman said.

"Some townships in the past got 85 per cent of their educational costs paid by provincial grants," he said, "Now they will get 50 per cent in grants. Naturally, their tax levy will go up to collect the 35 per cent no longer paid by the province."

Mr. Runacres stood by a previous statement that he expected "no dramatic differencies such as some counties are experiencing."

"But I am disturbed by this budget because we can offer nothing new in educational advantages this year," he said. "We haven't begun to fight for equality of education in this county because of the provincial grant structure."

Public School Teachers Offered Salary Hike

Hastings county board of education has offered its elementary school teachers a salary increase in most levels of 12 per cent over the salaries paid last year by the Belleville public school board.

Salary comparisons are difficult this year because county teachers were paid by 13 individual boards in the county until merger into the Hastings system Jan. 1.

A teachers' college graduate with no experience has been offered $5,200, an increase of $500 more than the level one minimum salary Belleville public school board paid last year.

Annual increments of $300 are offered by the board, to a maximum for level one of $6,700.

Maximum salary offer by the board is $11,000 for a level four teacher with a university degree and teachers' college certificate. This is a 14 per cent increase over the maximum of $10,000 paid by the Bellville board in 1968-69.

Negotiations with both elementary and secondary school teachers are continuing, board chairman James Clarke said this morning. After salary schedules are settled the two groups will unite to negotiate fringe benefits.

Sidney Street Bridge Only Awaits Board OK

Contrary to what was indicated in a story in The Intelligencer yesterday regarding the city awaiting approval from the Ontario Municipal Board regarding its 1969 capital works approval, the Sidney Street bridge will not be part of this year's quota.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said today that first phase construction of the Sidney Street bridge was actually approved by the city's 1968 capital works quota.

Mr. Reynolds said all the city was waiting for now in connection with the Sidney Street bridge was the OMB approval of the vactual project.

City Contractor Wins OHC Project

Subject to receipt of architecturally - designed plans, the Ontario Housing Corporation has approved the awarding of contracts to Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd. to build 161 family and senior citizens housing units in Belleville.

The contract will be for construction of 96 family units and 65 senior citizens units.

The OHC in a letter to City Manager J. R. Reynolds said it had been working closely with the contractor and his architect, and it was anticipated the required drawings would be received shortly.

"I am very pleased to hear this — we need the housing," stated Mayor J. R. Scott today.

Mayor Scott said the amount of the housing contract would be for $1,700,000.

Mr. Rollins was out of town today and was not available for comment.

It is expected, however, that the 65 senior citizens' apartment units will be constructed on Turnbull street adjacent to the existing complex.

It was not learned where the 96 single family housing units would be located.

Conservative Women Hold City Meeting

Eighty community minded Conservatives Women attended at the regular meeting of Quinte Women's Progressive Conservative Association Monday evening to discuss the organization business and to commend Dr. R. J. Foster for his outstanding reappointment of Quinte Riding.

The meeting was presided by Mrs. C. Rendell, president who expressed pleasure at the large number of members and friends in attendance.

During the business section of the meeting, Mrs. L. Shore read the minutes in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. H. Vandusen.

Mrs. Rendell, president was pleased to report on the splendid financial position of the association.

Mrs. O. Smith convener for the Annual Dessert Bridge and Euchre gave a report on plans for the coming event on Wednesday, May 14 at 1.30 p.m. in St. Thomas' Parish Hall. All chairbridge will have a table to dispose of to members and friends. Mrs. Shore distributed another 150 dolls to be dressed for the underprivileged children's Christmas Fund.

The members of Ward seven, conducted an auction sale at the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Doris Ransom acting as auctioneer. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Devlin and members of Ward seven.

Mrs. Marion Wilson, president of the Quinte Arts Council was the guest speaker. She welcomed the association as an associate member of the Arts Council. Mrs. C. Rendell, is co-convener of reception for the performers and guests with members of the association assisting.

The subject for Mrs. Wilson's talk was the Mott Program, which was introduced to Flint, Mich., 25 years ago by a local philanthropist. An educational film, "To Touch a Child," was shown with Mrs. Wilson giving a comprehensive explanation of the subject.

The Mott Program itself was introduced in Belleville through a unique organization, under the guidance of the First Board of Education working through the city public schools, and receiving funds from the Mott Foundation.

One of the important features of the program in the Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott takes a peek through transit to check on construction progress for the new Unemployment Insurance Commission regional office in the east end of the city. Looking on is J. L. Stevens, UIC regional director.

UIC Staff Transfer Soon to Involve 100

Transfer of personnel from the Toronto regional headquarters of the Unemployment Insurance Commission office to the new Belleville location is now well under way with 40 persons working in temporary quarters at the Plaza.

J. L. Stevens, regional director of the new UIC office in Belleville, said today that of the 40 staff members now working at Belleville 28 were from Toronto; eight were from area offices and six casual workers had been hired locally.

Twenty five of the people transferred to Belleville have already purchased homes or have rented accommodation, it was stated.

Transfers of UIC workers to Belleville will continue throughout the spring and summer until by mid-summer close to 300 persons will have arrived.

Mr. Stevens said transfer notices for another 67 persons had gone out and these people would be moving to the city in the near future.

But not all UIC office positions will be filled by transfer. Mr. Stevens said a "considerable number" of people would be recruited locally with competitions for these positions to be held shortly.

One of the positions to be filled is that of executive secretary for Mr. Stevens whose present secretary is unable to move from Toronto.

Construction is now commencing for the new UIC regional headquarters immediately to the east of The Belleville Plaza.

Today Mayor J. Russell Scott visited the construction site with local UIC regional headquarters officials.

The site is dry and excavations for the footings have already commenced.

Completion of the building worth three quarters of a million dollars, is expected by September.

Downtown Business Aid Asked in Urban Renewal

According to one alderman, downtown businessmen are allowing urban renewal to slip right through their hands.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey, who was present at this morning's meeting of the Downtown Businessmen's Association of Belleville stated that "by allowing critics to make statements without refuting them, the downtowners were allowing members of council, including the mayor, to lose interest in urban renewal."

Mr. Jeffrey said aldermen and even the mayor have been chipping away at urban renewal for the past year," she told the group as she called upon them to stand up and be counted by making representation to council, answering charges against urben renewal by critics.

Earlier in the meeting a program of action was presented to the group from one association member.

It called for a "critical path" of action with specific dates set for the completion of various stages of urban renewal and downtown rejuvenation.

Such things as parking facilities, sales attitudes, building renewals and changing public images were all called for in his brief.

A main point of controversy at the meeting was the question whether the DBMA has any power to act or provoke action that would benefit the downtown area, and the city of Belleville.

Ben Corks, president of the association, said the plan was excellent, but questioned whether anything could be done unless the support of council could be secured.

Businessman Doug Duminis told the group he felt the question of urban renewal was "too large" for anyone except the proper authorities. He mentioned the official plan of the city, the Ontario Municipal Board and the city itself and stated he felt that action was "premature and would cost too much."

Businessman Stanley Albert's answer of "why wait" produced some verbal exchanges.

At the end of the meeting — after Alderman Jeffrey told the group it "had to offer council support and show their interest" a motion by Irving Shulman that representation in support of urban renewal be made to council was seconded and carried.

Downtown parking and the "disgraceful areas" due to refuse and garbage were also discussed at the meeting.

The group decided that they would ask city council to see if any action could be taken to clean the main street in Belleville once, Sunday morning. It was also decided to advise the loading zones on Saturday morning.

NDP Warns of Pollution

Future of Mankind 'Genuinely' in Doubt

The future of mankind was described as "self-destruction" at the annual meeting of the Quinte Riding Association of NDP last night in Trenton.

Speaking to the meeting was G.S. Vichert, president of the Ontario NDP Association, who said he was convinced only an NDP government, which owes nothing to big business can halt our present rush to self-destruction.

"I use such a sensational term as 'self-destruction' because I believe that for the first time since primitive man looked out uncertainly from his primeval cave the future of mankind is genuinely in doubt."

G. S. VICHERT

Mr. Vichert commented that even Hitler's systematic gassing of Jews or "Truman's little poppan atomic bombs," though horrifying of the time, only increased the number of mankind and dead above previously estimable levels.

"They were quantitative, rather than qualitative, advances in the science of destruction."

"Now, however, it is perfectly possible for one man, or a man whom many of us would not trust to sell us a used car, to destroy the whole human race, bringing to an end thousands of years of painful evolution."

Mr. Vichert explained that besides nuclear weapons, man has evolved another instrument for his total destruction, one which I believe to be far more dangerous."

"This second source of our destruction is more dangerous because it does not involve governments, but only on the apathy and selfishness of ordinary people, like you and me."

"We may or we may not be incinerated in a nuclear exchange," Mr. Vichert said, "but our destruction by pollution is already underway and the end of life as we all know it is certain unless we do something collectively and fast."

He warned that "if we carry on exactly as we are now, multiplying at the same rate, gobbling up consumer goods at the same rate, building cities and highways at the same rate, mankind will in a hundred years or so be just as dead as if all the A.B.M.'s exploded over our heads.

"The air we breathe is in the same condition that Lake Erie water was in 50 years ago, still good enough to support life but showing danger signs."

"The astronauts who have been practising for a moon voyage report that even in the thinnest and most remote parts of our atmosphere substantial traces of pollution exist."

Mr. Vichert said that Toronto "alone dumps into the atmosphere, in one year, 825,000 tons of carbon monoxide, 630,000 tons of hydrocarbons, 198,000 tons of organic pollutants such as aldehydes, 130,000 tons of sulphur dioxide," and 125,000 tons of other chemical wastes.

"Even with controls much more severe than those now in existence these amounts will double by the end of the century."

Mr. Vichert added that the human race is also being denied some of its sunlight.

"It is estimated that the pollution over New York filters out at least a quarter of the sunlight which the human organism depends on to grow."

He described the manufacturers, sellers, and users of pesticides, the automobile drivers unwilling to pay for exhaust controls, urban bureaucrats reluctant to pay for sewage systems as the "real Eichmanns of our society."

"When we join the dead fish on the shores of Lake Erie, their last words will be 'it would have cost too much to change.'"

The Quinte NDP association held its election of officers at last night's meeting. Ian Reilly was re-elected president, Geoffrey Mowatt, vice-president and Gary Sherman treasurer.

Gordon Young and Floyd Yateman were elected to secretary and membership chairman respectively.

Waiting Out Rossmore Swamp Fire

Grass Fires Back for Another Year

Grass fires had the Belleville Fire Department constantly on the move yesterday as they fought scattered blazes throughout the day.

One of the largest fires occurred at the city dump when flames got out of control and firemen fought four hours to quell the outbreak.

A grass fire between the first and second concession roads in Thurlow kept township firemen busy for two hours.

The large swamp along the old Picton road in Prince Edward County caused three separate blazes.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said the calls "started coming in at 1:16 yesterday afternoon and we weren't finished until 8:52 in the evening.

"The fires themselves were not serious," he said, "we were concerned with keeping them contained and making sure they didn't get out of the grass."

Chief Culhane says grass fires are always a problem at this time of year and says of there is a danger that a dangerous fire may start while his department is busy with such minor calls.

For this reason he asked the public to exercise caution when burning rubbish or grass.

"Plan ahead to keep it under control so it won't get out of hand," he cautioned.

Bowler Wins Trip

STAFF — George Webb of Belleville experienced a strange feeling Sunday evening.

He had bowled in his first tournament and returned home, when an hour and a half later the bowling alley proprietor called him up to tell him he had just won the Ontario Ten Pin Handicap Bowl-a-Prize-Tournament and a trip for two to Bermuda.

George Webb said afterward "I thought I had done pretty good, but not good enough to win. I almost didn't believe Belleville Brunswick Bowl manager Art Pfefferle when he told me the good news — I thought he must have been joking," Webb added.

But it was no joke on Art Pfefferle's part for Webb's 693 total built on a 387 triple and a 306 handicap topped the totals of 168 Ontario competitors and was five pins greater than the 854 total achieved by runner-up Charlie Schmidt of London.

News of the top prize of a trip for two to Bermuda for seven days and six nights in the province-wide tournament sponsored by Sports Promotion Unlimited of Toronto came at 9 p.m. Sunday night after all local bowling alleys had replayed their competitors' scores to the central office by Teletype by means of a direct telephone hook-up.

Thoughts of the July trip may well have been going through the Pinnacle Street resident's mind when he said "It should be quite an excursion; my wife Pat and I are really looking forward to it."

Webb, who bowls regularly in the Men's Major "A" ten pin league, was one of 168 bowlers to qualify for the finals in house roll-offs across the province.

Webb was the big winner Sunday, but he was not the only Belleville bowler to bring home the bacon.

The Belleville Brunswick Bowl was also the scene of the Eastern Ontario Mixed Five Pin championships sponsored by Sports Promotion Unlimited of Toronto and two Belleville women, Betty Guthrie and Karen Fralick earned second and third spots respectively.

Gary Allen of Kingston, whose season average of 131 was the lowest of the 94 competitors in the tournament open to all league bowlers with averages under 225, compiled an 881 total to cop first spot and a trip for two to Bermuda.

Betty Guthrie's 841 total was good for second place and a Philips portable record player, and Karen Fralick's 815 aggregate score earned her third spot and a Philishave electric razor.

The showing of the three Belleville bowlers was the best ever by local bowlers in the annual competitions.

Fear Homes Will Depreciate

Delegation Opposes Trenton Low-rental Scheme

TRENTON — The proposed government - backed housing project for low-rental and senior citizens' dwellings met with strong opposition in town council last night.

Little or no delay, however, is looked for, unless the Ontario Housing Corporation's site plan and unit designs being revised at present fall short of expectations.

A delegation from Gould Street in the vicinity where the 35 units of row housing would be erected, objected on grounds their homes would depreciate in value. The authorities apparently overlooked areas designated for urban renewal for the site and the extra traffic that would develop along narrow Gould Street would be a danger to children, said the delegation.

The delegates' spokesman, Tom Bedford, also maintained the site was undersized. Douglas McBride, the OHC's representative, clarified this point, pointing out the area to be developed comprised 2.9 acres of land and conformed to all requirements in regulations. He noted the land was zoned R-6 which permitted the type of housing proposed. He assured the delegation there was no reason to fear the project would be allowed to become shabby during the 50 years. The three levels of government were involved in recovering the mortgage financing.

Councillor Gerald Weaver asked whether the site could be exchanged for a comparable piece in one of the locations it has been designated for urban renewal. Mr. Weaver reasoned the town should seek action on redevelopment after 10 years of participation in the plan and spending $40,000 as evidence of genuine interest.

Mr. Weaver reminded council there were 35 or 40 residents of Gould Street concerned about the affect row housing would have on their investment. He said he welcomed the undertaking to make available accommodations for those in lower income brackets.

"I realize the citizens not so well off as some have to be supported by the rest," he said.

Council decided to wait for the revised site plan and unit designs and then recall the delegation from Gould Street. The subsequent course of action will depend on the appeal of the new submission.

Rents for the units is governed by the income of the tenants. The scale runs from a monthly income of $310, which calls for a rental payment of $74 to a monthly income of $560 fixing the rental payment at $108.

The spokesman for the opposition to the project stipulated there would be no objection to the multiple units if all the tenants were in the highest-rent bracket. He explained a better degree of upkeep could be expected since there was more value at stake. The OHC representative advised the local housing authority who selects the tenants and looks after the maintenance of the units shows no partiality in seeing standards are maintained.

Council last week endorsed the OHC's multi-unit development plan. The low rental unit and senior citizens accommodations were recommended in an earlier survey ordered by the municipality.

Decision Thursday

Await Cabinet On Picton Camp

PICTON — This week could bring D-Day — the day of decision for Picton army camp.

Thursday's federal cabinet meeting should clinch the aircraft industry negotiations for the now-busy - vacated camp, says Mayor H. J. McFarland.

He said this morning "I am confident that the cabinet will pass it. Everything is going through to the satisfaction of all concerned."

The mayor commented the government was doing a good job handling the camp situation.

He said he was also pleased with the co-operation shown by Hollowell Township, the site of the camp.

The mayor said last week that projected sales of planes to be built here would total almost $1 billion over a 15-year period and within seven years the work force of the plant could reach 800.

Seek Advice On Squatters

TRENTON — Town Council last night approved appointment for three-year terms of town representatives Jack Wilson and Paul Tripp to the Lower Trent River Conservation Authority.

The town solicitor will be asked to advise if council has authority to remove squatters shacks from town property in the Bocage Street area.

A request from Sidney township for support of complaint against increased education costs was tabled until council has an opportunity to study Trenton education costs in bringing down the budget.

An offer by Fraser and O'Neil to sell the town property at 136 West Street was referred to the finance committee.

A bylaw to authorize the amalgamation of the Community Centre Board and the Recreation Committee for the purpose of carrying on a community program of recreation was read a first and second time.

Council accepted an invitation from the Trenton Rotary Club to attend a "Careers Night" project at the Trenton high school on Wednesday.

Prince Edward Waits For Budget Assistance

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward County Board of Education is still hoping for increased government assistance after yesterday's meeting with deputy minister of education, Dr. J. R. McCarthy, in Toronto.

A seven-man delegation from this board met with Dr. McCarthy for two hours.

Business administrator E. A. Short said the meeting consisted of scrutinizing the complete board budget.

As far as results are concerned, Mr. Short said "all I can say at the moment is that we're hoping."

He said they would know in a few days what assistance they would receive.

The board is trying to get its grants increased to prevent a projected 800 cent rise in school taxes projected for 1969.

Mr. Short announced this morning that Ameliasburg and North Marysburg Townships are slated to have kindergarten for next year — thus making the program county-wide.

He said that this has been included in the budget.

Gala Honor Planned For Leslie Frost

Belleville will be one of many municipalities honoring a man who was premier of Ontario for 12 years—part of his 28 consecutive years as member for Victoria County.

Some seven counties in Central Eastern Ontario will see their residents out to pay their respects to Leslie Frost, — premier from 1949 to 1961.

The event is slated for June 14 with a gala garden party at the Nassau Campus of Trent University.

Mayor Russell Scott, in announcing the event, said today the celebrations are to show "to Mr. and Mrs. Frost the area's appreciation of their great public service and aid over many years."

Currently plans are being formulated for the event with Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson on the organizing committee.

A major planning problem faced by the committee is an old distribution of invitations among the host of Mr. Frost's friends in participating municipalities.

Special Debate Asked On Old Post Office

TRENTON — The decision of the future role for the old post office may be finalized before long.

Last night Councillor Stan Ketcheson insisted Mayor James MacDonald call a meeting of council for a specific purpose of discussing all phases of proposals so far put forward and then accept one of them, regardless.

Earlier, Councillor Paul Tripp asked council to consider moving the town offices into the former postal building and turning the municipal building into the local police station. In the process the present police station in the market square would be levelled to make way for more downtown parking. Councillor Tripp suggested revenue from additional parking would retire the expense of renovating the old post office estimated at $250,000.

Mayor MacDonald expressed doubt about the likelihood of the Ontario Municipal Board approving the large sum of money needed for remodelling. He said he was also doubtful the taxpayers could afford it. "I feel sure Municipal Affairs Minister McKeough is not going to approve the town's capital budget with renovation costs included," commented Councillor Duncan McDonald.

Councillor Gerald Weaver called for the town comptroller to proceed with the sale of $400,000 town debentures approved by the OMB and then assess the stability of the town's financing before large spending was acted upon.

If you're casting a wider shadow these days you could be in trouble

People in our "Stress Society" tend to over-indulge and as a result overweight and high blood pressure are common problems. If you're in your 40's or 50's the odds are high you have one or both of these problems. If you identify yourself with this group you'd be wise to do something about it! Like getting regular check-ups, finding out your limits, and sticking to them. If you've been thinking about life insurance, and discovered that the cost in your case is high, or even difficult to get, Manufacturers Life may be able to help. We have always believed that life insurance should be available to the largest group of people possible and at the lowest possible cost. You will find the Man from Manufacturers well qualified and helpful in your selection of a plan to suit your particular needs. Call him soon.

The Irish Again

Ireland's bitter feuding shows no signs of letting up. From the guerrilla warfare of a few years ago, the Irish nationalists have gone "mod."

Gone are the attacks of the outlawed Irish Republican Army on border police stations and the dynamiting of bridges, power installations and the like, and in their place is a civil rights campaign involving the familiar marches, sit-ins and public demonstrations.

But there is violence too. Fortunately no firearms as yet, or so it would appear (although until recently, at least, the Ulster police were the only ones in the United Kingdom to carry arms). But sticks, stones and bottles, yes — and in Belfast recently Molotov cocktails. There have also been more reports of dynamiting of installations.

The Government itself seems to have made a bad situation worse by announcing British troops may be brought in. Even if they are to be employed only in guarding installations, why this outside help when 5,000 U.K. soldiers are already stationed in Northern Ireland?

Behind the civil rights movement is the Catholic minority. They claim discrimination against them with regard to voting rights, housing and jobs. Yet they continue to live in a country whose Protestant-dominated administration has achieved many advances in recent years. Scores of new industries have been established, and new jobs provided. In education, Catholic schools receive a 60 per cent subsidy.

For all that, the tragedy of religious animosity remains. Bernadette Devlin, the 21-year-old Catholic girl who has just wrested the Mid-Ulster seat in the Westminister parliament from the Unionists, put it squarely when she said: "Christianity is love thy neighbor, but half the population of Ulster hates the other half in the name of Jesus Christ."

Miss Devlin herself is a rare breed of Irish. Although she ran as an independent, she is associated with a leftist-sounding "people's democracy" organization composed of students and other militants. She talks of a socialist-oriented united Ireland, of the "peasants coming into their own." Perhaps her strongest point is that in a country riddled with bigotry she has pledged to work for all sections of the community. For it is all too clear that what Ulster needs is more tolerance and a willingness to promote its wellbeing instead of perpetuating the incredible religious wars that have plagued the country for so long.

There are few voices of tolerance in Ulster at the moment. Prime Minister Terence O'Neill is one, but he needs more support. Unlikely as it may seem, Miss Devlin could help fill the gap, if she could avoid such histrionic outbursts as "By God, justice will be done" (after the disturbances of the weekend).

The Ladies Sit In

Equality and all aside, President Nixon may have been ahead of his time inviting Cabinet officers to bring along their wives to a meeting at the White House.

There they were, with Mrs. Nixon sitting beside her husband, and presidential colleagues and their wives around the table.

What did they discuss? We can only guess — but the picture caption did say: "affairs of state."

We are not saying the wives should not have been there, but the thought occurs, is such a meeting constitutional? Were the ladies sworn in so to speak, and given powers of decision as on any democratic board? Or did the President just want to extend a courtesy to the wives and have an informal exchange of views on a variety of matters?

Perhaps it would be a good thing if the distaff side were represented at all such meetings, with wives and other representative women being invited from time to time, and never mind whether they have been elected in the ordinary way!

The United States administration has few elected women and this idea of the President has merit. But then it was typical of Mr. Nixon; we recall that in one of his early speeches after taking office — it might have been while announcing his cabinet — he made a special mention of the wives.

Western PCs Disenchanted With Party Policy

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — A not undistinguished Conservative MP stood up the other day in Room Six-teen of the Centre Block and in a mixed crowd of Liberals, Tories and New Democrats started the assembly with a public prophecy.

It was just a sentence, but it was spoken in lead, clear tones, and was heard in all four corners of the room and perhaps out in the hallway back of the Commons chamber.

"There will be a new kind of Conservative party coming out of the West, sure as you are alive," proclaimed the Tory MP.

Gathered in Room Sixteen at that moment was a good representative cross - section of MPs from all parties, busy with the social ritual of a political reception.

The loudly proclaimed prophesy of a "new kind of Conservative party" brought an instant hush to the chatter over the gins-and-tonics, the scotches - on - the - rocks, and the dubonnets.

The idea was not exactly new — it has been the gossip in these corridors of power for weeks — but this was the first time it had been trumpeted openly for all to hear.

What sort of a "new Conservative party?"

A "conservative Conservative party," quite a few MPs will answer: "the real thing."

And while, for the moment, they disavow any personal support for the idea, there remains just the suspicion that if such a party does emerge, they could be among its members.

The mood of western disenchantment with the current state of conservatism, as officially reflected in the House - of Commons, is known to Opposition Leader Stanfield.

He has been made well aware of it in the party caucus where certain parliamentarians — not all of them from the West, either — have been expressing reservations about policy, or non-policy as they see it, being pursued on the floor of the Commons.

Still sticking in almost every Conservative parliamentarian's craw is that "d e u x nations" bone that choked off so many votes, at the cost of 25 seats in the last election.

The party still has not been able to either swallow it or spit it out, but will attempt one or the other at its policy convention this fall. Meanwhile, it sticks.

Then there are those MPs who can not buy the party acceptance of the government's language bill and its non-rejection of some other controversial measures of the Trudeau administration.

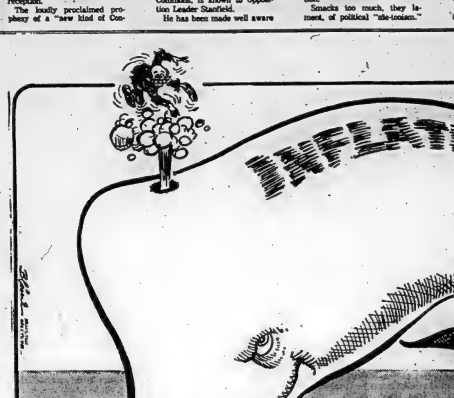
Smacks too much, they la-ment, of political "tne-tooism."

Additionally, there is the uncomfortable feeling, among not just the western MPs but some of the Ontario members, and even the supposedly solid Tory Maritimes, that anyone who is aggressive, shows leader at the floor of the Commons, or, worst of all, loses his cool, isn't assuming the proper posture.

Being politically beastly to the Liberals is not the gentlemanly thing to do. It, most of all, is not "co-operative."

Finally, there is some dissatisfaction with the kind of "open house" the party policy-makers are running — so open, to hear the complaints, that there is room in it even for quasi-New Democratic types.

Ask Opposition Leader Stanfield about that one — and he has been asked — and he replies that it is the Progressive Conservative party with the emphasis on the Progressive.



Could be. But at the same time it seems to leave some Conservatives — MPs among them — a little unhappy, with the feeling that they have no place to go.

You hear talk that Prime Minister Trudeau, warning that the government will have to do some politically - unpopular things of necessity in the months to come, and so, might run the risk of losing the next election.

Unchallenged is that is not all Liberals have remained captives of Trudeaumania.

In all quests up the possibility of a coalition of the right, disenchanted conservatively-minded Liberals, disaffected conservative - Conservatives, and prairie and west coast Socreds.

With that two major parties following somewhat parallel policy lines on the, languages bill and other controversial issues and increasingly beset by disaffection in the rank, a Third force, such a coalition of the right, might see an opening and an opportunity.

Bad Debts Spur Inflation

Brockville Recorder and Times

Debts are something that most people have in common. Bad debts and garnishees are not. But many people are faced with the prospect of becoming a "bad debt" with a subsequent garnishee of wages.

The question of avoiding garnishees was brought to the attention of this newspaper recently by a local collection agency, the agency that usually winds up with the job of collecting a bad debt.

Sy Eisler, president of the Ontario Society of Collection Agencies, said most of the problems connected with bad debts and garnishees is related to poor communication on the part of the person who fails to pay his bills.

Trouble starts when a person owing a debt ignores a collection agency's letters. If there are circumstances such as illness or unemployment that make it impossible for a person to pay his debts, the collection agency should be informed and easier terms can be arranged. Too many people ignore the letters and the garnishee follows.

And some idea of the extent to which collection agencies are put to use in Ontario is gained from the fact that last year they collected nearly $35 millions in outstanding debts. Whether we realize it or not, their success helps all of us, in that it combats the inflation that would follow if debts went unpaid.

One of the city's native sons, Charles Leavens, of the Leavens Bros. Air Service, made a 'flying' trip from the Barker Air Port, Toronto, to spend the Easter weekend back in his home town with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell, and their family.

Arthur E. May, chief engineer of the Stephens Adamson Mfg. Co. of Canada has had the honor of being elected to full membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Roy Barnum, Campbellford, was elected president of the Quinte District Druggists' Association at the semi-annual meeting held in Hotel Quinte. George Pauley, Belleville, vice-president of the Ontario Druggist Association was re-elected secretary.

The highest water level of the Bay of Quinte in several years is now registered on the water gauge of the government dock.

Wilma Walmsley, Reg. N., of New Toronto Hospital, is spending the week with her family on Everett St.

Advisability and possibility of the erection of a new wing adjoining the west end of the Hastings County Home was discussed today at a meeting of the County Council Advisory Board of the House of Refuge, under the chairmanship of Reeve William Linn of Marmora.

Arthur Harman was appointed vestry clerk. G. B. Smith, O. H. Scott and John Newton were appointed delegates to the Diocesan Synod. The following were appointed sidesmen — Charles F. Bishop, William Chrysler, J. M. Christie, L. Carr, W. Harnden, W. Symons, George Thompson, Bruce Bolton, E. A. Geen, R. B. Cooper, Douglas Row, and Frank G. Mills. The rector's stipend was increased, and steps will be taken to secure a rectory.

'Racist . . . Anti - Intellectual'

Australia Under Critical Notice

Peterborough Examiner

Australia, imprisoned by vast oceans, has developed its own peculiar insularism. The typical impression that the Australian gives is one of open-mindedness, disdain for authority and free-wheeling irreverence. Paradoxically this myth lives within him a deep-seated, inbred sense of nationalism born out of greed, fear, and concern for Caucasian preservation.

Two Canadians disgusted by what they say are examples of Australian racism have become the subject of front page stories in Australian newspapers.

Donaleen Fong, 22, the daughter of a Chinese father and an English mother, was born in Canada and is living in Vancouver. She planned a surprise visit to her Australian fiance who is in Sidney but the Australian Trade Commission in Vancouver refused to issue a visa for her to work in Australia, because she is non-Caucasian. Miss Fong was told she could have only a three-month visitors' visa — after a two-month wait for approval — and she would have to take enough money to support herself while in Australia and would have to pay her return fare in advance.

"It goes against all I was for and believe in," Miss Fong wrote to her fiance (the letter has since been widely reprinted in Australian newspapers). "It was all so humiliating and unreal. I really thought the White Australia policy was a myth and wouldn't apply to me as a Canadian."

Dr. J. W. Berry, a psychologist who is on the faculty of Sydney University, is in a better position to judge that the White Australia policy is no myth. He says many persons at parties have recoiled in disgust when they learned that he was mixing with 'dirty blacks' while doing surveys among Australian aboriginals.

Dr. Berry's conclusions about the character of the Australians — he says they are militaristic members of one of the most anti-intellectual countries in the world — have prompted him to return to Canada.

It is necessary of course to weigh the views of an immigrant like Dr. Berry with some care for there is always the likelihood that he is not compatible with the Australian mentality or way of life. Miss Fong, however provides indisputable evidence that racism is being practised by aliens on Canadian soil, and that, surely is a breach of human rights and therefore a matter for investigation. The Australian policy is in fact an affront to Canadian citizenship.

Australia, with a population of 12,000,000 persons, has been generous in its inducement of immigrants in the past but its racism cannot, but add to the plague of bigoty, misunderstanding and ignorance that infects the world.

An Industry In Trouble

Hamilton Spectator

. . . the oil industry (and let's not forget that it is Canadian not the Alberta, oil industry) is in trouble. It faces new and serious threats which only the national government can help alleviate.

Alberta - Saskatchewan oil, which yields hundreds of millions of dollars for Canadians in one way or another every year, is even now pumping at less than half its allowable potential.

Soon that flow may be diminished further and one of Canada's greatest natural resources may fail to yield us the return it should, largely because of artificial international market conditions which are controlled by interests in the United States.

Christian Answer to Mao Quotations

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I read in Saturday night's Intelligencer the report under the heading "Well Distributed", which tells us that more than 740,000,000 copies of the Communist book "Quotations from Mao Tse-tung" have been distributed in the past two years. The minister in our church mentioned the same booklet this morning, pointing out that it has surpassed the Bible as the world's best seller.

Neither your article nor the minister mentioned the fact that there is a parallel publication, which summarizes our Philosophy of Life — perhaps neither knew of it.

Recently a friend of mine showed me the booklet by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale which he has published as a direct counter-attack to the Communist doctrine. He calls the booklet "Quotations from Jesus Christ," and says in his preface that "if enough people read and practice the sayings of Jesus, there is no doubt at all that the world can be directed away from communist leaders to Christian ideas, from communist error to Christian truth."

This booklet is distributed free in any quantity by the Foundations for Christian Living, Pawling, New York 12564. I believe a few more copies which I would cheerfully send along to anyone who would like to send me his name, address and a recent stamp at P.O. Box 503, Belleville.

This is an important booklet, and I feel it could play a powerful role in checking and eventually defeating communism.

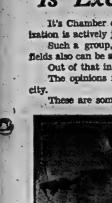
City Chamber of Commerce Is Exchange for Ideas



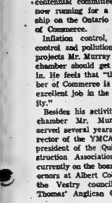
It's Chamber of Commerce Week across Canada — and the Belleville organization is actively joining in.

Such a group, of local businessmen and community leaders in various fields also can be a forum for an exchange of ideas, opinions.

Out of that interchange can come ideas of significance for the community.

The opinions may differ — but the goal is the same: A progressive, better city.

These are some of the ideas held by Chamber spokesman.



HUGH MURRAY

As outgoing president of the Chamber of Commerce, Hugh Murray has been a member of the organization for the past 10 years and a director for four years.

He has served on the membership committee and the centennial committee and is now running for a directorship on the Ontario Chamber of Commerce.

Inflation control, land-use control and pollution are the projects Mr. Murray feels the chamber should get involved in. He feels that "the Chamber of Commerce is doing an excellent job in the community."

Besides his activity on the chamber Mr. Murray has served many years as a director of the YMCA, is past president of the Quinte Construction Association and is currently on the board of governors at Albert College and the Vestry council of St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

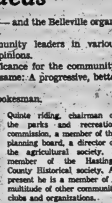
DONALD JOSS

Donald Joss is an outspoken man on the Chamber of Commerce. As member for the past 10 years, and a director for two years he has some very firm opinions on how the chamber should change its image.

"In the public's eye the C of C has been a goodnet organization for the past several years . . . a clique of powerful businessmen" twirling the City Fathers' arms for their own benefit," he said.

To change the image Mr. Joss says the chamber must stop going to city council every year asking for a grant. "If the small businessmen, the industrialists and the merchants in this city cannot support an organization of their own there is no reason the taxpayers should."

Mr. Joss also said that the Chamber of Commerce should be a representative for its members rather than an organization doing good deeds for the city.



"Any program that tries to promote the Chamber as a service organization in the city, is a program in my opinion that is bound to failure."

Close co-operation in matters of mutual concern between the Chamber and Belleville and district labor council would also be beneficial according to Mr. Joss.

"I feel there are many common grounds on which the two bodies can work together and pressure our municipal government to take action."

An example of common concern is tourism, according to Mr. Joss, and good argument in the city.

Besides being active in the Chamber of Commerce Mr. Joss has been an alderman, 1967 Liberal candidate in Quinte riding, chairman of the parks and recreation commission, a member of the planning board, a director of the agricultural society, a member of the Hastings County Historical society. At present he is a member of a multitude of other community clubs and organizations.

ZDENEK KVARDA

Chamber of Commerce directors should deal more with matters of policy and less with committee work themselves, according to Zdenek Kvarda.

Mr. Kvarda, a member of the Chamber for the past five years and a director for two years, does not feel the Chamber is encroaching on filling its role in the community.

What's needed?

Mr. Kvarda hopes the answer will come from a special committee formed to study the aims and objectives of the group.

He does feel, however, that the Chamber needs a new organizational structure and the directors making up the policy and committees being relegated to carry the policy out.

Besides a directorship in the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Kvarda is also a member of the Belleville and Suburban Planning board, the Belleville Liberal Association and the Jaycees.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market dropped sharply in light mid-morning trading today.

The market opened with a small loss and continued to slide in later trading.

Real estate and steel issues led the slides.

In real estate stocks, Revenue lost ¼ to 17½.

Trading in the stock was delayed at opening on the American Stock Exchange today pending receipt of further information requested by the exchange.

Except for a brief period late Monday, trading in the stock has been halted on the Amex since Friday.

In steels, Sidco slipped ½ to 25¾ after reporting low first-quarter earnings despite high production and sales.

Famous Players dropped ½ to 16¾. The company has been ordered to divest itself of some of its interests in the Canadian communications industry.

Investors Overseas rained ½ to 14½. The stock will split on a 3-for-1 basis Wednesday.

CPR dropped 1 to 82, Dylex A ¼ to 24¼, Alcan ½ to 32¼, Westcoast Productors ½ to 11¼ and Kerr Addison ¼ to 17.

Hudson's Bay Oil was up ¼ to 36, Brazilian ¼ to 20¼, Canflo Cons. Rents to 13.5 and French Pete 15 cents to $8.15.

On index, industrials were down .84 to 122.72, base metals .48 to 114.64 and western oils .97 to 247.81. Golds gained .51 to 250.36. Volume by 11 a.m. was 923,000 shares compared with 1,155,000 at the same time Monday.

In Monday's trading, industrials touched a record high in afternoon trading, then posted a fractional decline in light trading.

The industrial index was down .32 to 122.86 after touching 122.53. The previous high was 122.50 reached last Feb. 17.

The market opened with a small gain but lost ground as New York fell.

Golds were strong, lead by Dome up 2¼ to 79 and Campbell Red Lake 1 to 36.

Bi-ore-pean ballon prizes slipped with London gold down 2½ cents to $43.15.

Revenue was down ¼ to 18. Trading in the stock resumed on the American Stock Exchange late Monday after being halted since Friday because of an order imbalance.

Sherritt lost ¼ to 12½ after rising 1¼ Friday. The company said its current drilling in northern Manitoba intersected copper and zinc values.

Famous Players was unchanged at 17 after dropping 1½ Friday.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission Thursday rejected Famous Players' proposal to reorganize its Canadian broadcasting holdings to comply with Canadian-ownership requirements.

Prairie Oil dropped 2¼ to 30, Peel Elder 1¾ to 29½, Oshawa A 1½ to 34½ and Canadian Superior Oil 1 to 53½.

Waterloo Township Rejects School Tax

BADEN, Ont. (CP) — Wilmot Township council Monday rejected a Waterloo County board of education tax levy of $302,002.

The 1969 levy is more than double the amount turned over by Wilmot ratepayers last year for education costs.

Baden, the Wilmot Township seat, is 10 miles west of Kitchener.

Councillor Wilfred Barnes said he would "sooner resign than ask the township's 1,800 property owners to pay an increase of 100.3 per cent."

"They can kick me out of council first," said Deputy Reeve Quentin Hallman, in reference to the Ontario government's consolidation of county school boards that has led to increased rural taxes.

Waterloo County's 1969 taxation levy for school costs is $10,103,722, compared to $5,058,466 last year.

Ontario Teachers Strike Threat?

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's first teachers' strike may be hanging on the horizon.

The threat comes from the Toronto district executive of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, which claims an impasse has been reached in contract negotiations with the Toronto board of education.

Robert Brooks, president of the federation's Toronto district teachers' movement, said Monday a survey involving 2,000 secondary school teachers has been started to determine if they prefer a half-day walkout, study sessions or a mass demonstration to break the impasse.

Mr. Brooks said the "mood in schools we have sampled is angry" and as a result the Toronto executive expects the survey, which may be completed by the end of the week, will reflect favor of strong action.

In Quebec...

MONTREAL (CP) — Classes were suspended Monday in 190 of Quebec's 370 Protestant schools today as about 6,000 Protestant teachers went on a one-day strike in protest against protracted contract talks.

All Protestant schools in the Montreal area suspended classes, said Wendell Sparkes, vice-president of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

Bridge Club Ends Season

The members of the bridge club of the Belleville Club concluded their season last night with a dinner and bridge at which the wives and guests were invited.

A social hour was enjoyed before the dinner was served after which two rounds of bridge were played. At the conclusion of play, the winners were rewarded and prizes for the winter play were distributed by Archie Lewis, secretary manager.

In the evening's bridge, Mrs. Kerr Varley won the high score for the women and Reg Wainwright for the men. The consolation prizes were won by Mrs. Lois Gill and Ted Doyle.

In the league proper which ran for 26 weeks, Fred Yealland was high with Ossie Hulme in second place. Winsted Laporte finished third, Don Scotter fourth, Jim Boyle fifth and Reg Walsweight sixth. It was a most successful season and the committee responsible were thanked for their efforts.

Destiny of Aboriginals Discussed at Conference

Canadian Press Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP) — She is a tiny, thin woman, with a shock of wiry, dark hair. Her eyes are fiery and her hands expressive. She is 46, the mother of two boys. And already she is being talked about as the female Martin Luther King of Australia.

She is Kath Walker, Australian aboriginal poet and parliamentary candidate, who had 250 delegates to Australia's "black parliament" on their feet cheering in Canberra.

The "parliament" was the annual conference of the Federal Council for the Advancement of Aborigines and Torres Strait Islanders.

For the first time, it was an all-black affair. Whites were barred from the conference room as the aboriginals talked about their destiny in this continent, a continent they are estimated to have inhabited as long ago as 20,000 years.

Next year, Australians will celebrate the 200th anniversary of the arrival in this land of pioneer Captain Cook. The Queen will pay a visit to join in the celebrations. But aboriginals at the conference talked of holding their own ceremony — as far away as Yirrkala, Arnhem Land, because to the blacks of Australia it was a sad day when the white men came.

U.C.W. Meetings

DESERONTO UCW

DESERONTO — Mrs. Helen Tweedsmith opened her home last Thursday for the meeting of the evening unit of the UCW with several guests joining the members and Mrs. Bruce Cuthill, the leader, conducted the meeting.

Following a short worship service conducted by Mrs. Ralph Kimmett, with Easter as the theme, Rev. William Hendry led a discussion on church creeds.

The business meeting followed and Mrs. Cuthill extended a welcome to all. The minutes were read by Mrs. Donald Piercy and the treasurer's report by Mrs. Howard Transue.

Plans for the rummage sale were worked out. Mrs. Sid Brown and Mrs. George Smeet are in charge of the event which will take place in the Saunders' Garage shown rooms on May 2.

On the suggestion of Mrs. Francis Walker, the curator, the July meeting will be held in the Mechanics House in Napanee.

Mrs. William Wood and Mrs. William Hendry assisted the hostess to serve refreshments during the social hour.

(CENTENARY UCW)

Mrs. Bernard May was hostess at the April UCW held recently.

The president opened the meeting with a poem and minutes were read.

Plans were made for a bus trip to Kingston to visit the Ontario Research Foundation.

Mrs. B. Harder conducted the worship service and used quiet music for opening. Her topic was "Peace I leave with you," and she was assisted by seven members.

Mrs. L. Pearson rendered a solo.

Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Sutherland assisted the hostess with refreshments.

ST. MARK'S UCW

St. Mark's UCW, Canniton, recently held its April general meeting in the Sunday School rooms, with a good attendance.

Mrs. N. Horton, president, welcomed the members and visitors and conducted the meeting. As this was the first general meeting all stood and repeated in unison the "Purpose" for which the UCW was organized.

Various reports by committee chairmen were given; Mrs. Betty Beer for stewardship; Mrs. Reta Thompson, flower chairman giving a short explanation of the Easter Sunday memorial fund, and Mrs. Doug Brenton on overseas relief and the bale to be sent shortly.

Mrs. Arthur Holgate read an appropriate address to Mrs. Alden Boyd, who has recently moved to another district. She was presented with a gift in appreciation for her faithfulness and service over the years.

The theme of study for this particular meeting was the promotion of good literature and Mrs. Ken Smith, with the thought in mind of starting a UCW library, Mrs. Blanche Harrison, Presbyterial literature secretary consented to speak on the many good books and pamphlets which are available such as: books of resource material; worship service books; books on programming; on stewardship and study books. The matter was left for further discussion at an executive meeting and will finally be handed over to Mrs. Carmel Elliott, literature secretary and a committee.

The meeting was turned over to Miss Marian Brenton, program chairman, who introduced a skit dentitled, The Yes-But-ers. The cast was as follows: Mrs. Yes Brenton, Helen Brenton; Angel of the Churches, Carmel Elliott; Mrs. Well Flower, Mrs. Marguerite Treverton; Mrs. Alarm Clock, Marian Brenton; Mrs. Wall Flower, Mrs. Betty Beer; Mother Apron Strings, Mrs. Helen Hinze; Miss Sensitive Plant, Mrs. Joy Putnam; Mrs. Dinner Bell, Mrs. Jean Eggleton; Mrs. White Elephant, Mrs. Edie Gowthorpe; Mrs. Dropin-the-Bucket, Mrs. Kathie Rupert, and women from four corners of the world, Mrs. Evelyn Chambers, Dorothy Hodgins and Norma Horton.

The meeting closed, after which a social hour followed with the Bethany Unit in charge.

Women's Institutes

GILEAD WI

GILEAD — Recently the Carmel Women's Institute Branch was hostess to the Hastings East District Branches at their Tweedsmuir tea held at the Gilead Community Centre.

An outstanding attendance was welcomed by Mrs. J. Lucas, district president with Mrs. Elmer Tufts attending at the door.

Mrs. Ralph Silk, district curator of Tweedsmuir Histories was chairlady for the evening's program. Mrs. Harry Harrison, historical research convener of Wakefield Branch opened with a singsong playing her own accordion accompaniment.

Mrs. Silk introduced Mrs. Elwin Hart of Centenary who contributed immensely to the entertainment by showing two reels of an airline conducted tour to New Zealand, Australia and Eastern Asiatic points, taken by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Silk and Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Hart recently.

Mrs. Taylor of Roslin favored with a delightful piano arrangement of selected music.

Appreciation was voiced by Mrs. Lucas to Mrs. Silk, Mrs. Hart and all who helped to make the Tweedsmuir Tea such a success.

Mrs. Silk invited all to view the Tweedsmuir books of the branches, district and area on display and extended an invitation to visit the tempting bake table of home cooking.

A special invitation to all to attend the District Annual at Roslin on Friday, May 9 was given by Mrs. Lucas.

SPANISH FLAIR — This printed gauze creation bordered with ostrich feathers is designed by Perlegas of Spain. The free-flowing outfit was shown during his visit to Montreal and Toronto recently.

National Secretaries' Association Makes Plans for Executive Night

The culinary skills of the secretaries' of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries' Association were put on display at their regular monthly meeting last week which took the form of a potluck supper held at the home of Mrs. Phyllis Farnham.

The meeting attracted a large turnout of regular members, as well as the following visitors: Barbara Dalton of Trenton Cold Storage; Marlene Phillips, secretary to Hastings County Engineer; Cathy Ellis, secretary to Judge Anderson; Joan Brown, secretary to Prince Edward County Engineer; and Sherry Meldrum of Olivetti - Underwood.

President Verona Meades conducted the business session. It was reported that plans for Secretaries' Week, April 21-25, were progressing favorably and a large attendance was indicated for Executive Night on April 23. Gabrielle Watkins announced that she would be interviewed on the "Join Journal" program on CJBQ on April 23 at 10.15 a.m. Corresponding secretary Helen Worrell read two letters from other Chapters congratulating the local Chapter on their excellent progress. It was also reported that two applications for membership had been received.

Mrs. Joan Wilson, chairman of the education committee, advised the members that a tour of Bell Telephone had been arranged for Tuesday, May 13 at 7 p.m. A delegate was chosen to attend the Canadian Division meeting in Brantford on May 23-25 and representative will be Mrs. Kleinsteuber, with Mary Magee as alternate.

On the adjournment of the business portion of the meeting, a white elephant auction was held, with auctioneer Jean Scott.

GIRL GUIDE, BROWNIE NEWS

(Belleville Division Committee)

The Belleville Division Committee met at the home of the Commissioner, Mrs. T. R. Colden last Tuesday.

Many aspects of camping were discussed. Mrs. A. Bannon the Division Camp Advisor reported that a bell tent is being purchased for Waupoos camp, as well as a considerable quantity of new equipment for camping. An area camp will be held at Waupoos for Guides during July. There will be a test weekend for Pioneer and Camper badges the last weekend in May.

Mrs. W. R. C. Munroe has agreed to act as training chairman for Belleville Division. It was reported that a training day for all leaders is being planned for September.

Mrs. J. J. Brennan, the convener for the annual Girl Guide and Brownie tea, held in January, was invited to be present, and gave a detailed report. It was one of the most successful teas ever held. A vote of thanks was moved by the Commissioner to Mrs. Brennan for her efford and to all the mothers who assisted in any way.

The liaison advisor between the Guides and Walker stores gave a report and several recommendations were made, so that supplies and uniforms might be more readily available.

The Division Commissioner, as well as several of the District Commissioners and a number of Guide and Brownie leaders will be attending the annual meeting of the Girl Guides of Canada to be held in Kingston the first part of May.

Church Groups

LADIES' AID - WMS

DESERONTO — Two guests joined the women of the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer last Thursday for the combined meeting of the Women's Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid. Mrs. Samuel Godden was hostess, and Miss Gladys Pearen, the president, conducted the meeting. Mrs. Dorothy McCollough, leading the devotions was assisted by Mrs. Charles Griffiths and Mrs. Kay Hood. Mrs. Eric Quirk conducted the worship period with prayer.

The Ladies' Aid turned to business. Mrs. Godden, who had been unable to attend the making the Easter eggs, congratulated the group on their industry and success. The Hood reported that they hope to realize between $225 and $230 from the project.

Mrs. Griffiths reported that she and Mrs. Hood visited the residents of the Quinte Beach Nursing Home on Easter Monday, taking each one a small gift. Such visits are a bright spot in the lives of these people.

The date of the rummage sale was set for May 10, but the place is still in question. The White Elephant Store, not yet opened for the year, is the second alternative.

A social hour followed the close of the meeting, with Mrs. Frank Hughes and Mrs. Blaka Moore assisting the hostess.

BE PROTECTED

It is a good plan to discuss your insurances occasionally with a doctor to determine if you protection is up to date.

Cookie Sale To Be Held This Weekend

On Friday night April 25 and Saturday April 26 all Guides, Brownies and Rangers in the city of Belleville as well as Rosamore, Corbyville, Point Anne and Foxboro will be engaged in their annual door to door cookie sale.

The cookies are once again a cream filled sandwich type, half vanilla and half chocolate.

The profit from each box of cookies goes directly to the packs and companies and so directly helps the children in their program of learning skills, excursions and having fun together.

All children selling cookies must be in full uniform, and the support of the public is requested.

REPORT SWELLINGS

Swollen lymph glands should be reported to your doctor.

Couturiers Show Fashions

Elegance Highlights Spanish Styles

TORONTO (CP) — With the retirement of the famed Balenciaga, Spanish haute couture now is dominated by two excellent couturiers, Rodriguez and Pertegaz.

The latter was in Montreal and Toronto recently for a double unveiling. Manuel Pertegaz was showing his American - oriented collection-many of the costumes being definitely in the unveiled classand his new perfume, Diagonal. This is named after Diagonal Street in Barcelona where he opened his first salon in 1942.

Pertegaz's clothes are well known, beautifully constructed and tailored, for he started as a men's tailor, and are sold in Spain at a much more reasonable price than those of the Paris couturiers.

In the fashion collection viewed here, Pertegaz managed to combine sophistication with elegance, and suggested immodesty with real modesty, a feat difficult to achieve.

Sophistication and elegance appeared in a wool ensemble. A side-closing white coat, with a light brown leather belt and money pouch attached, was worn over a matching white skirt and a sleeveless calfskin printed linen top. A grey ensemble was an unusual combination of a street costume of sleeveless jacket, vest and skirt, with sheer and full dotted white sleeves.

For evening, sophistication had a slight edge over elegance in a series of ostrich-trimmed costumes, including an ecru'stiffened organdy coat and dress, both banded in matching ostrich, and a navy ostrich skirt with a short-sleeved, subdued glitter top.

His immodest modesty included an ecru-colored see-through jumpsuit with a big sailor collar and with a band running right down from the necklines. Big pockets were also placed strategically on the back hips, front and breast areas.

Another outfit intended for at-home or patio hostesses was a combination of rompers and a wide contoured bandeau instead of the usual bra-style top. Both were made of green lace embroidered roses, with a green silk sash and bow between.

A most unusual outfit was a combination of gold-washed metal, gold leather belt and a white mini-skirt. The metal was in the form of arm-length breastplates, open in front and back and contoured most effectively.

But much of the collection was aimed at the more conservative but elegantly dressed woman. After all, Pertegaz has numbered among his clientele the wife of Gen. Franco and their daughter, the Marquesa de Villaverde.

His grey mix wool suit has a side - pleated skirt and a white band down the front of the shaped, black patent-belted jacket, with a wide white band edging the sleeves. Black chiffon ties float down from a neat collar. In the pant-suit group, a cocoa brown tunic with a plastron front is combined with dark brown pants. The self-belt style with leather strap front and gold buckle appeared on several costumes.

His mini-page outfits were also smart, one in burgundy velvet with a demure V-neckline. The other was in mid-night blue velvet, with the neckline shaded to the waist, and with chiffon white sleeves.

Pertegaz was brought up in Barcelona and even as a child made dresses for his sister's dolls. Then he began making dresses for his mother and sister. Finally he opened his own salon while still young. Fifteen years later, in 1957, he opened a branch in Madrid.

Successful Living

Foster Child Is Sorely Missed

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I enjoyed especially the letter from Jimmy's new mother and father. It touched me very deeply and I could not check the tears and heartache. We had a foster baby last year for six months and I cannot tell how the heart ached to let him go, each.

For months (every day in fact), I tried to prepare myself for that moment when I must let him go from my arms, but it was the hardest thing that we ever did. We have four daughters and one son at home and we all felt like we had a death in the family.

Before he left I wrote a poem to the new parents:

To Robbi And His New Parents:

You came to us just nine days old, In January, bitter cold. Our house was warm and hearts were filled with love. You were sweet; in blue you were so lovely. Your hair like silk, so soft to touch! Your dimpled chin, your cheeks so fair. We must let you go, but oh! the pain we cannot bear.

Will your new mother hold you, love you, Like I have done for you? We love you so, dear heart. How can we stand apart, and see you leave our home? But never, you will never leave my heart.

We pray the Lord will hold you In His tender loving hand. And we know our Lord will answer Every prayer that will ascend — Foster Mother and Father.

Dear Doris: One thing I have found if that a lighted candle helps overcome smoke. It may look odd but a person could carry a candle and small holder in their handbag and light it when at the hairdresser to see how it would act.

This wouldn't be possible to do everywhere but could be done in some places. I suffer from the same problem myself. — Also Smoked Out.

Dear Smoked Out: Worth trying. Maybe some hang-polished person will have the temerity to tote a candle and report results. Thanks for this successful living-and-"breathing hint.

Dear Doris: My second husband has left me and contributes no support to me or my 15-year-old son. He refuses to sign legal separation papers but watches me wherever I go even at my work. He goes so far as peeking in my windows at nights; also the neighbors' windows.

I wish to have my name changed back to my first husband's name. Could you inform me if I could have this done without legal separation papers? — Married In Name Only.

Dear Name Only: Can't blame you for wanting some other name. To be married to a Peeping Tom is creepy. Only worse thing might be to keep on living with him. What you really need is police protection, legal help and an undertaking from him to leave you alone.

No Vote on Amendment

Lottery Bill Opposed by Opposition Parties

OTTAWA (CP) — Government lotteries are the wrong way to raise money, opposition MPs argued Monday as the Commons continued debate on the government's omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code.

"We want this House to take a stand against state lotteries," said Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Knowles, a United Church minister, said the government is right in its move to liberalize the law and allow private organizations to conduct lotteries.

But Mr. Knowles wanted elimination of two clauses which would permit the federal and provincial governments to run their own lotteries.

He opposed lotteries as an alternative to taxation for raising money, "as no consideration is given to ability to pay." In fact, the people least able to pay are enticed to gamble in the hope of winning a prize, he said.

Montreal's voluntary tax lottery had not solved that city's financial problems and the New York state lottery was unsuccessful, he said.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said Conservative MPs are free to vote as they wish on the question, but he personally supported Mr. Knowles's amendment, which did not come to a vote Monday night.

Crédit iste Leader Real Caouette said games of chance are a necessary source of revenue for charitable institutions, but governments shouldn't get involved.

Since the Montreal voluntary tax lottery began, most forms of municipal taxes there had to be increased, he said.

Justice Minister John Turner, defending the lotteries provision, said he knows of no plan by the federal government to establish lotteries.

The legislation merely took lotteries out of the Criminal Code and made them a question of "civil public policy."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said it is absurd that the government should be asking Parliament for authority to run a lottery through a change in the Criminal Code.

"This government is being authorized by this Parliament to operate a lottery," Mr. Stanfield said. People were being taken in by the device of using the code to obtain such authority.

The Commons began debate on Mr. Knowles lotteries amendment after nearly four days of discussion of the controversial clause removing penalties for bestiality, buggery, gross indecency and homosexual acts performed by consenting adults in private. The Criminal Code bill is at the report stage—the step before third reading.

Voting on a number of private members' amendments on the clause was deferred.

Mr. Caouette said the proposed change should be dropped and there should be legislation instead to educate Canadians on the marvel of marriage.

Clifford Downey (PC—Battle River) said the government had not considered "the social implications" of the change.

He said there was "a very distinct possibility" that the legislation opens the door to male prostitution.

Mr. Baldwin said the government had failed "to bring a searchlight of reason on this matter." He accused the government of hasty action in changing the law on homosexuality because it wanted to give the appearance of being "forward-looking."

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) said it was specious of Mr. Turner to argue that the bill does not legalize homosexuality. If you remove the prohibition, he said, then you are legalizing it.

Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) complained that only the opposition MPs had anything to say. He challenged the Quebec Liberals to tell the House what their constituents feel about the changes in the law.

Champlain) said his party's stand against the homosexuality provision represents the almost unanimous opinion of Quebec.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said he had more than 1,000 letters from constituents, all of them asking him to speak against legalizing homosexuality.

Debate on the bill continues today.

Ontario Welfare Has Appeal Board

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare recipients will be told within the next two or three days of their right to take complaints to a provincial appeal board, Premier John Roberts told the Ontario legislature Monday.

The social and family services department, is drafting a notice to be sent to all welfare recipients, the premier said in reply to a question from Leonard Braithwaite (L—Etobicoke).

The opposition last week held up the department's spending estimates four days until John Yaremko, social and family services minister, promised that recipients would be told of the appeal board.

During the debate Margaret Centre) said a survey of eight municipalities showed that none had application forms for requesting a review.

Ontario established the review board in March, 1968.

In other legislature business Monday, Patrick Lawlor (NDP—Lakeshore) complained that he and Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park) were denied access to a home for mentally retarded children at Palmerston when they tried to make a surprise inspection Saturday.

He asked for a ruling from Speaker Fred Cass on the rights of members to visit public institutions without notice. The speaker said he would confer with Premier Roberts and report to the house on the duties and privileges of members.

Passport Backlog

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Monday he plans a statement later this week on a sharp increase in passport applications and a resulting backlog in processing them.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) pleaded with the minister to get the "pressure taken off us" from constituents who have been sending "heartbreken" wires and letters demanding action on their applications.

Mr. Sharp said the volume of applications is up 25 per cent over last year. To Mr. Winch's suggestion that sub-offices be opened at Vancouver and other points, the minister said his department's original intention was to open such offices next year.

Mr. Sharp announced changes in Canada's passport requirements in January.

Included were the abolition of passport renewals after five years and the need for all applicants except minors to provide documentary evidence of their claim to Canadian citizenship.

The Bay of Quinte Is Getting Buoyed-up for Another Season

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

She has the square-prowed ramp effect of a wartime landing ship but her purpose is more peaceful than landing heavy battle tanks on enemy beachheads.

She is the federal government buoy tender "Kenoki" which each summer plies regularly along the Great Lakes seaway system checking on navigational aids.

The government tender this week is in the Bay of Quinte, concluding the annual spring chore of setting out buoys, marking "deep" water channels for commercial carriers.

Actually, this is the second trip this season into Bay of Quinte waters for the Kenoki.

Last week her crew laid buoys as far up the bay as Belleville. But with the Bay Bridge closed for repairs the craft was prevented from proceeding on up the Bay.

Yesterday the Kenoki returned to finish the job and, after tying up overnight at the government dock, was scheduled to pass through the Bay Bridge this morning and on to Trenton.

Although not a complete stranger to Bay of Quinte waters the Kenoki is actually taking over the duties normally carried out by the more familiar Grenville which for years has looked after buoy tending duties in the Bay.

But it is likely that the Grenville's days on the Bay are over. Last fall the old buoy tender was sunk in the St. Lawrence River when she was jammed against a dock by early winter ice.

The Grenville went under so rapidly the several of the below-deck crew members had to scramble for safety — without their money and belongings.

The Grenville is still underwater and a crewman on the Kenoki doubted if she would ever return to duty.

In any event the Kenoki — built in 1964—is much more suited for the job.

First of all she is a shallow draft vessel drawing only five feet of water.

Her fittings are much more modern and that LST-type tip-up landing ramp makes for top notch versatility.

The idea of the prow ramp is that the boat can be used for construction purposes in connection with buoy-tending duties.

In some instances, marker and warning lights are better if placed on shore and this is where the prow ramp serves to good purpose.

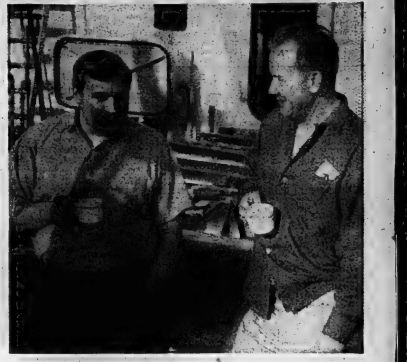
The shallow draft allows the Kenoki to shove right up to shore, drop its bow ramp and allow trucks or other construction equipment to move ashore.

The buoy tender, under the command of Captain John Houston, has a normal crew of 30 but during the "heavy" season a couple of additional men go along.

Powered by two 500 horsepower diesels, the tender makes a leisurely eight knots per hour on her trips between Beauharnois, her home port, Prescott, and Sarnia.

Placing the buoys in the spring and retrieving them at the close of navigation season are the Kenoki's major chores. But periodic checks are made throughout the summer to make certain that all channel lights and buoys are in proper working order.

Although living accommodations may be a bit cramped, crewmen on the Kenoki have all the comforts of home — ranging all the way up to TV to help pass leisure time.



Auxiliary engines drive generators to provide the electric power for operation of hoists, cranes and other mechanical aids for handling the heavy buoys.

The same power supply provides the current for the tender's galley cook.

Only at the tender's home port of Prescott can the Kenoki hook up to "shore" power and thus cut auxiliary engine.

But there is one thing for which the Kenoki is not built — bucking ice.

"We are not built for ice," noted one of the tender's engineers. "we make certain that winter's ice is gone before we start out in the spring."

Time Out for Coffee!

Boyd Caldwell and Allan Render, engineering department crew members of the buoy tender Kenoki, pause for cup of coffee after loading channel markers at the government dock in Belleville.

Built Like A Wartime LST

The square-nosed ramp of the buoy tender Kenoki recalls invasion landing ships used during wartime operations. The Kenoki has taken over duties of the Grenville, which sank in the St. Lawrence River early last winter.

'Equalize Education Opportunity'

Bancroft Seeks New Business Wing

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

BANCROFT — The need to equalize educational opportunity in Hastings county was brought home to some county school board trustees Monday afternoon.

During a fact-finding tour of North Hastings Secondary School in Bancroft, members of the board's vocational advisory committee heard a plea for a new business and commercial wing at the school.

Miss Norma Hass, commercial co-ordinator, delivered a 16-page brief to the committee and board chairman James Clarke, outlining the need for a new wing.

She urged the county board to continue an up-dating plan instituted two years ago by the Bancroft board to provide more and better equipment for the commercial department.

"Until three or four years ago, the urgency of accommodation and equipment for commercial was simply not made known to the board," Miss Hass said. "As soon as it was, they started to do something about it. They felt two years ago that a business and commerce wing was needed, but were in no financial position to provide it. To alleviate some of the strain, they approved a three-year up-dating budget. Will you, their successors, carry out what they have started?"

"This is not a question of normal up - dating," Mr. Clarke replied. "It seems to me the former board failed to keep up with the need for expansion and improvement."

He called on the vocational advisory committee and the board to make a complete examination of the place of vocational training in secondary schools."

"More equipment and accommodation may be needed," he agreed. "But should it be more or the same thing, or something different?"

Miss Hass and principal F. S. Beckley told the committee about eight new rooms were needed at NHHS, but the complete need has yet to be determined.

North Hastings students need a better education than that provided for Toronto teenagers, Miss Hass told the committee.

"They require better education because all but a very few will have to go to Toronto or Ottawa, to obtain employment. They need better training to compensate for their limited environmental exposure."

The teacher said factors affecting the achievement of her students are their financial situation, lack of exposure to anything but their local environment and their long day because of distances they must travel in buses to reach school.

"To some extent we can make up for their limited environmental exposure by providing trips and tours to broaden their horizons," Miss Hass said.

But without added assistance the cost of such trips is exorbitant for the students, she said.

"Is this the penalty our students must pay for having been born some distance from more densely populated areas?" she asked.

"Our students do have one advantage," she told the committee in conclusion. "They are not afraid of hard work, and they are ladies and gentlemen. When they do land a job they keep it and they advance."

Addition Urged

Miss Norma Hass, commercial co-ordinator at North Hastings High School, yesterday called for a new commercial wing at the school. Hastings County advisory vocational committee and board chairman James Clarke (left) toured the school.

Local Orchestra Will Close Festival

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Festival '69 goes out to the sounds of music tomorrow night — ending its third annual presentation of the arts.

The lilting finale will be provided by the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra — one of the longest - established artistic groups in the district.

But while tomorrow night's concert at Centennial Secondary School will be one of the highlights of the orchestra's musical season, it won't be its first or last presentation for the year.

For one of the dedicated objectives of this band of players is to bring its work to centres with little opportunity to hear live orchestral music.

This was one of the reasons the orchestra was organized in 1962 by Stephen Choma. It still is a prime motive for the group's existence.

"We perform concerts in small areas where other orchestras wouldn't go," says Mr. Choma.

The scheme annually carries them to such Quinte centres as Brighton, Norwood, Tweed.

Neither is it the intention to present a repertoire heavy on high, classical works, he emphasizes.

A typical program could combine the lighter works of such masters as Mozart and Chopin with musical comedies.

"We try to present something that is not above the people — nor below them," emphasizes Mr. Choma. "Anyone who wants to hear a full-fledged symphony will have to go to Toronto.

However the attitude has a serious aim. By exposing audiences to live orchestral music, interest in the great composers may be nurtured.

The orchestra's success in this respect could never be measured.

But its fostering of music among some individuals already is a matter of record.

The orchestra — which now counts over 50 music - lovers — has seen some of its younger members encouraged to take music as a way of life.

About a half-dozen musicians who started with the orchestra at its foundation now have gone on to study music at universities and take their degrees, says Mr. Choma.

Interest in the orchestra itself also has been constant through the years. Its membership ranges from high school students to housewives. It includes a man who won the VC — Maj. John Foote, of Cobourg, on oboe — and an ex-MP — Ben Thompson of Brighton, on trombone.

Among the public, the orchestra also has achieved success, Mr. Choma believes.

"It was one of the first artistic groups organized in the whole area," he says. "Since then, interest in music has picked up."

Usually the orchestra plays 10 to 12 concerts a year. This year, however, the schedule was halved, since Mr. Choma felt the group should refresh itself for a time with practice.

"However, we'll be back again next year on our regular schedule," he says.

Wednesday's concert at Centennial Secondary School sees Hazelaine and Robert Reid as guest soloists.

Sanderson Start a Possibility

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens have been installed as 6-to-5 favorites to win their hockey game here tonight against Boston Bruins.

The current best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final round is tied 2-2, each club having notched two home ice victories.

Boston's high-scoring centre, young Derek Sanderson, likely will be omitted from the starting lineup. Sanderson has contributed eight goals and two assists in eight playoff games.

The Bruins arrived here Monday night and coach Harry Sinden promptly steered his charges clear of their usual downtown hotel in favor of an unannounced hideaway.

Sanderson stayed in Boston, nursing a severe charleyhorse picked up in Sunday's game as he scored a shorthanded goal to aid the Bruins in their 3-2 win.

If further treatment today proves successful, the sophomore scoring ace and penalty-killer could still fly here in time for tonight's 8 p.m. EST faceoff.

Sanderson said after Sunday's game he had been told by the club doctor his injury would take a week to heal.

As a result of Sanderson's injury, the Bruins brought two extra forwards along—right winger Tom Webster, who won the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A series scoring title with Niagara Falls Flyers last season, and Bill Lesuk, a left winger in his second season as a pro.

Both had short bursts with the Bruins earlier this season, but spent most of their time with Oklahoma City of the Central Hockey League.

Monday afternoon, Montreal general manager Sam Pollock announced that left winger John Ferguson and right winger Bob Rousseau will start.

However, goaltender Lorne (Gump) Worsley is unlikely to get back into action because of a dislocated finger on his left hand suffered in last Thursday's 5-0 loss in Boston.

Ferguson suffered an eye injury Sunday and was forced to wear a patch Monday. He visited an eye specialist Monday afternoon before getting clearance to play tonight.

... suffered a charley-horse in his right leg in a collision with Boston defenceman Bobby Orr Sunday. He was still limping badly from the injury when he visited the Forum clinic Monday morning.

The Intelligencer Sports

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

Early lacrosse games were but epitomes of decorum.

Historians describe how a pair of North American Indian tribes would line up on opposite sides of a field — about 400 to a team at times — and either put the India rubber ball into the opposition's goal, or scalp anybody who tried to prevent this, whichever came first.

Legend has it that the finer points of this recreation were lost to the genteel inhabitants of New France and the Thirteen Colonies, who proceeded to call the natives "savages."

Games would last for days, and broken arms and legs were routine among players, while the occasional death was taken as a sign the game was getting out of hand.

Pontiac — (the chief of the Ottawas, not the sedan) — became the first lacrosse strategist when he coached an exhibition game June 4, 1763 outside the gates of the Michilmackinac garrison. The occasion was King George III's birthday.

Partway through the game, for reasons best known to Pontiac, the players threw down their sticks, picked up their tomahawks, and made a beeline for the fort.

Final score: Iwas Indians - 215, King George's Loyal Subjects - 0.

Hence, perhaps, the derivation of the term "massacre" as applied to an overwhelming sporting victory.

Despite the resultant acute player shortage, lacrosse survived and in 1867, the National La Crosse Association was formed.

The fact this coincided with Confederation seems to be the logical explanation for lacrosse's mysterious identity as Canada's national sport.

Not since hockey graduated from the St. Lawrence River has the puck-stick game came close to sharing the Canadian sportlight. Only the feats of such famed athletes as "Ye-ye" Lalonde in both sports served to keep lacrosse from wilting before the bloom of professional hockey in an era dominated by the Senators, the Sq. Pats, and the Maroons.

While lacrosse does not enjoy broad national prestige — even after last summer's initial try at putting the game on a big league basis — it remains an activity that seems to gain a stranglehold on enthusiasm in communities where it catches on.

Belleville'ans Ray Mortimeer and Bob Carriere are trying to infect Quinte area fans with the lacrosse bug, and are in the process, with six other directors, of moving a Peterborough-based senior franchise into this city.

Peterborough — with five national senior title Mann Cup wins to its credit — has long been a breed of lacrosse interest from the minor level right up to today's Peterborough Laker pro ranks.

Ironically, the excessive interest in the sport in the Lilliack City prompted the senior club organizers to look for a new base of operations rather than try to scramble for the fan dollar with well-established pro and junior teams in the same city.

Belleville's first major lacrosse venture since a short-lived intermediate club nearly 40 years ago will see Peterborough talent playing 12 home games in the city against five other Ontario Lacrosse Association senior entries — Brampton, Brantford, Brooklin, and Huntsville.

The addition should be welcomed on several counts.

A senior-caliber team in the city is necessary if its whole lacrosse services can expire. Into this category fall city high school students, and participants in the seven-team Quinte Lacrosse League, two groups struggling to gain a local foothold for the sport over the past two years.

From the fan's point of view, few games can be as exciting as well-played lacrosse: lots of goal-scoring, and rock 'em, sock 'em contact.

The game may have been refined somewhat from Pontiac's day, but lacrosse still does not deserve to draw its name from the cruder — a curved staff carried by bishops.

WALL TO WALL MARATHONERS — The pavement took an awful beating in Hopkinton, Mass., as upwards of 1,152 runners took off in annual B.A.A. Marathon race. Boston is 26 miles 385 yards away. (AP Wirephoto)

Marathon Finish Surprises Everyone But Toronto Runner

BOSTON (CP) — No one was surprised when the first man to cross the finish line at the Boston marathon was a Japanese, Yoshiaki Unetani, although his record-breaking pace was startling.

Many runners and reporters were surprised however, when Robert Moore, 29-year-old biologist from Toronto, finished fifth behind the winner, two highly-rated Mexicans and American Ron Daws.

But the least surprised at his finish was Moore.

"I planned to finish in the top 10 and run it in about two hours and 20 minutes," the Englishborn runner told reporters after the race.

His time was 2:21.38, respectable but far behind Unetani's 2:13.49—one minute and 56 seconds faster than the previous record of 2:15.45 set in 1967 by Dave McKenzie of New Zealand.

Pablo Garrive Luco of Mexico was second in 2:17.20, more than one-half mile behind the Japanese winner, while Alfred Perabasa, also of Mexico, was third in 2:19.56. Daws's fourth-place time was 2:20.23.

Morris Aarbo of Edmonton finished 29th in 2:33.53. Michael Goerke of Toronto Olympic Club was 30th in 2:34.04 and Ron Wallingford of Hamilton was 31st with a time of 2:34.55.

Moore, Aarbo and Wallingford were all members of Canada's first official team in the Boston marathon.

Among other members of the team coached by Paul Poce of Toronto Olympic Club, Hreb Monck of Hamilton finished 35th in 2:50.10, Chris Steer of Toronto finished 132rd in 2:56.33 while Jerome Drayton and Nick Hamlin, both of Toronto, did not finish.

Unetani set a blistering pace through the 20-mile 385-yard course in the race run under a sunny sky with the temperature around 55.

He and the Mexicans ran neck and neck for the first part of the race but Unetani began to pull away about seven miles from the finish and opened up a 200-yard lead going into "heartbreak hill," which has defeated many runners.

Unetani used the grade to put distance between himself and the other runners, however, and was going strong with a one-half mile leader during the last part of the race.

Last year's winner, American Amberer Burfoot, finished 17th in 2:29.50 after staying up front the first 10 miles.

Other Canadian finishers were:

60. Chris Henly, Toronto, 2:38.05.

58. Raymond Will, Halifax, 2:42.57.

60. Gerald R. Teal, Niagara Falls, Ont., running for Rochester, N.Y., 2:43.59.

68. Steve Ransler, Canadian Armed Forces, 2:45.54.

70. Victor J. Mathieu, University of Guelph, 2:46.21.

71. John Mowatt, Toronto Olympic Club, 2:46.30.

88. Grant St. John, University of Guelph, 2:50.22.

Monday's Stars

Pitching—Joe Sparma, Tigers, fired a two-hitter for his sixth straight victory over Washington as Detroit blanked the Senators 2-0.

Batting—Bobby Tolan, Reds, tripled three hits including a homer and drove in three runs in Cincinnati's 11-5 victory over Houston Astros.

Wife Not Wanted, Ace Netter Off Team

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver has been chosen to replace John Sharpe of Toronto on Canada's Davis Cup team, Pierre Desaulles of Montreal, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, said Monday.

Puddicombe, 22, holds the Canadian closed singles title which he won in Toronto last August.

He joins the team on the eve of its departure for matches against The Netherlands.

Sharpe, Mike Belkin and Harry Fauguier, also of Toronto, and Tony Bardsley of Vancouver, were to have toured up for the Davis Cup May 9-11 at Scheveningen by playing in the Cumberland pre-am tournoni in England next week.

Sharpe, an Australian who is unranked in Canada although expected to have been the pillar of the Canadian entry, had a sharp difference of opinion with non-playing captain Fred Bolton of Vancouver.

Because he was unable to resolve the difference, Desaulles announced Sunday that Sharpe had been dropped from the team.

Among the reasons for the dispute was Bolton's refusal to allow Mrs. Sharpe to accompany her husband to the opening round.

"It was a case of drop the captain and keep the player or vice-versa," Desaulles said.

"We decided to keep the captain.

"Personally I regard the loss of Sharpe to the team. He was counted on to be of great help. Now Canada's squad is weakened."

Mays' Move Pays

After 10 Tries, Dodgers Make Hole in Juan

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Mays moved back into his old spot with success, but it didn't prevent Los Angeles Dodgers from breaking an old jinx against San Francisco's Juan Marichal.

The Dodgers, taking advantage of a pair of costly errors, scored five unearned runs in the fifth inning en route to a 7-5 victory Monday night over the Giants, knocking Marichal out of the box for the first time in 11 meetings. It was the Dodgers' seventh straight triumph.

Meanwhile, Mays returned to his old No. 3 spot in the batting order, after hitting leadoff in the Giants' first 11 games, and responded with two singles in three official trips.

In action elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals broke its seven-game home-losing streak with a 5-4 victory over Montreal Expos, Philadelphia Phillies edged New York Mets 3-1 in 11 innings, Cincinnati Reds ripped Houston Astros 11-5, and Atlanta Braves checked San Diego Padres 5-2 to maintain its ball-game edge over the Dodgers in the West Divison.

Marichal, who has a 25-12 lifetime mark against Los Angeles, kept the Dodgers in check until Willie Crawford's leadoff homer in the fourth and Tom Haller's double and Paul Popovich's single produced a 2-0 lead in the fifth.

Then errors by Don Mason and Willie McCovey opened the floodgates for Los Angeles. Mason's error enabled Crawford to reach first, and Bill Russell followed with an infield single.

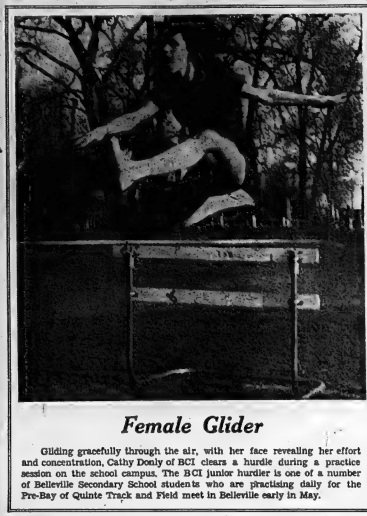
Wes Parker sacrificed, but McCovey dropped Marichal's throw to first and Crawford came in. Andy Kosco and pitcher Bill Singer each produced run-scoring singles and Ted Sizemore singled home two runs before Don Herbel came in to replace Marichal, who lost his first game after winning two.

The Cardinals ended their string of misfortune at home when Tim McCarver—with two out, the bases loaded and a 3-2 count against him in the bottom of the ninth—drew a walk from Montreal's Dan McGinn.

McCarver was the first man up after McGinn was called in to replace Carroll Sembera.

Lou Brock's first homer of the year had given the Cards a 4-4 deadlock in the sixth.

Larry Hisle, a rookie centre fielder, tagged his first major league homer in the fourth inning, then scored the winning run in the 11th on Tony Taylor's single as the Phils dropped the Mets.



* * *

Mets rookie Gary Gentry, aiming for his third victory in three starts, scattered seven hits and fanned eight during his nine-inning stint.

Bobby Tolan rapped three hits, including a homer, and drove in three runs as Cincinnati handed Houston its sixth straight loss.

Orlando Cepeda slammed his fourth homer and Cleto Boyer his second in powering Atlanta past San Diego.

A triple by Roberto Pena and singles by Tony Gonzalez, Ollie Brown and Ed Spiezio accounted for the Padres' runs in the sixth.

Once A Bullpen Reject, Palmer Star for Orioles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Palmer, restored from the scrap heap, has helped Baltimore Orioles to a first place perch in the American League's Eastern Division.

Palmer won his third game of the season Monday night, limiting Cleveland to four hits in Baltimore's 11-0 romp. It was the second shutout for Palmer, who won 15 games for the Orioles when they captured the pennant in 1966, but was virtually useless for the last two seasons because of arm and back trouble.

Palmer's aches and pains are gone now and the ones who are really hurting are the Indians, who dropped their fifth straight and 10th in 11 starts this season.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers blanked Washington Senators 2-0, Seattle Pilots tripped Kansas City Royals 4-1, Minnesota Twins took Oakland Athletics 8-4 and New York Yankees topped Boston Red Sox 6-4.

Merv Rettenmund cracked a three-run homer for the Orioles in a six-run reveralo inning that wrapped up the victory over Sam McDowell. Brooks Robinson had doubled to open runs across as the Orioles built an early 4-0 lead for Palmer.

Joe Sparma allowed Washington just two hits a fourth inning double by Bernie Allen and a two-out single in the ninth by Ed Brinkman—but the Detroit right-hander was in constant trouble because of eight walks. It was his sixth straight decision over the Senators.

Al Kaline honored for the Tigers.

Pitcher Mike Marshall drove in two runs with two key singles and limited Kansas City to seven hits, leading Seattle to its victory in the meeting between the two expansion clubs. Jack Aker nailed down the victory by getting the final out in the ninth for Marshall.

Dean Chance worked seven innings, allowing just two hits, and Minnesota beat Oakland for the Twins' seventh straight victory.

Harmon Killebrew and Graig Nettles punched a pair of two-run singles to pace a five-run Minnesota uprising in the third inning. Tony Oliva extended his hitting streak to nine games with a pair of singles.

Mel Stottlemyre won his fourth game with late-inning help from Lindy McDaniel securing New York's decision over the Red Sox. Three Yankee double plays in the first five innings eased Stottlemyre over some early rough spots.

George Scott homered for the Red Sox.

TORONTO (CP) — The directors of the Canadian equestrian team announced Monday they will stage a North American grand prix show jumping competition here June 15. Revenue from the show, to be held at the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand, will help the team train in Europe in preparation for the 1972 Olympics. The Canadian competitors and mounts are still unconfirmed, but the tentative list included the team which won the grand prix event at Mexico City last year for Canada's only Olympic gold medal.

Parkdale Site of Ball Tourney

STAFF — A field of 16 teams is expected for Belleville's first OBA bantam baseball* tournament, which will be played on two or three ball diamonds the weekend of July 1st, 1969.

Tournament organizers have already secured the use of the Parkdale and CNR ball parks and hope to obtain permission to use a third park, the Canifton ball park.

The Belleville Minor Baseball Association's Women's Booster club will arrange billeting for the players from visiting teams as they did for the Shrine Peewee Hockey Tournament.

Kick - off will take place on the weekend of May 17th at the Parkdale ball park to launch a season which will see 20 house league teams and four ECHA under the wings of the BMBA.

An anticipated 20 house league teams will split into five age classifications ranging from tadpole to midget, and will play on four ball diamonds, two at Parkdale and one each at the YMCA and CVR fields.

BMBA plans also call for a minor baseball clinic at Parkdale ball park, Saturday, May 3rd, with the tyke and peewee clinic being held from 9 a.m. till noon and the bantam and midget clinic running from 1.30 till 4.30 p.m.

Executive members for the coming season are: President, Dick Elston, first vice-president, Garth Bradshaw, second vice-president, Doreen Meagher, third vice-president, Dirk Ellis, secretary, Bernard Howe, treasurer, John Emerson, equipment manager, Len Cleaver.

Galt Stung Again

VICTORIAVILLE, Que. (CP) — Victoriaville Tigers, paced by Jocelyn Hagdy, defeated Galt Hornets 6-2 Monday night to narrow the Hornets lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Canada Allan Cup final to 3-2.

Hardy scored three goals as the Tigers forced a sixth game, to be played Thursday at Galt.

Andy Bessette, with two goals, Jacques Michel were the other Victoriaville marksmen. Pete Brennan and Fern Belanger scored for Galt.

Bessette and Hardy gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead mid-way through the first period. Brennan scored to narrow the margin to 2-1 in the last minute of the opening period.

Sport Has Lion's Share of Zany Moments

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Casey Stengel and Yogi Berra were sitting in a New York hotel lounge when a well-dressed man passed by. Berra nudged Casey and whispered "See that guy. He's a big gambler who lost a pile during the war."

Casey never batted an eye-lash. "Yeah" he said. "Who did he bet on, the Germans?"

• • •

Red Storey in his NHL reference heyday thumbed off a Montreal Canadien and the crowd booed its disapproval. One fan handed a bag of peas that just missed the official.

Captain Butch Bouchard raced over to the official and fingered-wagged an under-the-nose argument. Again the crowd roared.

What Bouchard actually said, as Red told me much later, was "Red, wait until some guy tosses out a slab of bacon and I'll make you the biggest bowl of pea soup you ever saw."

• • •

When Boston rookie Leo Labine was given the job of shadowing Gordie Howe, the Red Wing star stood it for three of four periods. In the fifth game Labine came up with a check that missed Howe and sent him into the boards.

In the meantime Howe came up with a stretch elbow blast that left four of Labine's teeth on the ice.

"That" he said as he skated past the Bruin "will teach you to respect your elders."

• • •

In modern parlance he would have said "Look, Gordie, only four cavities."

• • •

A famous American quarterback on a gallop to the enemy goal-line was tackled heavily by two of the opposing team.

"I laid there on the ground" he related afterwards "with one of those gorillas holding my left leg, the other had my right leg. And as they pulled in the opposite directions one cracked. "Make a wish, buddy."

• • •

The late Herbie Heen in his heyday as a manager once "led" his team to a 9-0 shutout. Nine big zeros were up on the scoreboard and someone quipped, "Nine eggs in a row, eh Herbie; You can't cluck over that."

The name stuck. The popular Heen was known from there on as "The Ole Clucker."

• • •

During a Picton-Belleville basketball game, Ron Church, the Clown Prince of the Picton team had reached first in the bottom of the ninth with two out and the winning run on third base.

The bleachers "frone" as Church deliberately started to walk towards second base.

The audacity of the move also froze the catcher who just stood and stared as the runner on third galloped for the plate.

The catcher finally threw the ball to second, Church stopped dead in his tracks and allowed himself to be tagged out.

• • •

One of the strangest rules ever applied to local hockey teams was that way back when the boys in Wellington played on the ice-covered shores of Lake Ontario. Tree "hazards" were windows of snow and the pucks, some times, were pieces of wood sawed from two-inch branches.

The rule? "Please refrain from hitting the goalposts."

No wonder. The goalposts were gallon jugs filled with that well-known fermented apple juice.

• • •

This could be a tip for Pierre Elliott. Kissing was unknown in the major baseball leagues in the earlier days. Perhaps the first game during the operatic game between Cleveland and Detroit after Bob Hope had bought an interest in the Indians.

Prior to the game, Ole Skinner walked out to the mound and planted a resounding buss under the ear of his starting hurler one Bob Feller.

Feller was shelled off the mound in the first inning and the Indians lost 8-0.

Set for May 7

Colling Cup Run for 25th Time

STAFF — The historic 25th edition of Ken Colling Memorial Run on Wednesday, May 7th, promises to be a wide open affair both only three of last year's top seven finishers returning for the 6.2 mile event.

Bob Ostrander of Picton, who won his second consecutive title last year is the record time of 22 minutes and one second, and Glen Easton of Quinte, last year's runner - up, have both graduated from high school leaving Tom Wills of Centennial, last year's third place finisher, the top returnee in this year's field.

The other top two returnees, in the annual 4½ mile run which was inaugurated by physical education instructor Homer "Red" Townsend in 1944 to commemorate the late Centennial athletic coach Ken Colling are Carl Ward of Centennial and Dave Grant of Moira, who came in sixth and seventh last year.

With the top three returning runners from last year's field all representing Belleville schools, there appears to be a good possibility that the Ken Colling trophy will return to a Belleville school after a three year absence.

The present course, which starts behind BCI on Queen Street, extends east on Queen Street to MacDonald Avenue, South on MacDonald Avenue to Bridge Street, then east on Bridge Street to Parrott Drive, north to Victoria Avenue, east to MacDonald Avenue, south to Queen Street and then west on Queen Street to a funnel finish at the side of BCI, is the third course in the 24 year history of the run.

The race has been settled on this course for some years now, after the previous two routes had to be changed because of traffic problems, road conditions and interference with railway tracks.

The race's organizer, BCI physical education director Wally Beever, said last night that this year's race would start at 3.15 p.m. so that all runners would be off the streets before the daily traffic rush begins.

South Hastings Openers Scheduled for May 24

STAFF — The expansion craze in local sports circles has spread to the South Hastings Baseball League, which Sunday night added an extra team to last year's four team setup.

Tyendinaga Reserve, the new entry, will take to the field Saturday - May 24th along with three of the league's other entries, to launch the 24 game schedule.

Handguns

The following scores are the results of the Club's regular weekly "shoot" at the Belleville Police Department handgun range:

The highest scores of the national course: Don Wilson 269, Louis Kulesar 263, Joe Heimbach 245, John Stenbocker 233, Dave Hord 225.

The highest individual targets of the "shoot" to date, Don Wilson 86; rapid fire, Joe Heimbach 89; timed fire, Don Wilson 97.

Plane's Concrete, the defending league champions, plus Latta, Reid and Shannon are the returning teams which will vie with the Tyendinaga squad for the league crown and top money of $50, which is awarded annually to the league's regular season champion.

Secretary - treasurer Art Buller also announced that each club will play four Sunday games, two home and two away, again this season.

Ask Uncle Ed

DEAR UNCLE ED:

I've always admired sculpture, but how would I go about sculpting a camel for instance?

Yours truly,
CHIPPIE CHARLEY

Dear Chippie:

That's easy! All you have to do is take a block of granite and chip away everything that doesn't look like a camel.

Yours tenderly,
UNCLE ED

If you have a test question for Uncle Ed, send it to Uncle Ed's Test Kitchen, 211 Coleman St., Belleville.

Lacrosse Fenced In

STAFF — Ray Mortimore and Bob Carriere, the organizers of Belleville's new Senior "A" entry in the Ontario Lacrosse Association got a late start and only last week secured the Peterborough Senior "A" franchise for the coming season, but they've been working behind the scenes ever since and have ironed out many of the problems concerned with the management of the team.

Recreation director Lorne Williams has given us the okay," Mortimer said "and we're going to install two - gauge wire mesh four feet high around the boards of the Memorial Arena to protect the fans and keep the ball in play constantly, this needing our care of the game."

Mortimer said Monday that a rink contract would be secured shortly and that Ernie Gibbs of Belleville has given charge of the team's program and program advertising for the coming season.

The as yet unnamed Belleville club has already had four practice sessions at the Peterborough Arena and will play an exhibition game in Kingston, Friday, May 2nd against their farm club, the Peterborough Junior "A" squad.

Carriere said "We're trying to arrange an exhibition game here a week from Thursday when one of the other Senior "A" clubs in the five team loop, and we hope to have confirmation of this game by Wednesday or Thursday."

Mortimer also said that the club is seeking OLA permission to arrange a home schedule of the regulation nine ones, for all home games being played at the white background in the Belleville Arena.

Dinsdale Disturbed by Award to McGill 'Activist'

OTTAWA (CP) — A Manitoba MP, upset by a recent decision of the Canada Council to award a $5,500 scholarship to McGill University lecturer Stanley Gray, said Monday it may be time for the government to review the council's terms of reference.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said the grant to Mr. Gray is an encouragement to student "activism" and a reward for a man "dedicated to the destruction of our institutions."

He told the Commons committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts that he had to attend an emergency meeting of the University of Brandon trustees during the weekend because of the resignation of the university President John E. Robbins.

Mr. Dinsdale blamed the resignation on "anarchistic" student activities.

Mr. Dinsdale said he talked to student activists at Brandon during the weekend who declared: "we're the wave of the future and we're going to burn and destroy the blessing of the Canada Council."

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said he "just can't believe" that the Brandon University situation is a direct result of the Canada Council giving Mr. Gray a scholarship.

Mr. Pelletier defended the council for its controversial grant to Mr. Gray at the committee meeting and under questioning later in the Commons.

Replying in the House to Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington), he said he would not interfere with the council decision. It would be improper for him to give orders to the council because of the responsibilities Parliament had vested in the council.

Mr. Pelletier said the council found Mr. Gray to have outstanding merit as a scholar.

Mr. Gray, 24, who teaches political science, has been accused by McGill of disrupting meetings of its ruling bodies and cause now is before an arbitration committee of three outside professors. He is contesting a McGill decision to fire him at the end of the academic term next month.

Reactions Worst Problem

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What is distressing about the human race is not the way a small number of people act, but the way a larger number of people react. It is for the actions rather than our actions that condemn us to perpetual barbarism.

In Switzerland, not long ago, six members of a tiny "religious" sect were tried on charges of flogging to death a 17-year-old girl while trying to "exorcise the devils" from her body.

When the story of this fatal flagelation was published, according to Time magazine, the people of Zurich reacted with "a primitive moral fury" that was terrifying. Police cars taking the accused to and from the court needed extra protection from masses of lynchers.

The court was swamped with threatening letters, and proposals for the most frightful tortures were made by irate "received hundreds of suggestions for punishment no less demonic than poor Bernadette's exorcism," including one writer who wanted to seal the defendants into a barrel full of spikes and set it afire.

And Switzerland, be it remembered, long ago abolished the death penalty for murder. This is one of Europe's most "civilized" nations.

The latent paranoia of the human race, and the raging aggression that lurks beneath the surface at all times, can be vividly seen in this reaction of the good, respectable, law-abiding and peace-loving Zurichers. What they wanted to do was far wose than the crime they were "punishing."

This crime was obviously psychopathic, committed by religious fanatics in the grip of hysteria. People can scarcely get any sicker than this, and society should put them away in order to study them as we study carriers of all malignant and fatal diseases. This is a job for the trained clinician, not the executioner.

But the depravity of their crime released all the commensurate feelings of the vigilance — for all of us are potentially homicidal (if we do not know that, we have learned nothing from the Bible or from Freud); and under the guise of "retribution," the respectable members of society feel free to act out their own murderous fantasies.

It is not frightening that a few psychotics beat a girl to death. But it is frightening that the mass of people regard this violation as an excuse to unleash their own repressed aggressions — and in so doing, become worse than the offenders they are chastising. No criminal has ever wounded society as severely as society wounds itself.

Five Out of Six Literary Winners Québec Products

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's top annual literary awards for work published in 1968 go to six youthful writers, including a sometime Quebec separatist, an idol of the hipster set, two expatriates and a one-book author.

Five of the six winners of the Governor-General's Literary Awards for 1968, announced Monday night, were born and raised in Quebec province. Each award carries with it a $2,500 prize for the Canada Council.

Novelist Hubert Aquin, a former vice-president of the separatist Rassemblement pour l'Independance nationale and one of the three French-language winners, informed the council Monday he has decided to decline the award. All other winners have indicated they will accept, a council spokesman said.

Leonard Cohen, renowned for hip-minded poetry and songs and expatriate novelists Marcel Richler and Marie-Claire Blais are Quebecers honored. Laval University sociologist Fernand Dumont is another.

Alice Munro, raised in Wingham, Ont., and now a resident of Victoria, B.C., wins with her first book, a collection of short stories titled Dance of the Happy Shades.

Mr. Aquin receives his prize for the novel Trou de memoire. He had won critical acclaim in Canada and France for his first novel in 1965, Prochain episode.

Miss Blais, 29, winner in France's Prix Medicis in 1966 for the internationally-applauded Une saison Cans la vie d'Emmanuel, wins the Canadian prize for her seventh novel, Manuscrits de Pauline Archange.

Mr. Cohen, has achieved fame and courted controversy in Canada, the United States and Europe in verse and song, on film and records and in personal concert appearances. His award is for the collection Selected Poems.

Mr. Dumont's award-winning book, Le lieu de l'homme, examines contemporary culture and the conflicts involved.

Mr. Richler wins his award for two 1968 books—the satirical novel Cocksure, and Hunting Tigers Under Glass, a collection of articles reprinted from magazines in Canada, Britain and the United States.

Mrs. Munro has had her short stories—usually set in southwestern Ontario where she was born in 1931—published in Canadian periodicals and anthologies of fiction. Her husband owns a book store in Victoria.

In addition to receiving the cash prizes, each of the winners will be presented with specially-bound copies of his or her prize work at a ceremony in Ottawa May 13.

Acadians in Paris Seeking French Aid

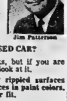
PARIS (CP) — A four-member French-speaking delegation from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, drawing on a year's experience of cultural aid by France to Acadian communities, meets today with French education experts.

The four Acadians also are to attend a luncheon with members of the Paris-based High Commission for Defence and Expansion of the French Language.

In an interview Monday night, delegation member Euclide Daigle of Moncton, N.B., secretary of the Societe Nationale des Acadiens, told how France is giving aid worth $60,000 to the French-language newspaper in Moncton, L'Evangeline.

The help has enabled L'Evangeline to arrange for a move next month to a building where printing and editorial activities will be combined under one roof.

Also made possible were the services of a French journalist, purchase of a new press and projected use of a technician from France, to administer L'Evangeline's installation in its future quarters. The aid program was decided upon in 1968. The secretary of the language commission which is holding a luncheon for the Acadian delegates today is Philippe Rossillon, a subject of controversy in Canada last year because of activities attributed to him by Prime Minister Trudeau.



But the Acadians did not know whether Rossillon would attend the luncheon.

After a meeting Monday with Canadian Ambassador Paul Beaulieu and other embassy officials, Daigle said he does not believe the present visit will arouse hostility among English-speaking Maritimers.

The current trip is a "natural prolongation" of Acadian life, he added.

No meeting was planned with President de Gaulle, who saw a similar Acadian delegation in Paris last year.

THE CAR BUYER'S PROBLEMS

Jim Patterson

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO LOOK AT A USED CAR?

Almost any car can be as good as it looks, but if you are thinking of buying one, be sure you know how to look at it.

A previous accident is often indicated by ripped surfaces which show up at different angles and in variances in paint colors. Try the doors, trunk lid and windows for proper fit.

A fender-denting mishap has no effect on the useful life of a used car, but a frame-twisting smash-up can be another thing.

Mileage readings can be meaningless, as check for sagging seats, broken springs, unduly worn foot pedals and general body looseness for indication of a worn out car. If the steering has more than two inches of play or if the brake pedal sinks unusually low, worn parts may be indicated.

Remember, all parts of a car wear out together and excessive wear in one area usually indicates impending repairs in other places not exposed to view or immediate testing.

Knowledge of the surface signs of car wear can be helpful to an average buyer, but it does not replace an expert's appraisal, especially of the engine and other mechanical parts.

If you are doubtful, you can do one of two things, or both: You can check with previous owner or seek out a dealer in whom you can put your trust and confidence.

Layton Supports French-Canadians

MONTREAL (CP) — Poet Irving Layton, longtime star in the Montreal artistic firmament, who has accepted a post at Toronto's York University, says he supports French-Canadian nationalism.

The Romanian-born Mr. Layton, 57, who taught poetry at Sir George William's University here for 20 years and produced 22 books, said in a letter to The Montreal Star Monday that a newer report from Toronto last week about his new appointment, was "somewhat slanted."

"It does give the unwary reader the impression that I'm opposed to the upsurge of French-Canadian nationalism in the province of Quebec," the letter says.

"Of course I am not, having supported it from its earliest manifestations. I most emphatically repudiated the statement that the lights are going out in Montreal' when it was attributed to me in the by the reporter who interviewed me, precisely because it carried connotations I found dismaying and unwarranted.

"I did say the Chanukah candles were being put out, but quickly added that I saw no cause in that fact for lamentation or nostalgic regret.

"The economic, social and cultural forces that produced the milieu out of which has come the distinctive poetry of A. M. Klein, Leonard Cohen and myself were no longer operative and that was that."

THE FALL OF ROME ALMOST KILLED IT !

Boxing was quite popular with the ancient Greeks, and Romans but died out after the fall of Rome in 476 A.D. The sport was revived by European kings who enjoyed watching it as millions do today!

Boxing has lost popularity since World War II and there may be some unused equipment around your house. Sell it fast . . . with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Dialing 962-9171 will get the job done!

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've an aversion to growing old. I've just turned 65. Call me foolish, but it depresses me. I'd rather say goodbye while I'm still in possession of all my faculties.

Answer: You will be all right with me—while I can still see hear, play golf, and have a normal sex life. I can't imagine how I'd stand the boredom, of just sitting around twiddling my thumbs when I'm in my 60s. Do I at least make some sense? — Mr. J.

Comment: I'll have to be blunt — I'm sorry you don't make sense. I hope your depression is temporary. Chances are it is. Most who get the 60th birthday blues get over them and bounce back to normal vigor of mind and body.

If you stop to think of it, you'll agree that old age is a disease most normal people want to "catch." If you never catch it you're dead. And who wants to be dead prematurely? It is her innate wisdom nature has a way of gently guiding us from one age group into the next. Although the 60s seem like hoary old age to a youngster, Mr. J., you will find when you reach your 65s, 60s, 70s (I hope) that new pleasures compensate for any others that have been lost on the long journey.

If you look around you, many mentally alert and physically active happy oldsters still negate your theory that old age is necessarily a time of boredom.

My advice to you, Mr. J., is to learn to accept the passing years with good grace; so you can celebrate your succeeding birthdays with thankfulness for still being alive.

* * *

For Mr. Y.: In a recent report to the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), Joseph T. Doyle, M.D., and his associates found that the risk of myocardial infarction (also called "heart attack") in men who have been avoiding 20 or more cigarettes daily is about three times greater than in non-smokers, former smokers or pipe smokers.

* * *

For Mrs. T.: Be thankful that at the age of 52 you have been in your change of life without having any discomforting symptoms like edginess, hot flushes, etc. I can understand why your doctor feels that you do not have to take hormones.

There's a misbelief going the rounds that all women are better off taking hormones, beginning in their late 40s. Better get along without them if there's no indication for their use.

For Mrs. N.: Way do youngsters take drugs? There's a long list of reasons, but here are a few: Some take drugs to cope with some depression they may be undergoing. Others because of the fear of insanity. Still others on an impulse or dare. They don't want to be called "chicken." In a few there are actual signs of organic brain damage. What is distressing, is that there is a family history of much tension and discord.

* * *

For Mrs. O.: Blepharitis is an inflammation of the eyelids. Its treatment will depend up on the cause: infection, allergy, eye strain, etc.

Travellers Take Any Means Of Transportation Available

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The impact upon the travelling public of the grounding of Canada's largest passenger air fleet was immediately and predictable—Monday. There was a scurrying for other means of transportation, some frustrations and delays in getting from here to there.

But most travellers adopted an I'll-take-what-I-can-get approach. They lined up for space on other airlines, turned to buses and private cars for short trips, "sat up" on long train trips when they could not obtain sleeping accommodation. An affluent few chartered airplanes.

Otherwise, the first full day of the Air Canada strike passed uneventfully.

Sufficient notice of the strike of 6,300 machinists, storemen and maintenance men at 11:59 p.m. EST Sunday had been provided to permit orderly layingup of the 108-plane fleet that normally carries 18,000 passengers a day.

Other effects of the strike may start being felt today. Mail deliveries will be slowed since Air Canada hauled most air mail. Perishable goods usually flown across the country won't get to market since smaller airlines, trying to cope with passenger traffic, won't handle air freight.

It was a bonanza for the small airlines and the railways though not an unmixed blessing. They were being pushed as provide sufficient space and once the emergency is over, the extra equipment, costly to put into service, goes back into storage.

Candian Pacific Airlines, Air Canada's chief competitor which long has sought to step up its transcontinental service, received approval from the Canadian transport commission to put on as many daily flights between Montreal and Vancouver as it can provide for the duration of the strike. Other emergency services by smaller operators also were approved.

Perhaps the greatest tangle Monday occurred at Toronto's Malton International Airport which handles 19,000 passengers a day for Air Canada alone. The terminal was plugged throughout the day with air travellers seeking space.

A CPA spokesman said some of the company's planes were taking off from Toronto with empty seats because the reservation desk could not handle the deluge of calls. One plane took off with 30 empty seats, he said.

Most airlines flying out of Toronto put on extra flights in an attempt to handle the load and the railways reported unusually heavy traffic, particularly on trains to Montreal, with additional equipment being put into use.

A similar situation was reported at most other centres across the country with emergency being met immediately, or with short delays.

These were some other effects of the strike.

TransAir Ltd., which operates out of Winnipeg and would normally use every piece of its equipment, lost the use of its largest plane, a Viscount. The Viscount was serviced by Air Canada maintenance men.

A Boeing 727 that carries 118 passengers will be put into service in Newfoundland Wednesday by Eastern Provincial Airways. It had not been scheduled to go into regular operation until June 1.

Air Canada reservations staff will be laid off today but its Calgary, eight clerks have jobs lined up. They were hired by Pacific Western Airlines to help with its rush of bookings.

Northland Railway Criticized

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative and Liberal members of the legislature's committee on commissions Monday criticized the Ontario Northland Railways Commission for discriminatory hiring practices.

John Smith (PC—Hamilton Mountain) said the commission was not as progressive as private industry in northeastern Ontario in giving administrative or supervisory positions to Indians.

Eskimos hold such positions in northern Quebec and Indians hold responsible jobs in private industry offices between North Bay and Moosonee, he said. But although more than 50 per cent of the ONR's section and track gangs are Indian, none hold senior positions.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For April 23

Your birthday today: The year ahead requires self-knowledge beyond what you have encountered thus far. Your intuition, cultivated in meditation, fills the bowl. Seeds of the urgency of social activity gives way to more time spent alone (and profitably so). Emotional and romantic interests progress steadily. The social quality of today's natives is the knack for sensing or contriving plots and patterns of organization. Generally they are tactful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Contracts and other important agreements are ready for signing today. Existing contracts are more easily broken than usual, and your emotional ties are vulnerable to such changes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Social life and old relationships suffer neglect while you focus your mind and creative drives onto new programs of personal expansion.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You get started bright and early in a full day. Stop exactly on quitting time. You have something in the evening that was unplanned.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): For once it is hard to state your case. A differing viewpoint offers interesting possibilities, some of them profitable, but it is difficult to explain or difficult to explain to people who have not changed their positions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Smooth any discrepancy from yesterday, make your amends. Friends can be helpful today in secret goals. Discretion is best, however, so don't confide too much.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Deals with long established institutions work out more easily. Move now to achieve your long-range vocational goals. Use any confidential information for all it's worth. Keep your own counsel!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Partnership matters may need legal review to make sure you are on the right track. Fresh ideas open interesting possibilities. Business and personal enterprises thrive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Emotional ties deepen with shared experience. Some inconvenience occurs in your chores, but it is worth the effort. Children have a way of touching you today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 —Jan. 19): Bring people together for a team effort. Distant people are important; some come unexpectedly. New friendships are likely. Get the name when introduced, look it up later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Pursue your vocation diligently — the rewards are high, both in personal satisfaction and improved earnings. Restrain the urge to spend this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Emotional ties continue to be extremely important today, as unsettled conditions bring many probable distractions or interruptions. Get rest early; tomorrow is better tackled while full of energy.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the inflamed, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Canada's 'Working Poor' Forgotten Group in War on Poverty

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada said today "the working poor" are in many ways a forgotten group in efforts to combat poverty.

It is not enough simply to have government programs to help the disadvantaged regions of Canada or particular groups of people, like Indians, Eskimos, Metis, or separated, divorced or widowed mothers heading families.

A more fundamental attack must also be made on the problem of raising the incomes of "the working poor," those who have jobs for at least part of the year but do not earn enough to lift their families over the poverty line.

The council's views were in a brief presented to the new Senate committee on poverty. The committee was formed primarily at the suggestion of the council, which emphasized the problem of poverty in its 1968 annual review, released last September.

The council said it has started some new research into poverty problems and will give the initial results in a later appearance before the committee. Its opening brief was essentially stage-setter for th Senate's enquiry.

One in every five Canadians lives in poverty, the council said. It defines poverty as "an insufficient access to certain goods, services and conditions of life which are available to everyone else and have come to be accepted as basic to a decent minimum standard of living."

In dollar terms, this amounts to $1,800 a year for a single person, $2,000 for a family of two, $3,000 for a family of three, $4,200 for a family of four, and $4,800 for a family of five.

"It could perhaps be agreed that they do not err heavily on the side of generosity," the council said of these poverty lines.

Another criterion of poverty is that any family or individual spending more than 70 per cent of total income on food, clothing and shelter is in "a low-income situation and likely to be suffering from poverty."

"The present problem in Canada is one of minority poverty in the midst of comparative affluence," the council said.

"It is readily apparent that the incidence of poverty in Canada—the likelihood of a given person being poor—is notably higher in the Atlantic provinces and Eastern Quebec; in rural areas; in Indian, Eskimo and Metis communities; in families headed by widows, divorcees and deserted wives; and in families headed by men who are not in the labor force on account of old age or other reasons."

But the council said it is "all too easy to draw the conclusion" that strong support of regional development and special welfare measures for specific groups would constitute an adequate anti-poverty program for Canada.

"A program limited to them alone would leave untouched a very large part of the low-income population."

The greater part of Canada's total poverty is urban, and half of it is west of the Ottawa river. Most poor families are headed by men under 65, and most poor families are headed by someone in the labor force.

"We are thus confronted with the phenomenon of the working poor: Those who have jobs for at least part of the year but who do not earn enough at them to lift their families over the poverty line.

"In relation to our present structure of social policies, this is in many ways a forgotten group."

Attention Pledged To Cities

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Monday promised municipalities closer consultation on the development of federal policies and programs affecting the big cities.

Prime Minister Trudeau told a delegation from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities he is aware of the problem created by the constitution, which does not provide for formal relations between the federal government and the municipalities. The municipalities are created by the provinces and their main constitutional tie is to them.

Works Minister Arthur Laing told the delegation that in future his department will consult municipal authorities on the federal government's plans to build new projects within their borders. Previously, the federal government generally built whatever it needed, whenever it wished.

Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, in charge of federal housing policy, said the government is going to try several ways to reduce the cost of houses. One of these is the project recently announced for Ottawa in which low-cost homes will be built for sale on extra-long mortgages.

Mr. Hellyer also told the mayors, aldermen and reeves that Ottawa is worried about the high cost of urban renewal projects. He estimated that the projects now under study would total $3,000,000,000, and at a federal expenditure of $25,000,000 a year it would require 120 years to do the job.

Mayor A. M. Campbell of Scarborough, one of the Metropolitan Toronto boroughs, presented the federation's brief and complained of on-again-off-again federal policies affecting the municipalities. He said when long-standing plans such as the winter works subsidies are terminated suddenly, the municipalities are caught with a change of planning.

Mr. Trudeau told the delegation its request for more direct consultation with Ottawa was timely because the federal government will be meeting the provinces again in June on constitutional reform.

Prince Edward Refuses To Levy School Taxes

Ulster Crisis
Voting Change Okayed

BELFAST (CP) — Northern Ireland's ruling Unionist party today accepted the principle of one man, one vote in local elections.

The vote, in a caucus of the party's representation in Ulster's Parliament, was 28 to 22. The narrow majority underlined the gravity of the split among Prime Minister Terence O'Neill's Unionists and signalled that more political battles are to come before the universal franchise is established here.

O'Neill had threatened to resign unless the party agreed to his demands.

The decision was, however, hedged with qualifications which may aggravate rather than ease Northern Ireland's current unrest.

The party decided that the de-

Capital Captured

LAGOS (Reuters) — Federal forces have captured the Biafran stronghold of Umuahia, Radio Nigeria reported today.

The radio, which broke into its regular programs, said the key city fell to forces of a 1st Army Division command by Col. Mohammed Shuwa.

Umuahia served the secessionist government of Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu as a makeshift administrative headquarters for more than 18 months after the loss of the former Biafran capital of Enugu in October, 1967.

No Dissenters From Decision

By Robert Dunnett, Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward county council last night refused to levy for education costs until some adjustment is made in the board of education.

There was not one dissenting vote when councillors refused to collect school taxes, increased by 100 per cent this year.

The estimated school budget for 1969 is $2,940,489, of which $1,876,561 will have to be raised by a property tax levy. This is $936,227 more than the $940,334 raised by property taxes last year.

County representatives have met three times with Department of Education officials in Toronto, seeking an adjustment in the government grant structure to lower the sum to be collected by property tax.

Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg said his township's school tax would increase by 118 per cent this year. This could force some home owners along the bay shore opposite Belleville to pay a school levy as high as $2,000 on their properties.

Reeve Cunningham, a secondary school teacher in Trenton, said the township's school levy would have increased by only 40 to 80 per cent had it been allowed to remain under the Hastings county board of education, as it had requested.

"Our rate payers can't pay this, people will lose their property," said Reeve Gordon Lloyd of Hillier.

South Marysburgh Reeve Allan Ridley, a teacher, said teachers' salaries are not the sole cause of the increased expenditure.

He said that although the school board claims the county system has cut down administration costs, it did not include the director of education's salary in its figure. That expenditure was added into the teachers' salary category of the budget.

Hallowell Reeve George Vincent said he would not accept increases of over 10 per cent.

Reeve Robert Boyce of Wellington commented on the hiring of a second vice-principal for Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

"If they can find $13,000 here and there in the budget for a vice-principal, this isn't a very tight budget," he remarked. "Surely we aren't going to stop all municipal building so they can put red carpets in the schools," he added.

Reeve Cunningham said this morning all county reeves will return to their township councils with the county council's decision.

"I'm sure our councillors will support county council's stand in refusing to pay for school costs until an adjustment is made," he said.

Everybody Can Choose His Own Time at Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A council decision to make daylight time voluntary instead of obligatory has thrown local industries, school boards, courts and surrounding municipalities into a quandary.

First body to make a decision was the department of justice which announced Tuesday special courts will go on EDT. This means a person summoned to court at a certain time must appear at the stipulated EDT hour, regardless of the time he personally chooses to follow.

School boards are awaiting decisions by industry before setting on a time schedule for pupils.

Area municipalities, who previously followed Windsor's lead to EDT, now are scrambling their laws to see if they can continue to follow the voluntary time code.

Diefenbaker Wants Commons To Ratify Indian Treaties

REGINA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Tuesday night that if his life-long goal of an end to discrimination is to be realized, action must be taken to uphold Indian treaties.

Parliament should declare that all the old treaties with the Indians are to be upheld, and then pass legislation to ratify them, said the Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Prince Albert during a banquet in his honor.

"The Indian today is becoming aroused and he has every right to be aroused," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "The Indian is asking that the treaties be upheld."

Mr. Diefenbaker said some of the treaties have been declared void since they were passed before Confederation.

Indians Told, Not Asked

MONTREAL (CP) — A panel composed mostly of Canadian Indians agreed Tuesday night that governments have been telling Indians what to do without asking them for more than 100 years.

Gene Lahache, a Mohawk from the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal, told a forum in suburban Pointe Claire, that civil servants who are supposed to be helping Indians "are fighting among themselves because they want to make sure they have a job tomorrow."

Noel Star Blanket of Montreal suggested Indians may be forced to blow up an international bridge or a train "to make the white man understand our problems."

Israel Marks Its Birthday Amidst Bombs

JERUSALEM (AP) — Arabs and Israelis exchanged fire again today along the Jordanian border near the Israeli frontier city of Beit Shean, and there were reports of at least two terrorist incidents as Israel continued to celebrate the 21st anniversary of its independence.

An Israeli army spokesman said Arab rocket fire burst near Beit Shean, four miles from the Jordanian border, and that the fire was returned. He gave no other details.

Three Arabs were wounded in occupied Gaza City when a small package of explosives blew up in a movie house. Authorities said no movie was showing at the time and the Arabs were held for questioning. A grenade also was buried at a police jeep in the Jenne city and troops searched for the attacker.

Israeli diplomats said today the ceasefire along the Suez Canal has not broken down despite Secretary-General U Thant's warning that a "virtual state of active war" exists in the area.

The diplomats said Thant had failed to take into consideration reports from UN military observers that Egypt had initiated most of the recent fighting along the 103-mile waterway. They claimed that Cairo is attempting to create a war scare to force the Big Four powers into a pro-Arab plan of settlement for the Middle East crisis.

Some diplomats at the United Nations in New York said the recurrent fighting might indeed be prodding the Big Four to greater effort.

They added that the alarmist tone of Thant's report left him open to charges that he was agreeing with the contention by Egypt and Jordan that war is inevitable unless the Big Four forces Israel into a settlement acceptable to the Arabs.

Israel, which opposes outside intervention, denies that there is danger of war.

The U.S. state department, associating itself with Thant's report, called on Israel and the Arab states to "take effective measures" to maintain the ceasefire and "avoid all actions which aggravate the tense situation."

Nixon Asks For War On Mafia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, proposing a $61,000,000 war against organized crime in the United States, asked Congress today to make corruption of police and local officials and operation of large-scale illegal gambling rings federal offences.

In a special message which said the leaders of the Cosa Nostra "are more firmly entrenched and more secure than ever before," Nixon said his administration is studying the potential use of anti-trust laws to cripple syndicate-owned operation of legitimate businesses financed by illicit revenues.

Nixon also said he wants the crime-fighting budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 to be increased by $25,000,000 to a record $61,000,000.

Three Schools Cleared After Bomb Warnings

Three schools in the Richmond Hill area—Bayview junior high, Langstaff secondary and Richmond Hill high—were emptied during the noon hour while police searched without success for a bomb.

CF-5 Jets Pressed On Malays

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Canada made a strong bid today to ensure Malaysian purchase of her CF-5 jet fighters with a special offer of low-interest finance.

Jean-Luc Pepin, the visiting Canadian trade minister, told reporters after a meeting with Deputy Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak that Canadian equipment could be made available through the Canadian export credit insurance corporation.

"We have made a good offer and it is up to the Malaysian government to make a decision," he said. "We are trying to convince the Malaysian government to accept our proposals on the sale of Canadian CF-5 aircraft."

Boats Ride Herd On Erie Waste

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Floating plastic barriers, manoeuvred by boats, were trying to corral a 25-square-mile slick of oily waste of Lake Erie several miles off Ontario shores Tuesday night.

The slick formed after 72,000 gallons of waste was accidentally pumped into the Detroit River from a Chrysler Corp. chemical plant at Trenton, Mich., seven miles above Lake Erie.

A Chrysler spokesman discounted early reports of an "oil slick" and said the discharge waste was 90 per cent water, about one per cent oil emulsifying detergent and contained perhaps "about 10 gallons of oil."

He said the detergent was non-toxic and the corporation believed it to be harmless to animal life or fish.

U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said the slick stretched from a point six miles off Colchester, Ont., 25 miles south of Windsor, back toward the Detroit River and was about five miles wide and seven miles long.

The Chrysler spokesman said as soon as the slick is "corralled" within plastic floats, barges will move in to suck up the waste and separate the thin film of oil and detergent from the water.

Sewer Service Poses Problem As Thurlow Gets OWRC View

By ROY PEACOCK
(Staff Reporter)

Thurlow township council has promised Belleville an early decision on paying costs of an increased size sewer up the Moira River which would later allow that municipality to hook into the city sewer system.

This was the decision yesterday at a joint meeting of Belleville and Thurlow councils with representatives of the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

But, it is all a matter of cost and township councillors yesterday were told frankly by L. Owers, OWRC assistant general manager that the municipality couldn't afford it.

The immediate proposal is that Thurlow pay the $117,000 cost difference between a 33-inch sewer planned by the city and a 42 - inch pipe which would be required to also serve part of Thurlow.

But in addition to the $117,000 ($207,000 counting debenture costs), the township would have to contribute for other heavy expenditures to extend the sewer into the township.

The sanitary sewer up the river bed is planned by the city to serve its Hillcrest and industrial park areas and commitments have been made to have it completed by 1970.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission, said that further agreements are being made on the assumption that the sewer will be ready next year.

If the township cannot see its way clear to raise the additional $117,000 Alderman Joyce said it was imperative the city go ahead now with the planned 33-inch sewer.

Outlining the proposal for joint installation of the sewer as far as College Road, Mayor J. R. Scott reiterated it would be poor business to install a smaller size sewer now only to dig it up to provide an additional sized pipe to allow later service for Thurlow.

Reeve Horace Casey said Thurlow township officials heard the OWRC would underwrite the costs and then bill Thurlow on a sliding-scale basis.

Thurlow's problem is that the Ontario Municipal Board will not allow further sub-divisions and industry does not care to locate unless services are provided.

Mr. Owers said, as an engineer, he endorsed the idea of the joint sewer, but asked where the township expected to get the revenue to pay the cost.

He said the question of extending sewers into an undeveloped township area had to be considered.

"Costs would have to be supported by the present capability to pay, otherwise the Ontario Municipal Board would not agree," he said.

-Thurlow's plan would be to eventually service about 2,000 acres south of its 3rd concession and north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, taking in Carrefton and possibly Corbyville.

Clerk-treasurer Earl Dafoe said assessment in the area would be about eight to 10 million (100 per cent value), or up to 15 million if Corbyville was included.

Thurlow Deputy Reeve Borden Forsythe wondered whether the township might be better advised to consider its own sewage system, rather than expect to tie in with Belleville.

He noted, however, it was OWRC which made the original suggestion of going in with Belleville.

"They said it could be done," he said.

At the same time he emphasized if the joint sewer went only as far as College Street it would be of no use to this township.

Mr. Owers, however, said the township still had a great deal of thinking to do before it could go into a joint venture with Belleville.

First, it would have to consider the additional cost of the larger sewer in Belleville; also its share of sewage treatment costs and the cost of sewer installation in the township.

"I doubt if you can afford it," he said.

Even if the township did make a commitment he said there was no way which the OWRC could call for tenders this year.

"One year from now would be the soonest," he said.

One solution which could speed up a construction start, Mr. Owers said, would be for the city to underwrite the larger-sized sewer in its entirety. However, Mayor Scott and city manager J. R. Reynolds said this would be impossible. They said the OMB wouldn't approve.

Annexation or amalgamation with Belleville was suggested by several city aldermen as a way of solving the problem.

But this suggestion received cool reception from township members.

"If, through annexation, we lost all our developed land, the township could not survive," Reeve Casey said.

Mayor Scott agreed that annexation could be allowed to "take the cream off the top of the bottle."

"If there is amalgamation, it must be the entire township," he said.

Alderman Douglas Boyle said he was opposed to servicing areas outside the city limits. If so it would stagnate development within Belleville.

But alderman Robin Jeffrey said that with annexation township people would at least have sewer and water.

Mr. Owers persisted in his suggestion that the only solution was for Belleville to build the proper-sized sewer and put their sewer into an agreement with Thurlow to recover the costs.

Otherwise the OWRC would be placed in the position of relying on future township growth to recover costs.

"If we built the sewer would the OWRC take it over later?" asked Mayor Scott.

Alderman Joyce said there was no way the city could wait for a year before construction of the sewer was commenced.

At the suggestion of Mayor Scott, Thurlow officials agreed to meet and let the city know its decision as soon as possible.

New mercury vapor lamps have been installed on Belleville's two 30-year-old bridges over the Moira. The scene here is at the Lower Bridge.

City Illuminates Upper, Lower Bridges

In accordance with a previous directive from city council, Belleville now has approximately 94,400 watts of new lights illuminating the city's Upper and Lower bridges over the Moira.

Installation of the twin arm mercury vapor lights — six on each bridge — was completed this week.

The roadway is lighted with 400 watt mercury vapor lights and the sidewalk with 125 watt lights of the same type.

The new lights replace the old cast iron standards and comparatively weak incandescent bulbs which had "illuminated" the bridges since they were constructed in the middle 1920s.

But according to many residents the "illumination" provided by the old lights was questionable — even when they were working.

So is the face of repeated complaints city council directed that the old lights be replaced with a more modern type.

Quinte Area Reveals High Alcoholism Rate

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The Eastern Ontario area between Port Hope and Brockville has the third highest percentage of alcoholics for its total population of all North American communities.

The area's record is exceeded only by San Francisco, with the largest number of alcoholics per capita, and Boston, with the second largest.

The figures, based on reports by the Ontario Medical Association and Queen's University, were given last night by Inspector Ralph Blatchford of the Belleville Police.

He spoke at a workshop conducted by the Mayor's Committee on Youth at St. Joseph's School Wednesday night. The workshops for parents on drug addiction are being held all this week at schools throughout the city.

"Don't press the panic button," Inspector Blatchford told his listeners. "Police have traditionally been silent on these things, but within the last few years we have felt we should acquaint citizens with the total picture. Some communities still bury their heads in the sands over this issue."

C. G. Mersereau, supervisor of programs for the separate school board, told the group the specific drugs disclused, marijuana, amphetamines, barbiturates, and LSD, are not the problem.

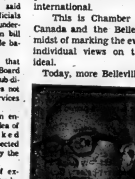
"Next year we will be discussing new drugs, as yet unheard of," he said. "The problem is not specific drugs; it goes deeper, to the problem of alienated youth. Until we get to the heart of this we won't solve anything."

Magr. James Sullivan said the problem of alcohol and drug abuse is serious in Belleville, although only a few young people are involved.

"The situation is serious because the rehabilitation picture is so poor," he asserted.

Inspector Blatchford urged parents, who discover their children using drugs, to inform the police. But first, he suggested, the parents should seek the advice of their family doctor or clergyman, and arrange psychological counselling for themselves and the child.

"But we need your co-operation in feeding the source of supply," he said. "We are not interested in jailing those who transgress once or twice. We don't need a senior, plain-clothes officer to question your child in your presence. By correlation of the bits of information we thus gain from each user, we can obtain a picture of the drug situation here and take steps to overcome it."



The officer added that the sense of shame a child might experience on being questioned by the police might be part of the cure.

Chamber of Commerce Hears from Members

The Chamber of Commerce is an inseparable part of the social scene — local, national and international.

This is Chamber of Commerce Week across Canada and the Belleville organization is in the midst of marking the event — notably by presenting individual views on the Chamber of Commerce ideal.

Today, more Bellevillians have these ideas:

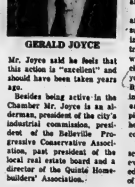
FRANK HEISZ

"More spacious quarters in a premium location" is what Chamber of Commerce treasurer Frank Heisz feels is needed along one line.

As far as the Chamber's actions and objectives are concerned Mr. Heisz said the "Chamber has been getting a high level of effectiveness from funds, facilities and personnel at its disposal. It makes an important contribution to Belleville's favorable image as a good place to live, work, play and raise a family."

Even so, Mr. Heisz concurs with most of the members that "periodic review and restatement of policy objectives is necessary in any organization."

"It helps all members direct their efforts in a common way and forms a new basis for updating existing programs and appraising proposed projects.



Mr. Heisz is also involved in the community as coach of the Tyke division of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association and last year was co - chairman of the United Community Services campaign.

After 10 years as a Chamber member and as a director for two, Gerald Joyce feels the organization is not getting all the publicity mileage it should be.

"The chamber has been performing services which are probably not generally known by Belleville citizens at large," he stated.

Mr. Joyce also feels that some of the Chamber's present duties should be dispensed with so that the organization could concentrate more fully on the aims and objectives of a Chamber of Commerce — promoting commerce.

Presently, a committee study is being made of the aims of the Belleville Chamber and

GERALD JOYCE

Mr. Joyce said he feels that this action is "excellent" and should have been taken years ago.

Besides being active in the Chamber Mr. Joyce is an alderman, president of the city's industrial commission, president of the Belleville Professional Conservation Association, past president of the local real estate board and a director of the Quinte Homebuilders' Association.

Businessman Explains Renewal View

Downtown businessman Doug Dunnisie, who was a member of the original urban renewal committee set up by the Chamber of Commerce today explained his views on the topic.

Contrary to the impression given in yesterday's Intelligencer Mr. Dunnisie feels that the Magic Circle program is going through its normal stages and is progressing well.

The magic circle concept involves a revamping of the downtown area.

"Belleville needs urban renewal," he stated, "not just in the downtown area but all over the city."

Mr. Dunnisie did mention, however, that since the city has hired a "professional group" to make a study on what is needed, "any action along another vein at this time might be premature."

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce last night was verbally diagnosed as four panelists and an audience discussed the question Is the Chamber of Commerce worthwhile?

Chamber vice-president Harry Fast, Alderman Robin Jeffrey, Chamber past president Gerald Wishart and Ray Bradshaw, president of the Belleville and district Labor Council, made up the panel, moderated by Joseph Demeza.

"We all have room for improvement," said panelist Ray Bradshaw in his opening remarks.

"It was worthwhile in the past," said Alderman Robin Jeffrey, leaving the obvious question to be answered individually.

Then in a provocative challenge to the chamber, she said "it's a two year baby, no ban renewal." The alderman said the chamber's support for renewal appeared to be worrying. She also claimed the chamber "avoided issues and failed to answer vitics."

"What would Belleville be like with out a Chamber," questioned Harry Fast and Gerald Wishart, the fourth panelist, stated "the Chamber of Commerce is essential" and threw out the suggestion that perhaps the chamber would be more effective as a regional organization and if the Belleville and District Labor council was a member."

Both Mr. Fast and Mr. Bradshaw agreed at least on one point last night — that neither of them wanted the labor council to be a member of the chamber.

"We need two different presentations of views and we would be more productive as separate groups," said Mr. Fast.

Mr. Bradshaw agreed. "Joining, no! — discussion — yes."

Ald. Jeffrey wrapped it up a few minutes later when she said "I wouldn't want to see the chamber combine — but I sure would like you to get along."

The panel became involved in current controversy as Mr. Bradshaw mentioned urban renewal and "the chamber condoning limited hours for businesses to be open."

Low wage rates and the industrial commission were also targets in there somehow.

Although Ald. Jeffrey was asked the question specifically by Mr. Bradshaw (about the makeup of the industrial commission) she claimed the question bore no relevance to the topic.

Mr. Wishart informed Mr. Bradshaw that he had to "dispel the myth that the chamber is anti-labor."

The question of the city grant to the chamber also drew comment.

"It's not a grant but payment for services rendered," said Harry Fast as he passed out some tourist promotion leaflets to point out where the city's money had gone.

But when Mr. Bradshaw picked up the map he pointed out the words "compliments of the Chamber of Commerce" where on it — not "compliments of the city of Belleville.

Chamber director Donald Jose was the first on his feet during discussion from the floor as he stated the Chamber "has a bad reputation to live down." Mr. Joss felt the chamber should be self-supporting (without the city's grant) and stated the only way things would be straightened out would be "by doing."

In answer to Mrs. Jeffrey's opening remarks about the chamber letting their "baby urban renewal evidently drop" another director spoke up.

Zdenek Kvarda said "It is the role of the chamber to promote and hatch ideas and it is the role of the powers that be to carry them through."

The Chamber fulfilled its role — it's in your hands now," he told her.

Speaking of the low wages that Mr. Bradshaw mentioned, director Frank Murray, also chairman of the chamber of commerce week, pointed out that the situation here is not as bad as some people make it out.

"I have no doubt that the CNR and other companies are paying their employees the same amounts here as they would be if they were located in northern Ontario or elsewhere," he said.

There was some support that the Chamber of Commerce grant from the city of Belleville is indeed "the handout" that Ald. Gerald Joyce, also a chamber director, called it.

On the panel, Alderman Jeffrey and Mr. Bradshaw agreed with Mr. Joyce the chamber should be self - sufficient.

"Let city hall do the jobs the chamber says they're doing for the city," said Mr. Joyce. "They could most probably do it as efficiently and with as much authority."

After the open discussion chamber president Jack Ireland assured the group that all the comments and suggestions would be considered by the directors.

City Quota $2,700,000

OMB Approves Capital Works Budget

The Ontario Municipal Board has approved Belleville's 1969 capital works quota of $2,722,500 as submitted.

This was the good news announced yesterday by city manager J. R. Reynolds at a special meeting of council. The session was held to approve the sale of more than $1,000,000 in debentures for works programs already completed.

Mr. Reynolds said the OMB had approved this year's proposed works program to cost $2,722,000 on the condition that the proposed water filtration plant extension would be sold by self-liquidating. Total cost of the filtration plant addition is estimated at $1,815,500.

The city manager said he had been able to show that the filtration plant addition would pay for itself without direct cost to the city taxpayers.

At last week's council meeting an OMB letter suggested the city might not be able to afford all capital works planned for this year in addition to its share of costs forecast for the Hastings County Board of Education.

Council yesterday approved the sale of $1,291,320 in debentures to Midland-Osler Securities Ltd. and to Wood-Gundy.

The debentures will be sold at par in United States and will carry an interest rate of 8¼ per cent.

Mr. Reynolds said that in view of the present money market and since the firm had handled city debentures in the past, he had no hesitation in recommending acceptance of the sale proposal.

He felt that the debenture proposal had had some effect in the "successful conversations" with the OMB with respect to the city's 1969 capital works' quota.

Mayor Scott said this year's debenture sale compared with the 7¾ per cent interest rate paid last year.

In view of rapidly increasing interest rates he said this year's sale was "very flattering for Belleville."

Mr. Reynolds said if Belleville had gone to the Canadian market the interest rate would have been at least 9 per cent.

This year's sale of debentures will earn the city a United States premium of $96,000 which Mr. Reynolds said would be invested in trust fund certificates. This would reduce the over-all cost of the debentures.

School Tax Protest Presented to MPP

BRIGHTON — The furor over upcoming tax levies continues and this area is no different.

Some local governments here now are waiting for reaction to their protest in the highest quarter — the Ontario government itself.

Four municipalities in Northumberland will know by next week just what action the Ontario government has taken after a recent rebuff to levy taxes as set by the county school board.

Harry Lafferty, deputy reeve for Murray township council said today the matter has been left in the hands of Russell Rowe, MPP Northumberland.

"He asked us to leave it with him for a few days to see what Queen's Park would do with it," said Mr. Lafferty.

It is expected a report on any legislature decision will be made to officials of the townships concerned, he said, said.

The townships of Murray, Brighton, Cramahe and the village of Brighton earlier protested division of the education budget by the school board.

When Mr. Rowe has his report ready it is expected that a meeting of the officials concerned will be called.

Salmon To Catch Tourists?

The Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association will make public at the end of this week a brief dealing with the possibility of stocking the immediate area of Lake Ontario with Coho Salmon.

William Menzies, member of the association responsible for the six-page brief, said today the document should be ready for distribution on Friday.

"We will be passing the document out to members of the legislature, municipal councils, tourist associations, sportsmen's clubs and the news media asking for their support," said Mr. Menzies.

He said the brief dealt with all aspects of such a salmon stocking program and the benefits which would result.

Mr. Menzies referred specifically to the tourist trade when he said that "available of salmon could be a great boost to our tourist industry."

OPP Charge Man In $75,000 Fraud

PICTON (Staf) — A man was arrested here yesterday on fraud charges totalling $75,000.

Joseph Omar Maurice Gagne, 50, of no fixed address was arrested by Picton OPP and charged with fraud following nine months of investigation.

On August 1 last year Picton OPP initiated an investigation in regard to an individual who was displaying large sums of money while claiming to be an airlines captain.

Police reported that during the investigation this person had traded cars 10 times in cash transactions.

The man stayed in motel rooms most of the nine months and usually had a private phone installed in his room.

The man has been charged in Toronto, Maple Creek, Saskatchewan and Windsor. The fraud charge laid by Toronto Metro Police totalled $20,000.

In Glass Houses

Discrimination knows no bounds. We rail at countries like South Africa and its racial policies enshrined in apartheid, forgetting that in this country we perpetrate the same kind of indignities on the Indians and Eskimos. In the United States there is a racial problem. And now, by way of contrast, the focus is on Australia.

Dr. J. W. Berry, a Canadian psychologist and his family are leaving that country because he feels the people are racist and authoritarian. He bases this view on a three-year study of the aborigines and surveys of Australian attitudes.

The big island continent's isolation and insularity have much to do with such attitudes. Yet how do we explain the degree of equality and harmony that marks relations between the Maori and European in nearby New Zealand?

But why stop at discrimination between the different races? In Ireland people are divided and intolerant and discriminatory on the basis of religion.

The moral is that people is glass houses (in other words, people everywhere) should not throw stones.

In Canada the Government is making some effort to catch up with its responsibilities toward the native population. In the most recent instance, however, it may mean only a tightening up of the administration of the law — all very well but scarcely likely to provide the jobs and inspire the motivation necessary to counter the boredom and drunkenness that, unhappily, are such a feature of the lives of the indigenous peoples.

Justice Minister Turner went along for the ride recently aboard a DC-3 carrying a judge, defence lawyer and Crown prosecutor to dispense justice throughout the Arctic, at places like Pond Inlet, Resolute Bay and Igloolik. Almost all court cases in the North — from the Yukon to Baffin Island — revolve around drunkenness, according to a newsman who accompanied the party.

Improvements contemplated include closer contact between the federal justice department and the Yukon and North West Territories systems and more legal training for the 50 Justices of the Peace (who include a former German prisoner-of-war, a minister, two Eskimos and three Indians).

But hand-in-hand with law enforcement, the Indians and Eskimos of Canada's North, sidetracked by civilization and in many instances ruined by the white man's liquor, must be afforded the hope of a better future grounded in education and the opportunity to work. Fishing and trapping are not enough, nor are the trappings of justice enough.

He Put Wife First

Should a tennis player be permitted to take his wife along with him while representing his country overseas? Fred Bolton, non-playing captain of the Canadian Davis Cup team said no on this score to John Sharpe of Toronto. As a result he has been dropped from the team to meet Holland next month.

Pierre Desaulles, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, had been unable to resolve the impasse and he said either Sharpe or Bolton would have to be dropped. He retained Bolton which in the circumstances was the right decision, but it leaves Sharpe out in the cold and the issue of wives travelling with players unsolved. Sharpe incidentally, is an Australian and was regarded as one of the top men on the team.

Golf affords a parallel. Professionals on the circuit invariably have their wives watching, and the girls tag along not just because of the prospect of all that prize money but because they know their moral support is important.

In Sharpe's case it would have been good policy to allow him to take his wife along, at his own expense, and to extend similar courtesies to other married players.

Family Man

Speaking of golf professionals and money, consider that cool $30,000 cheque Gary Player picked up in the winning the Tournament of Champions in California. Makes a fellow feel envious. As a family man Player certainly qualifies as a good provider for his wife, five children and the 30 horses at his farm in South Africa. Already wealthy from years of tournament victories, Player is also known as a religious man who carries a Bible around with him on his travels. Perhaps this, allied to a cheerful disposition and a positive outlook on life is what makes him the successful individual and family man that he is.

Spy Plane Incident

U.S. Keeping Watch on Red Threat to South Korea

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's two-sided response to the EC-121 affair apparently aims at muffling the cry at home for revenge while striving to intimidate the North Korean dictatorship into more respect for American might.

The appeal to the American public probably was unnecessary. The general reaction has been that little could be accomplished by U.S. retaliation. And so far, the threat to North Korea has been ineffective.

Some observers feel that nothing will deter Marshal Kim Il sung of North Korea from attempting his long-held goal of reuniting Korea under communism and that in fact incidents such as the shooting down of the American intelligence plane and its seizing of the Pueblo are but preliminaries to a new Korean "revolution" — perhaps another Korean war.

However, Nixon has ordered a massive show of American and fairly muscle into the Sea of Japan to try to prevent any more incidents.

The expected public outcry didn't materialize here following announcement last week that the North Koreans had shot down the lumbering, four-engined reconnaissance plane and its 31-man crew.

The hawks and some right-wingers made the predictable appeals for the government to teach the Pyongyang leaders a lesson, but the response was nowhere near the pitch 14 months ago when the North Koreans "arrested" the U.S. spy ship Pueblo.

Nixon waited three days before making a public comment last Friday and the government waited three days before making its first direct protest on the incident which, in substance, was more brutal and more brazen than seizure of the Pueblo.

Although as a presidential candidate last fall he promised that if elected "there isn't going to be another Pueblo in the next four years," Nixon's response to the so-called "flying Pueblo" incident was calm.

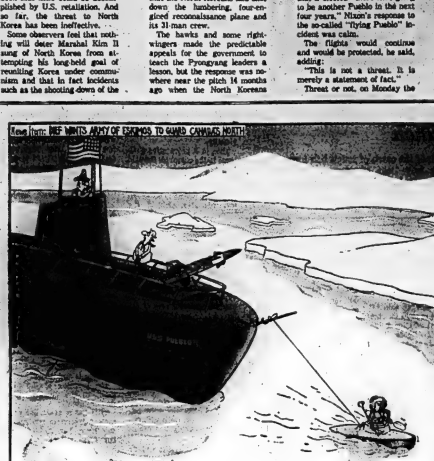
The flights would continue and would be protected, he said, adding:

"This is not a threat. It is merely a statement of fact."

Threat or not, on Monday the defence department announced a 23-ship task force was being dispatched to back up the president's words.

This sudden show of force after days of deliberate calmness raised speculation that government leaders had some reason for apparently upgrading the government's display of concern.

Certainly nothing strikes fear into the heart of official Washington more than the inexplicable thought of another land war in Asia.



Marshal Kim knows that as well as President Nixon knows that North Korea is not the "fourth-rate power" he said it was in the election campaign.

Since the 1953 armistice agreement, ending the Korean conflict, Kim's goal has been to bring the whole country under Communist rule.

War is unlikely while 50,000 American troops help patrol the demilitarized zone between the two Koreas. Additionally, the South Korean Army outnumbers the North Korean army by several hundred thousand.

But the main difficulty in Washington's view is that the Pyongyang government cannot be counted on to behave rationally let alone predictably. As Nixon pointed out in his Friday press conference, the North Korean government isn't really within the balance of the two capitals of world communism— in the Kremlin and in Peking.

It is this, perhaps more than any other factor, that makes Washington nervous.

"Claims we violated Canada's territorial waters!"

Court Sentence Under Scrutiny

Brockville Recorder and Times

When a court sentences a man to three years in prison as the result of the death of an innocent woman and mother, and when the man involved has a lengthy record, the ends of justice scarcely seem to have been served. This is not the type of sentence that is likely to earn respect for the law, when the maximum penalty could have been life in prison. The fate of the victim would appear to have little bearing in such a decision.

Last week a three-year prison sentence was given out in provincial court here on a charge of dangerous driving, involving the death of a local woman. She was struck down by a car travelling on the wrong side of the road, at a high rate of speed, a car that had been the object of a police chase earlier. The driver, an unemployed man, who somehow acquired money to drink a sufficient amount of alcoholic beverage to become impaired, was said to "feel remorse." If this man feels remorse, the family of the victim feels much more than remorse. And the general public feels much less than pleased at the sentence handed down by the court.

The accused was by no means a first offender, upon whom the court should show mercy. Nor was the crime one which he was sentenced a single incident.

There was a string of crimes.

It is our belief that the court does itself, and respect for the law, a disservice when the punishment doesn't seem to fit the crime. We believe, and strongly, that such is the case in this instance.

The Burden of Taxation

The Troisienne

Taxes are a never ending subject for discussion. But one thing which is puzzling to a non-politician is how politicians can regard income tax as a solution to everything.

Already our incomes are subject to the worst taxes in history. How can a tax which confiscates up to 20 percent of a man's income in the middle levels be regarded as progressive?

Ontario proposes separate personal income tax. All of us are reeling under excessive levels of taxation, which hit middle incomes most of all. How is it progressive to add more taxation to the same incomes?

As for sales taxes, which are generally regarded as regressive, they do have one virtue. They tax users.

Much of our present tax system takes from one set of people and gives to another. The income tax system is the worst example of this socialist principle.

Middle income people are being taxed out of the ability to own homes, or to live decently. Provincial assessment based on a 100 percent system will certainly not help that.

Why cannot politicians begin thinking in terms of less taxes for a change? We are all getting tired of supporting a vast army of people all paid at a much higher level out of the public purse than any of us can command for comparable jobs in private business and industry.

Not All Four-Letter Words Have Vulgar Connotations

Windsor Star

Some of the younger generation seem to regard certain four-letter words as an invented just for them, and proceed to delight themselves in toilet facility and sophistication in the use of the vulgarities. Yet these words are known among the oldest in the language.

Their use long since had declined in civilized conversation as more pleasant euphemisms were adopted. There certainly is nothing especially modern in the use of them and it doesn't take attendance at university to become adept with them.

One of the best synonyms of the use of such four-letter words was an illiterate fellow working on a road gang. We doubt if any university student could compete with him in this sort of degraded eloquence or debased articulation.

One shouldn't shy away from four-letter words just because some think it smart to use the obscene ones. Many of the finest words, expressive of the best in life, have only four letters. These include life itself, and love; body, soul and mind; house and home; baby, girl and wife. There is a wealth of meaning in these short words: they represent what is good and decent.

Educated people are judged largely by their command of language; good language, that is.

Eccentricity... It Knows No Bounds

The Montreal Star

Elders who rebuke the young for eccentricities of dress and manner should remember some of the eccentricities of their own background. Small towns and country places were delightfully represented with people who did their own thing without craving a whit for the censure of the majority.

There were men who felt a gold collar was the proper adornment for a white shirt and shunned collars and ties. Legends flourished about individuals who had no faith in banks and stored their money in strange places.

Some only ate white-shelled eggs because they said the brown ones were impure. At least one couple in a locality, soured by a matrimonial tiff or interference of relatives, resolutely remaindered their lives by conversing only through a third party — "Tell Ella we'll have eggs." There was a farmer so stubborn he sold his prize cow when she balked once at milking time.

Comic relief was provided by the staunch temperance advocate who refused to believe hers raspberry vinegar was alcoholic, even when tipsy guests were apprehended by the law. She laid it to personal prejudice on the part of the authorities.

One gentle soul was so addicted to preserving life he shunned spiders and hauled pocket potato bugs, releasing them a mile away from his farm, much to the discomfort of some of his neighbors. A miser carried his false teeth in a box and only ate on Sunday for eating, in order to save wear and tear.

Country storekeepers kept separate accounts for men and women, who even went so far as to buy groceries individually. When you visited you were given special chairs, depending on which one you came on. Perhaps the champion of resolute eccentricity came from Nova Scotia. Ernest Buckler, in "Ox Bells and Fireflies," relates how this married couple hadn't spoken to each other in fifteen years but managed to produce three sets of twins during the mute time!

Seaway's Costly Progress

The Montreal Star

Traffic has begun to move through the Seaway again, completing its first ten years of service. The warnings of the pessimists of yesteryear have been stilled, and the party lobbyists who strove to block the whole thing have turned to other chores. And as operations move into their second decade there is a chance that this year's inelusive objective of 50-million tons of cargo will be met. At least there is little likelihood of it being cut short by strikes as it was during the last two seasons. The only major cloud is in the outlook for grain shipments, which have been falling off since the record business of 1966.

Some time this month the Seaway Authority's annual report will provide an informed forecast of the future trend of the great inland shipping route. For 1967 there was an operating profit of $2.7-million, but this was completely swallowed up by a debt structure which can never be liquidated under existing financing, for a net deficit of $13-million. Next year, it has already been revealed, the authority intends again to seek higher tolls, and the Federation of Agriculture and the shipping companies have started their bold-the-line campaigns.

Until something is done to free the authority from the amortization load it cannot absorb, the fight is bound to go on with increasing bitterness.

Women Engineers

Christian Science Monitor

Britain is trying to talk more of its women into becoming engineers. It needs them — if the country is to keep pace with mushrooming demand for technical specialists. Britain has never women engineers than several other industrilized countries.

The Soviet Union leads the pack. Of every three Russian engineers, one is a woman. In Norway, it's one in 15. In France and the United States the proportion drops to one in 50.

To get the British bandwagon going, Yorkshire television — co-operating with Alexander Duckhams Company Ltd., an industrial firm — has begun a new series entitled "I am an Engineer."

Its star, of course, is a woman, a trihologist. If you have not tangled with that one lately, it means a specialist in problems involving friction.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brian Boru of Ireland paid with his own life for Ireland's freedom 955 years ago today — in 1014. His army defeated allied Norsemen and Leinstermen at the battle of Clontarf, near Dublin, but Brian was killed in his tent by a Viking who had taken refuge in the woods. His death epitomizes Ireland's history for many people. Though a great religious centre before the Norse attacks started, in 795, Ireland was almost without cities or political organizations. The Vikings built ports and began trade, but divided the Irish. Brian unified the country and put down foreign influence, but was murdered at his moment of triumph and civil war later resumed.

TO LINK TRANSPORT

TORONTO (CP) — The $50,000,000 Metro Centre transportation terminal—part of a joint Canadian Pacific-Canadian National railways renewal project, —will provide Toronto with a transportation system and not just buildings, project director Andrew Stewart said. He told the Transportation Club of Toronto that the terminal, by bringing together rail, GO commuter, subway, bus and other vehicular traffic and pedestrians, would embody a flexibility that future changes in forms of transport will require.

elsion must be referred to the standing committee of the Ulster Unionist Council. This is the grassroots organization of the Ulster Protestantism, and its membership includes powerful delegations of the Orange Lodge.

Universal suffrage has been the main demand of Catholic civil rights demonstrations, but the concession is certain to further inflame Protestant extremists, who accuse the Catholics of trying to take Northern Ireland out of the United Kingdom and join the Irish Republic.

Police with night sticks repeatedly charged a mob of Protestant extremists who closed shops and buses in a Catholic district of Belfast Tuesday night. The rioters met the police with a hail of rocks, chunks of steel and firebombs.

No casualty figures were announced but several persons were known to be injured, some seriously.

The riot-scarred city of Londonderry was quiet, but an empty customs post near the border with the Irish Republic was set ablaze by a gasoline bomb before dawn. Firemen from Londonderry extinguished the blaze.

The Rush of Spring!

Spring is many things — among them the rush of suddenly-released water pent up through the winter. Typical of many a scene in the Quinte district is this view of the Salmon River near Shannonville.

Canadians Hit Gold

Glass Paintings Revived Fad

LONDON (CP) — A versatile Canadian with a flair for digging new ideas out of well-trodden ground has revived a rare old English art and turned it into a booming international business.

The art is glass painting—transferring antique engravings to glass panels and painting them in oils. Brought to a fine pitch of perfection in the 18th century, it fell into obscurity for more than 150 years.

Then one day 2½ years ago, a Frenchman with two glass paintings under his arm walked into a book and print shop on London's Portobello Road owned by two Canadian expatriates, Charles (Chuck) Schwartz of Sudbury, Ont. and Larry Sackin of Toronto.

Schwartz, then 31, immediately saw the possibilities. He took the Frenchman into the firm and soon was heading for Harrods, the famed department store patronized by royalty and the jet-set, with a couple of sample paintings.

Today the partners employ 15 artists and produce up to 400 framed glass paintings a week from their second-storey warren of a studio in a tiny, paved backwater in London's theatre district.

They export 80 per cent of their output—mostly to Europe, though North America is catching up fast—and are finding it hard to keep pace with the gushing demand. After exhibiting at a Paris furniture show in January they were deluged with 250,000 orders of French orders.

Schwartz had already proved he could blend a shrewd financial sense with a connoisseur's eye. Arriving in London five years ago after a spell of teaching in France, he joined Investor's Chronicle, a financial weekly, as an investment analyst and taught for a while at an adult educational college.

Then he and Sackin, who worked for a book auctioneer, bought £10 worth of old books and set up a Saturday stall in Portobello Road street market. "Just for kicks." On their first Saturday they sold £8 worth of books and soon parlayed the business into a full-scale shop selling prints and rare volumes.

A visit to the old studio in the alleyway off Shaftesbury Avenue was an unforgettable experience. The visitor climbed two steep flights of rickety stairs, emerging into a bewildering maze of rooms opening off one another like a nest of Chinese boxes.

Vast wooden racks towered on all sides, containing thousands of glass paintings in various stages of completion. A pony-tailed girl dexterously painting in the flags and rigging to a galleon in full sail said: "If you're looking for Chuck, just follow the broken glass."

Sure enough, a trail of fragments led the visitor through the painted-littered warren, with magnificently decorated panels, glowing like medieval church windows, leaning about the floor with alarming abandon.

Loyalist Plans Programs For Union Employees

Loyalist College could be offering special education programs for union employees across the Quinte district.

Educational representatives of trade unions in this area met with Loyalist officials last night to discuss programs available under the Loyalist-administered manpower retraining program.

As a result of the meeting, E. J. Buckley, retraining coordinator, will attend upcoming meetings of the Belleville and Trenton labor councils to acquaint them with details of the program.

The program would involve as many union members as possible and the types of courses will depend on the interest shown.

College officials hope the idea of program retraining could involve the Napanee, Picton and Campbellford areas.

Last night's meeting was convened by R. A. Loader, labor representative member of Loyalist board of governors. Chairman was Judge J. C. Anderson, board chairman.

Members of trade unions from across the Quinte district were present, along with representatives from both Belleville and Trenton labor councils.

Protest Shire Hall Leasing

PICTON — After strong protests by reeves Barry Hepburn and Gordon Lloyd a by-law on the renting of Shire Hall to the Ontario Department of Public Works was not given a second reading. The hall and registry office are being used for the administration of justice.

Both reeves felt that it was "a lop-sided lease" leaving the County at the mercy of the provincial government. The lease did not stipulate that the department had to rent the offices for 10 years but it did bind the county for that number of years.

Salmon or Lobster Tulips are designed for bridal showers or luncheons and are a smash hit with the girls. The little toasted bread cups look like tulips and are crunchy like hot toast. If bridal showers or luncheons are on your June agenda this is just your dish from Mary Moore.

Ideal Menu for Bridal Shower

By MARY MOORE

As early as the first week in March letters started to arrive announcing... readers' shower and wedding plans.

We devised a new dainty dish to set before a bride.

If you are planning a bridal shower for 24 or 25 examine this suggestion for it has several merits. The first is flavor and texture: but what will convince you is that it may be made in advance and reheated at serving time. If you use salmon it is quite an economical effort for the shells or case are made of slices of fresh bread. You could use small patty shells if desired.

SALMON OR LOBSTER TULIPS: (24)

¼ cup butter
2 tbsps. cornstarch
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. paprika
2 cups 10 per cent cream
½ cup sherry
2 egg yolks slightly beaten
2 cups drained and boned canned salmon or lobster, or shrimp (or mixture of all three)
One 10-oz. can small peas drained or ¾ cup fresh frozen small peas (Petite pois") cooked 2 min.

Into top of double boiler, measure butter, corn starch, salt and paprika and over boiling water stir to blend. Stir in cream until thick. Gradually stir in sherry. Blend a little of this hot mixture into the yolks then stir this into hot mixture in double boiler. Add salmon or lobster or seafood you select, and peas and heat through gently stirring. Chill at this stage if made in advance and reheat at serving time in double boiler.)

To make Bread Cases cut crusts neatly from 24 slices fresh white bread and butter one side. Press, buttered side down, into 24 standard size muffin cups (2 muffin pans) so that the corners of each slice protrude above edge and look like a tulip. Brush bread points with melted butter. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 10 min. to toast and brown — turning on broil for 3 or 4 min. longer to brown points if necessary.

Transfer hot bread cases to dainty tea plates and fill generously with hot salmon or seafood mixture—if desired, from your chafing dish. Garnish plate with baby gherkins.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

(QUEENSBORO WI)

The annual meeting of the Queensboro Women's Institute was held in the WI Hall with Mrs. Harry Declair, president, in charge.

As this was the annual meeting reports were read from all standing committees. It was decided not to apply for any short course this year.

It was decided to send Mrs. H. Declair, Mrs. C. McMurray and Mrs. William Lynn as delegates to the District Annual in Cooper with Mrs. William Cassidy as alternate.

Mrs. Kenneth Cassidy presented the report of the nominating committee which is as follows: past president, Mrs. Harry Declair; president, Mrs. C. A. McMurray; 1st vice president, Mrs. Roy Rollins; second vice president, Mrs. L. Cassidy; secretary treasurer, Mrs. William Lynn; assistant, Mrs. R. A. Sager.

District director will be Mrs. Harry Declair; branch directors, Mrs. Harold Tokley, Mrs. F. A. Rourke, Miss R. Sager and Mrs. Ed Holmes. Several other committee heads were also named.

Mrs. Warren Hill, district president took charge of the installation of officers. She then gave a short talk on consumer buying and advertising.

Mrs. Harry Declair thanked Mrs. Hill and the meeting was closed. Lunch was served and a social time was spent.

Bolero Cape Back in Style

LONDON (Reuters) — The bolero cape was revived with all the austere elegance of its native Spain at a collection of fall fashions shown recently.

Instead of its former fashion role as merely a handy coverup, the bolero was presented by designer Stephanie Kester as the focal point of dresses, suits and coat suits.

Sometimes a separate garment worn over a polo-necked, long-sleeved top, it was also seen as an inset, stitched into a dress in contrasting color.

Pastels were banished. The colors were the stark black, ochre, cream, red and gold of the bullfight, with an occasional touch of embroidery.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Johnny was so sick that we let him have his own way so he would be quiet and not run a temperature. Now he insists on watching those violent and unsuitable TV shows while he is convalescing. I don't think they're good for him, but I don't know what else to do with him."

You may have to cater to a sick youngster by giving him extra attention while he is deprived of his normal activities. However, illness should not be an excuse for starting habits you find are harmful or unwise.

Mother: "I'll read to you for an hour and then you can finish the story by yourself or watch the movie on TV while I get dinner. Dad will be home early and will be looking forward to a game of chess with you."

Son: "We have a pretty good chess tournament going."

Community-school Program Outlined at Meet

The University Women's Club met Thursday to hear Mrs. J. F. Guthrie speak on the Mott concept of "the Community-school program." Mrs. Guthrie, a representative of the city Recreational and Arena Committee, returned recently from a trip to Flint, Michigan, where the idea was first conceived.

Following a short film on the history and nature of the Mott Program, Mrs. Guthrie outlined its structure, the role of the elementary and secondary schools in its organization, and its educational, social and economic advantages. The keynote is participation and involvement by citizens of all ages.

In Flint, the elementary schools are the centre of community life. As well as having the usual classrooms and gymnasia, they have health clinics, libraries, swimming pools, and other recreational facilities. In each of the elementary schools, a community program director organizes extra-curricular activities for all ages, according to the particular needs of the families served by his school.

The community program director, the school principal, the school nurse, clergymen and businessmen of the area, make up a community council to establish a program of studies and recreational activities, and to study the particular problems of their community.

The recreational facilities make the schools the centre of social activities. The whole family — from the senior citizens to the pre-schooler — can enjoy the educational and recreational facilities because the school is always within walking distance from home.

From an economic point of view, the taxpayers are getting full value for their money, for they are using property and facilities already there. Park sites adjacent to school serve a dual purpose as both playgrounds and parks. The ownership and development of these park sites is shared by the city and the Board of education. Revenue from vending machines is used to build additional recreational facilities.

Mrs. Guthrie said that she, and many others who went to Flint this spring, were optimistic that Belleville could profit by adopting the Mott concept to its particular needs. She reported that steps had already been taken to promote the idea through the Board of Education, the city Parks and Recreation Boards. Linton Read, principal of Moira Secondary, she said, is anticipating the approval of the Board of Education to open the cafeteria and gymnasium of "the" school from Monday to Saturday during the summer holidays.

Mrs. M. Haslett, on behalf of the club, thanked Mrs. Guthrie.

Mrs. H. W. Burns reported on the progress of the Spring Fair to be held May 1, at St. Michael's Auditorium. This year, in addition to an exhibition of paintings by Manley MacDonald, there will be a selection of handicrafts by the Cape Crocker Indians. There will be, of course, the traditional bake sale and tea.

Engagement Notice

Miss Judith A. Gill Mr. Stephen Galpin

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gill, 247 Charles Street, Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Judith Anne, to Mr. Stephen Galpin, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Galpin of Ottawa. Marriage will take place on Saturday, May 17, 1969, at 2 p.m., in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville.

Horticulture Society To Hold Plant Sale

Recently, Mrs. Dennis Armstrong was hostess in her new home for the monthly meeting of the Stirling Horticultural Society. Fifty members and visitors were in attendance.

Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, president, opened the meeting in the usual manner. Mrs. Raymond McConnell gave her report. The correspondence included thank-you notes for the Easter lilies provided in various churches. The trophy for the flower show provided by Eaton's of Canada was displayed.

Mrs. Harry Waite gave an outline of cards sent to the sick and bereaved. A greenhouse tour in May was discussed.

Various readings on floral culture were given by Mrs. Grant Hubble; Mrs. Ed Warren; Mrs. Gordon Asperley; Mrs. R. H. Hoard; Mrs. P. MacMullen; Mrs. Ray Rose; Mrs. M. Ward and Mrs. M. Clancy.

Several gifts of shrubs, seeds and bulbs were given to those interested. A plant sale will be held at a later date. The May meeting will be held one week earlier, on the 12 at the home of Mrs. Milford Weightman at Mount Pleasant.

The committee in charge served refreshments and Mrs. Gordon Asperley voiced appreciative thanks.

Ann Landers

Child Will Eat His Daily Quota

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As a pediatrician I must take issue with your advice to the 11-year-old boy whose mother made him eat for lunch what he refused to eat for breakfast.

You said it was a wonderful idea and you hoped other mothers would do the same.

Obesity is a major health problem today and your suggestion doesn't help any. Eating habits are acquired early and are difficult to change. Unfortunately, too many mothers feel it is a virtue to clean a plate and a sin to leave anything. A great many people are in the habit of eating too much because their mothers made them feel guilty about leaving food.

ANN LANDERS

The wise mother offers her children the right kinds of food and does not make an issue of how much or little he eats. A child will eat as much as he needs. If a youngster repeatedly leaves food, the servings should be reduced.

Your advice is usually excellent, Ann, but you let us down this time. — ANCIORAGE M.D.

DEAR M.D.: You are right. I goofed when I applauded the mother for serving oatmeal for lunch when the kid threw the breakfast oatmeal down the clothes chute. (I didn't think he should get away with it.) Even so, the advice was poor because children shouldn't be made to eat food they dislike particularly as punishment. Shame on me! I'll take ten attacks with Dr. B. Spock's book.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter and her fiance are planning a church wedding in June. The young man is a splendid person. They met together for two and a half years are are very much in love.

Problem: The father of the groom happens to be a clergyman. His son did not follow his faith but joined ours. Now the father refuses to attend the wedding because he believes it would be showing approval of his son's chosen church and he does not wish to do this.

The father has stated that there be no big wedding, that the couple could slip off to another state and be married quietly. The young couple is deeply hurt by his attitude. Please express an opinion. — RSVP NEGATIVE.

DEAR NEG.: The groom's father is out of tune with the times. Where's his ecumenical spirit? . . .

These days when Methodists in Evanston invite their Jewish friends to church for a Passover-Easter supper, and nuns in Grand Rapids chant Hebrew music for a Bar Mitzvah, and the Knights of Columbus and the Masons have a joint meeting in South Bend, the groom's father is clearly out in left field.

Successful Living

Toddler's Exploring Can Lead to Trouble

By DORIS CLARE

As babies become toddlers dangers to life and limb increase. Of course they seem to be looking for trouble — but to learn is to explore! All a mother can do is try to outguess her little explorer, keep small articles out of reach, and never be more than a few yards away from him anyway.

A mother tells me that with all her care she has had hairbreadth escapes from disaster; has caught her youngest by the heels as he toppled out a window; fished marbles out of his throat; rescued him from an electric shock when he pried into a wall plug with a bobby pin.

Baby grows, becomes stronger, more capable — of injuring himself. Pitting her wits against his curiosity is a rugged game for mother, but the reward is a baby's life.

Dear Doris: I wrote to you last year asking how to lose weight. Now I have lost all the weight I want to.

My problem now is this. I stopped eating candy, chips, pop, ice cream and all sweet pastry. All this sacrificing has cleared up my skin almost 100 percent. My face still breaks out at times, but I know this is part of my teen-age stage.

But Doris I am only human and I can't bear to see other kids my age eating sweets any longer. I was wondering if you could tell me of some kind of candy or sweet which would not affect my skin or weight greatly. I would even settle for licorice or peppermints.

Are plain milk chocolate bars as fattening and poor for your skin as they say?

I'm not still trying to lose weight because I have lost almost too much. My mother is forever nagging at me to eat sweets to gain a little weight. Doris, there is a healthy way and a poor way to go about doing this, and hers is not right. I eat eggs, meat, vegetables, and at least one apple a day. I never eat white bread, but whole wheat, and I never eat potatoes. Are these necessary? — Weighty Problems

Dear Not-So-Weighty: I'll give you A for Effort. Now the trick is to put the curves where you want them, and indulge your sweet tooth harmlessly.

Chocolate is a villain, when it comes to complexions, but plain peppermints, in moderation, would be fine. The pastries are offenders; so is pop. So are chips, because of the fat they are cooked in.

The diet you suggest is better than going overboard with sweets. Look along the diet shelves for marmalades and jams made with sugar substitutes, and exercise regularly so that any weight increase lands in the right places. (Want the 15-cent leaflet "Be Figure Perfect", which gives some stretching and bending routines?)

Day Nursery Set Up on Indian Reserve

WALPOLE ISLAND, Ont. (CP) — At first, the plan for a day nursery was not accepted by many of the families living on the Chippewa Indian reserve at Walpole Island in the St. Clair River 40 miles south of Windsor.

Some considered it an infringement on their home life. When the reserve's 12-man council was considering whether to build the nursery they warned they would not enroll their children.

Only 14 of a possible 80 pre-school-age children have been registered at the little school since it opened last November, the first day nursery ever set up on a Canadian Indian reserve.

But Mrs. Harriet Jacobs, the supervisor, is not unduly concerned.

"We feel the nursery will be accepted by all as we prove we can help the children through its program," she says.

"I'm convinced that nurseries of this sort are going to play an important role in the future of our people.

"Here, many of our children who suffer from emotional problems will be given the care they would never receive at home."

Liberal Says Boards Won't Name Indians

TORONTO (CP) Tim Reid, Liberal education critic in Ontario says he plans to raise questions in the legislature today about "discretionary" legislation that he says killed attempts by Indians Tuesday night to get trustees appointed on two school boards.

Mr. Reid said in a telephone interview from Sarnia he will ask for an interpretation of a section of the Schools' Administration Act that allows school boards, at their own discretion, to appoint Indians as trustees with "all the powers and duties" of elected members.

"The Indian in Ontario has been discriminated against so long that there is a back debt to make up," Mr. Reid said after saying he learned at a meeting that school boards in Lambton and Kent counties will not appoint Indian trustees.

Mr. Reid said Indians from the Sarnia and Kettle Point bands considered their request rejected by Lambton board members when they would only go as far as offering Indians representation on a special advisory committee.

Mr. Reid said the Kent County board's absence gave Indians from the Moravianstown and Walpole bands in Kent County all the evidence they needed that a similar request they planned to make had been turned down.

TIBET. — by Thubten Jigme Norbu and Colin M. Turnbull.

This is a narrative in which history, autobiography, poetry and theology are interwoven to illuminate a strange and fascinating people and culture. Thubten Jigme Norbu is the elder brother of the Dalai Lama and together with Colin Turnbull, the anthropologist, has painted a portrait of the religions, customs, and daily life of Tibet.

BATTLE OF THE JAVA SEA. — by David Thomas.

After Pearl Harbor, in the darkest days of the War, the Japanese fleet was steaming through the South Pacific conquering all before it. The Allies — British, Australian, American, and Dutch — assembled an ill-sorted fleet in an attempt to stem the invasion. This story of defeat and confusion has been reconstructed in a vivid hour-by-hour account.

THE BITTER CHOICE. — by Colin and Margaret Legum.

Under the rigid system of apartheid in South Africa, eighty per cent of the population are kept in subjugation by the white minority. The Legums have chosen to tell the stories of eight men who have worked in varied ways for peace and justice and who offer alternatives to apartheid.

UNINVITED VISITORS. — by Ivan T. Sanderson.

This well-known biologist poses a series of questions about the many reported sightings of "flying saucers" and finds the evidence for their existence to be positive.

THE BLACK SCAPEL. — by Geoffrey Parker.

It is the story of a middle aged British surgeon who, by a quirk of circumstance, found himself parachuted into occupied France to work with the Maquis. He fought the Germans and attended the guerilla casualties, often operating at night under very difficult circumstances. For his contribution he was awarded the highest military award including the DSO and Croix de Guerre.

THE WORLD OF THE PRONGHORN. — by Joe Van Wormer.

Another of the excellent "Living World" series of animal studies. The author followed the pronghorn antelope on its daily round through the four seasons and his many photographs complement the text.

THE UNTOLD STORY OF QUMRAN. — by John C. Trever.

Mr. Trever was in Palestine in 1948, a year after the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls and became involved in the study and photographing of the documents. Here, illustrated with the author's photographs, is an absorbing account of the greatest archaeological discovery of recent times.

THE DRUIDS. by Stuart Piggott.

The Druids have been a matter of interest to scholars over the years and many theories and myths surrounding their existence have developed. That they were a priestly class in pre-Roman Gaul and Britain has been confirmed by archaeological evidence and by references of Greek and Roman writers. Professor Piggott ably demonstrates both fact and myth.

Radical Concepts

Too Early to Note Effects of NATO Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — When Prime Minister Trudeau led his Liberal government to a resounding electoral victory last year, he was widely considered to have a popular mandate to challenge old assumptions and chart bold, new courses for Canada.

One field in which he has unquestionably lived up to expectations in challenging the status quo is foreign affairs and defence policy.

It is safe; yet to say for certain whether any really profound physical changes will result from the government's decision, announced by Mr. Trudeau April 3, to keep Canada in NATO but reduce its military commitment in Europe.

Canadian policy has for some time been moving in the direction of a "phased reduction" in the size of forces assigned to NATO. An illustration is the two-squadron cut in the Europe-based air division two years ago. A further 30-per-cent cut in the strength of the air division was deferred following the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia last year.

What seems beyond dispute is that Mr. Trudeau has advanced concepts radical enough to retain the whole structure of conventional wisdom in matters of defence and foreign policy.

Some of these concepts will no doubt come in for close opposition scrutiny in the two-day foreign affairs debate which opens today in the Commons.

In a Calgary speech April 12, the prime minister came out with this thought-provoking statement:

"We're beginning to realize that countries like Japan, like China, like Australia and those on the Pacific Coast of South America . . . are as important partners for Canadians as the nations across the Atlantic."

In recent years it has become fashionable for Canadian leaders to talk about the increasing tempo of his country's relations with nations of the Pacific. It's doubtful, however, whether any has attempted to argue that these relations are equally important as relations with Europe."

By implication, Mr. Trudeau has also challenged the thesis, elaborated by high officials of the external affairs and defence departments, that Europe is the area where the greatest threat to Canada's security lies.

Such a challenge seems implicit in his re-orientation of defence policy, giving North American defence precedence over NATO.

It is arguable that the same re-shuffling of priorities represents at least a tacit rejection of the theory of NATO as a valuable offset to overwhelming U.S. influence in Canada.

The theory was articulated by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in a speech here two months ago:

"For Canada, the opportunities our NATO membership has presented for close consultation with other middle powers have been of particular value in balancing up our rather unequal North American partnership with the U.S."

The prime minister's definitive pronouncements on these controversial and complicated questions have been well calculated to raise eyebrows among officials concerned with the formulation of past policies.

"It is important that the result is that the sixth of our national budget which is spent on defence is cut and concentrated on the military themselves," says Mr. Trudeau.

The question of how large Canada's defence budget should be has been debated inconclusively and at great length. Defence department officials like to point out that in terms of gross national product, Canada has one of the lowest defence budgets in the Western alliance. It has been running at about 2.7 per cent.

The prime minister has raised big questions about the past conduct of Canada's foreign policy by suggesting that it was entirely subordinated to NATO.

In his Calgary speech, he said: NATO had become "practically all of our foreign policy."

"It is a false perspective to have a military alliance determine your foreign policy," Mr. Trudeau declared. "It should be your foreign policy which determines your military policy."

Two days later he told the Commons:

"We feel that in the past several years there has been a tendency for our foreign policy to be swallowed by our defence policy which, in turn, was swallowed by our NATO policy. We are trying to put it" pyramid on its base. . . ."

It can probably be assumed that the words didn't quite sound as sweet music to old hands at the policy-making level of the external affairs departments.

Abortion Test Ahead

Parliament Passes Sex, Gambling Amendments

OTTAWA (CP) — The gross-obscenity and lottery sections of the government's omnibus Criminal Code bill passed their main Commons test Tuesday night but the bill's most-contentious section—on abortion—lies ahead.

The majority Liberal government, with intermittent support from Conservatives and the NDP, easily voted down six amendments on the sex and gambling sections of the bill.

No Liberals or Creditiste MPs broke party lines. The former voted again all amendments, the latter in favor. Some NDP and Conservative members voted with the government.

Three amendments dealt with obscenity sections of the bill, and three with lotteries. The obscenity amendments were defeated on two identical votes of 139 to 48, and one of 138 to 49. The lottery amendments went down 138 to 54; 157 to 18; and 180 to 15.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberals 154; Conservatives 72; NDP/2; Creditiste 9; Independent 1. Two Bernard who won the Comox-Alberni by-election has not yet taken his seat.

Today, by prior agreement, the House begins a two-day debate on a government motion seeking support for its decision to maintain Canadian participation in NATO but to begin a "planned and phased reduction of the size of Canadian forces in Europe."

The Commons is to return to the Criminal Code Friday and to 20 proposed amendments relating to the laws governing therapeutic abortions.

The Commons justice committee held 14 meetings on the proposed Criminal Code changes before sending its report to the House. This report stage—and the opportunity for amendments—precedes third and final passage of a bill.

The changes in the laws governing gross obscenity, including acts of homosexuality and buggery, would remove such acts committed by two consenting adults in private from prosecution under the code.

The proposed lottery changes would permit federal and provincial governments and, under certain conditions, charitable and religious organizations, to conduct lotteries.

The proposed change concerning therapeutic abortions would legalize them, provided a hospital committee certifies that the mother's life or health is endangered.

The Remember Creditiste party has held Commons opposition to the changes already mentioned. Tuesday they directed their fire at the broadening of the lottery law. NDP members objected only to government-run lotteries.

Justice Minister John Turner said earlier the present government has no intention of starting a federal lottery—even though the code change would allow such a move.

The Senate gave second reading to the government's estate tax bill but only after a 36-to-21 vote. The bill eliminates tax on bequests between spouses but raises certain other rates.

Modern Party Must Cut Class Lines

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal party's new director sees the party's future as a "modern, mass party," developing in a climate that permits individuals to be part of the decision-making.

Torrance Wylie, a 30-year-old political science graduate who has held a variety of political jobs, now is charged with translating the Liberal policies of involvement into practice.

When he talks of a modern mass party he goes lightly on ideology and heavy on pragmatism.

"A mass party traditionally has had a class base," he said in an interview. "When you think of class parties you think of the European socialist parties between the two wars."

The modern mass party must cut across class lines, he says.

Involvement, for Mr. Wylie, doesn't mean only having a part in shaping national policies.

"You could visualize an effective participation through a youth exchange between Chicoutimi and Saskatoon."

This sort of idea, together with means of involving voters in decision-making, are among suggestions to be included in a party catalogue for riding associations.

The same sort of enthusiasm shown in last summer's election campaign is still there, available for anyone who can tap it, Mr. Wylie says.

High priority also will be given to the party's campaign to broaden its financial support.

Welfare Called Curse of Country by New Brunswick Senator

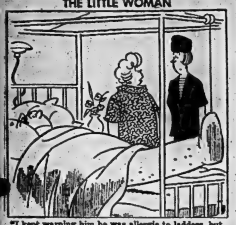
OTTAWA (CP) Welfare has become "the curse of the country," Senator Edgar Fournier (PC—New Brunswick) told the Senate's special committee on poverty Tuesday.

In questioning Economic Council of Canada representatives who had just presented the new committee with its first brief, Senator Fournier said he does not agree with the council's claim that there are millions of poor people in Canada.

"No one had been able to define exactly what the poverty line was.

"I believe possibly that, our cost of living has contributed to the increase of a large number of poor families," he said. But easy access to social assistance had increased the number of "so-called poor" in Canada by thousands.

The real poor were careful with their dollars and money given to them would be well spent. "But there is a class of people across Canada now making abuses of all these things."



He said many trained people by staying home draw perhaps $60 a week whereas at their jobs they could only make $75.

D. L. McQueen, the economic director, said social workers—especially in Toronto and Ottawa—had told him that people tend to work, even for less money than they might get from social assistance.

Canadians, he said, were not "as indolent and as lacking in pride" as some persons think.

In reply to Senator Cheshy Carter (L—Newfoundland), Mr. McQueen said it is possible to have automation and also jobs. He did not agree with predictions that there would be mass unemployment by the year 2000. There was "enormous growth" of employment in service industries and new jobs would be created in new areas—"areas by the machines we speak of here."

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I kept warning him he was allergic to ladders, but he wouldn't listen to me."

NDPer Makes Charge

Ontario Welfare Below Subsistence

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario pays its average family of four on welfare about $1,200 less than the $4,200 a year quoted by the Economic Council of Canada as necessary to maintain the family at a basic subsistence level, Stephen Lewis told the Legislature Tuesday night.

"The government knows it is not paying a viable social allowance but very little is done to correct it," Mr. Lewis said during debate on the estimates of the department of social and family services.

He said that, in Ontario, a family of four living on welfare got $1,404 a year for food, clothing and household needs, plus allowances for heat and housing, to bring the total received to $2,634.

During a six-hour attack on John Yaremko's estimated budget for welfare assistance, NDP members hammered the social and welfare minister for failing to insist that his department's programs should not be cut as part of the government's austerity program for 1969-70.

"It's pretty sad if you cannot get more than $136,000,000 for welfare out of a total provincial budget of $2,986,518,000," James Renwick NDP deputy leader.

There are 108,000 welfare recipients in Ontario, including blind and disabled persons, who are budgeted to receive a total $136,325,000 in allowances and benefits during the coming fiscal year.

Treasurer Charles MacNaughton refused to give the opposition breakdown of the $400,000,000 he said had been trimmed from government department spending estimates when he drafted the province's 1969 budget.

Many Business Training Courses Said Swindle

TORONTO (CP) — Business training courses in Canada have become a big swindle, Toronto business educationist Donald Young charged Monday.

Mr. Young, Sterling Institute Canada Ltd. president, told the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto that about 300,000 Canadians spend millions of dollars a year on business training courses, many of them useless.

Mr. Young estimated that $100,000,000 is spent each year in time, travel, accommodation and fees for business training.

"Training today is a big fat fraud," Mr. Young said. "We, as managers, not only don't understand it, but we don't really believe it is an important part of developing ourselves, our people or our organizations."

Children's Aid Week Plans

Ron Conlon, home finder in the Family and Children's Service of Hastings County, and Dudley Dohoo, supervisor of child care, plan some of the extra work involved during Children's Aid Week this week.

County Family Counselling Program Provides Vital Community Service

By BARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Youngsters! Who needs them?

The children without the security of their own families, that is.

It's a core question, not often aired. Human nature being what it is, personal issues take precedence over involvement with other people's problems.

But there's one organization vitally interested in finding the answers.

This is Children's Aid Week in Ontario and the event gives Quinte residents an opportunity to discover a crucial community service.

To this end, the offices of one of the district's most vital agencies will be open to the public tonight and Thursday night.

In the district, Children's Aid work is carried out by the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County at its Front Street offices.

It is one of the few of its kind in the province. Since new legislation was introduced in 1965 stressing prevention in children's aid work, the local agency was able to extend itself beyond its traditional role. It incorporated a family-counselling unit.

Shortage of professionally-qualified staffers prevented a similar move in most areas.

Hopefully, for the agency, the public visits this week may not only acquaint the community with this wider scope of program, it may also impart an appreciation of problems, says counselling officials.

And among the greatest needs now are foster parents.

"The contribution they make to the community is incalculable," says case worker Ron Conlon.

This, despite the fact that motives of foster parents is often downgraded, he adds.

Foster parents take pride in the fact they have helped a child "hurt by life," to take his place in the community.

Such a parent can exercise patience and judgment in helping the child. Then, though regretting the loss, "cheerfully" relinquishes the child back to his own parents or into adoption.

Yet, some foster parents complain that neighbors can demolish their efforts "with one or two comments."

Neighbors may ponder how a foster parent can relinquish a child — and also wonder how much agency money is involved.

Yet foster parents are "very unusual and special people," says Mr. Conlon.

"Even if the modest rates (for care) were greatly raised, we'd still be in their debt," he adds.

But times — and social attitudes — change, and this also involves the foster parent.

"If we're to exploit this change, we must change and find new ways to strengthen and support the children and family as a unit," says the case-worker.

"Foster children need parents geared to our fast-moving age, who are thinking, concerned people. They should be people who can search with children to find their own way, and not be upset when their ideas, opinions or beliefs are challenged."

"Foster parents today are almost a profession — and the foster mother is an extension of the agency staff," he says.

So much so, the parents in some Ontario centres are forming associations to carry the problem more specifically into the community.

Locally, while no organization exists, since January of this year, foster parents have been meeting weekly with agency staff to discuss problems.

The problem of child care also can be solved by adding group homes to the agency complex.

Many Ontario agencies have rented or purchased homes, paying a salary to a skilled couple who care for a small group of children living in the home.

"Group homes are especially liked by older children since the group is more permanent for the child," says a counselor.

"As our community grows more complex and fewer homes are available for children needing parents, new ways must be found to create substitute families," he explains.

But again, there are problems.

"One of the obstacles to group homes is community resistance to the idea of having unrelated children living in such a home on a street," says the official.

"This attitude must be overcome. If we're to provide these children with the security and love they so desperately need."

Boat Builder Cramped After Two Weeks Work

In operation only since the beginning of March, Belleville Precision Mouldings, a new city fibre glass boat building operation, already has developed expansion pains.

To solve the problem the only thing to do was to move into larger quarters.

This is exactly what the new company has done. Over the weekend it moved from 291 Coleman Street to a new location at Westgate Plaza just outside the city's western limits.

The new location has approximately 5,000 square feet — plus a now-vacant store which will be used for display purposes.

Company President Peter T. Wilby says he will divide the warehouse area to separate the firm's various operations. The store area will be used to display up to 10 watercraft.

The firm is still working on its initial order of 500 fibreglass dinghies and will shortly commence building 22-foot pleasure craft — either open-style or cabin-fitted.

Hull moulds for the 22-foot craft are expected to arrive from Buffalo this week.

Oil Drum, Car Parts Are Part of Rubbish

Garbage in Downtown Area Of Concern to Businessmen

Garbage on the main streets of Belleville as well as behind Front Street stores was a topic discussed at length at yesterday's downtown businessmen's association meeting.

Ben Corke, president of the group, stated that something "has to be done" and inquired of Alderman Robin Jeffrey what action could be taken by the city.

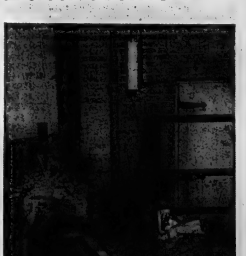
Mr. Corke mentioned ramshackle additions to the backs of stores, garbage and even a wrecked truck that are not only eye sores but in some cases fire hazards.

According to Alderman Jeffrey the only action the city can take is through the department of health or the fire department unless a new by-law is passed.

Mr. Corke stated he felt some of the buildings should be condemned and torn down.

"It's a disgraceful area," said Mr. Corke.

Alderman Jeffrey, who has been working on an anti-litter bylaw, promised the group that "there will be something coming," especially to do with the street litter conditions, another point brought up at the meeting.



Sending a letter to the fire chief asking him to look into the garbage conditions behind stores was suggested as well as approaching those responsible.

How to keep Front St. clean over the weekend was also a problem put before the businessmen.

The merchants agreed that on a Sunday morning the street "looks terrible." One claimed the littered bottles and papers do not leave a very good impression of Belleville with visitors.

One suggestion was that the public works department have a sweeper go through the downtown area early Sunday morning so it would at least be clean for the day.

"That's when most people are out for a drive (on Sunday) and many visitors come and drive through the city," one merchant said.

Orders Keep Lund Pedersons Busy

Family Hobby Becomes Business

TRENTON — A family new to the Quinte area has learned a hobby can become a worthwhile source of income since moving here in November.

The main ingredients prescribed by the resourceful Lund Pedersons of R.R. 2 Brighton is imagination and enterprise combined with a liberal amount of hard work.

Back at Sunderland, near Lindsay, Mr. Karl Lund-Pedersen made a variety of ornaments from cement for the lawns about his home. One particular piece — the figure of a woman holding a jar with water cascading from it continuously — attracted a great deal of attention. It also confirmed he might do well to develop his artistic flair.

Since setting out a display of lawn ornaments by the side of Highway 2 between Trenton and Brighton the family has been called upon to provide items for a growing number of customers.

Brundage Wants Nancy to Hand Over Olympic Ski Medals

MONTREAL (CP) — The suggestion that Canada's Nancy Greene should return the gold medal she won at the Winter Olympics last year was termed an "exercise in absurdity" Tuesday by Ben Fuller, president of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association.

Fuller, a Montrealer, was commenting on reports that Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, has asked for the return of the Olympic medals won by Miss Greene, now Mrs. Al Raine, and France's Jean-Claude Killy.

"The whole thing's a lot of nonsense," said Fuller. "The medals were competed for in good faith. You don't ask for them back. If there was any question about them they shouldn't have been awarded. It's a lot of stupidity."

"It's all news to me," said Keith Nesbitt, manager of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association. "But if he (Brundage) really wants the medals back on a point of eligibility then he ought to get them back from a number of other sports too, including the Summer Olympics."

Rae Grinnell, Canada's representative on the Federation Internationale du Ski, recently returned from an FIS meeting in Germany which received by letter Brundages' demand for the return of the medals.

Brundage claimed in his letter that both skiers failed to abide by Olympic regulations in the 1968 Games at Grenoble, France.

Grinnell, in Ottawa, said the FIS referred the IOC president back to national Olympic bodies.

"I haven't heard anything about it at all," said Howard Radford, president of the Canadian Olympic Association. "And, frankly, I think it improbable that we would be contacted. It seems more a case of deteriorating relations between the IOC and the FIS.

"Certainly I have no knowledge of our competitor involved not abiding by the rules. If we were approached, it would have to be discussed by the executive committee but I'd be surprised if I heard any more."

Miss Greene currently is on her honeymoon in British Columbia with her husband, Raine, coach of Canada's national ski team. They were married April 5.

Last year at Grenoble, she bathed at signing the Olympic oath. However, the Canadian Olympic Committee persuaded her to sign, saying it vouched for her amateur status.

She retired from World Cup competition, as did Killy, after last year's Olympics. Both have since turned professional.

Shell-Shocked Vachon Holds Hab Fort

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

Somewhere in Boston this morning, there may be a computer operating at full steam trying to find the logic behind last night's 4-2 Bruin loss in Montreal.

The hypothetical electronic brain would have to reconcile the Canadiens' win with data like this:

- Boston pumped 26 shots on goalie Rogatien Vachon in the second period, one more than the Habs managed on Gerry Cheevers all night!
- Phil Esposito, man of 57 regular and post-season goals this year, couldn't put the puck in the Montreal net with a scoop shovel last night, including seven unsuccessful shots on goal in the frantic second period.
- Bruin goalie Gerry Cheevers, who had allowed but nine pucks to elude him in seven playoff tests before last night, looked nothing short of sieve as J. C. Tremblay's eventual game-winner in the second period.
- Robert Orr, who can count his hockey mistakes on the fingers of one hockey glove, wound up as last night's goat by providing a perfect ricochet for Claude Provost's third-period clincher.

For Bruin boosters, the key to last night's setback may partially lie in the Case of the Missing Sanderson. Although the dogged Boston penalty-killing machine gave up only one power play score in five Hab chances, Sanderson's fiery presence was sorely missed.

As for scoring opportunities, Boston had enough last night for a full seven-game series. Watching Esposito miss a yawning cut was enough to send coach Harry Sinden into the Forum rafters.

To the Canadiens' supporters, there can only be one suitable explanation for the Habs' 3-2 lead on a berth in the Cup final against St. Louis. His name is Rogatien Vachon.

The 23-year-old that ice-cool Jean Beliveau lunch once sniffed at as a "junior B" goalie, was the man in the middle of the 26-shot shooting gallery staged by the Bruins in the second period.

In particular, Vachon had to keep his cool in the last 10 minutes of that session, when the fans unleashed what many have been the single most devastating power play in hockey history, and continued to play ring-around-the-goal with the Montreal defence after the Habs returned to full strength.

It was quite a switch from the period's first half, when the Bruins were caught reading their press clippings.

If anyone deserved a pair of Montreal goals, it was Claude Provost. The Shadow, who may not survive the NHL draft after 14 years' stamp for the Canadiens, leaked two gift horses in the month Sunday which could have spelled the difference in that 3-2 Hab loss.

A seven-game series still looks like a safe wager, most members of both camps eager to see more of what will surely be regarded as an all-time classic among Stanley Cup encounters.

For those of us in the cheap seats, last night's game had one of the most remarkable collection of extra added attractions ever seen on a Hockey Night in Canada.

We had an announcer in the Canadiens' employ calling Provost's clinching goal an outright fluke; then there was Red Wing-turned-commentator Bob Goldham saying that Bobby Orr "is not as good in his own end as the other three Boston defence regulars"; not to mention a 97-year-old granny with a awful crush on muscle John Ferguson; topped off by a delinquent Forum clock that didn't want the game to end.

MONTREAL (CP) — "These rookie coaches, it takes them a while."

The remark was made with a wry smile, as Harry Sinden, Boston Bruins s e c o n d - y e a r coach, assessed none rather uncomplimentary phrases uttered about him in Montreal Canadiens dressing room.

Sinden's smile had to be wry, because he had just watched his Bruins drop a 4-2 decision in the hustling Montrealers—a decision that sends the Canadiens back to Boston for the pivotal game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final with a 3-2 lead.

Sinden's remark came after Claude Ruel, Montreal's first-year coach, replied to a questioner asking him to make a prediction on the final outcome of the series.

Ruel said that he does not make predictions, but sticks to winning hockey games.

When questioned further about Boston's tough brand of hockey, Ruel became indignant.

He had just finished watching his club get a first-period goal by defenceman Jacques Laperriere, second-period goals by J. C. Tremblay and Claude Provost, while the Bruins outshot Canadiens 26-10 and another by Provost in the third period to wrap it up.

In a hectic second period, Ken Hodge, the Boston right winger, had scored twice on a harassed Rogatien Vachon in the Montreal goal. Gerry Cheevers was in goal for the Bruins.

Provost's second goal was an unassisted effort. It came after his pass caromed off Boston's Bobby Orr and behind a startled Cheevers.

"Listen, I leave those predictions to the other guys," Ruel told his questioner. "These other guys are always going to beat us in six or we're not going to win another game this year.

"I don't pay any attention to them. Anybody can shoot that baloney. But I don't do it."

Before Montreal eliminated New York in four straight games in the East Division semi-final, R a n g e r s general manager Emile Francis said his club would knock Canadiens off in six games.

"So what happens, we beat them in four and after the fourth game he wasn't around to make any more predictions. This guy's the same, we'll see."

Sinden had needled Ruel last week by saying Montreal had won its last game of the year. About the Bruins "tough" brand of hockey:

"They're just hockey players like my team," Ruel said. "I'm tired of hearing of all this muscle."

The Bruins didn't outmuscle Ruel's club in Tuesday's game, as both teams stuck close to hockey.

Vachon stopped 24 of 26 shots fired at him in the second period alone and Ruel praised the young netminder's performance.

Vachon said he didn't realize he had such a hectic second period. He said he was surprised that high-scoring Boston centre Phil Esposito hadn't scored at least one goal.

Esposito, who set a regular-season record with 126 on 49 goals and 77 assists, had seven shots during the second period without success. However, he got two assists on Hodge's goals.

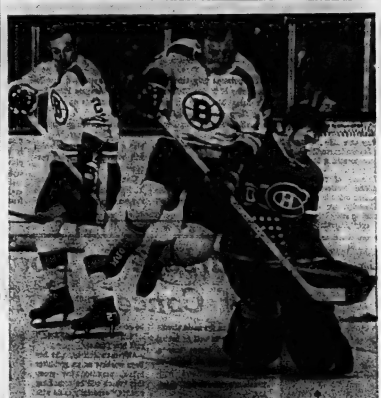
ROGATIEN VACHON

The Canadiens started fast, but it was not until the final minute in the first period that Laperriere beat Cheevers with a hard shot from the left point. Boston's Glen Sather was serving a penalty for interference at the time.

The second period was barely under way when Provost and J. C. Tremblay scored in rapid succession at 1:08 and 2:01 respectively.

Provost had combined with Ralph Backstrom on a two-on-one attack with defenceman Don Awrey aiding helpfully along the ice at r a last desperate lunge to stop Provost's shot.



Cheevers, who faced only 25 shots all night, looked bad on J. C. Tremblay's long shot. Just inside the Boston blue line. However, Tremblay said afterwards that the goaltender had been screened by one of his own teaming hockey pros.

Hodge put the Bruins back in the game with his first goal at 12:13. His second came with Montreal's Serve Savard having nine seconds let to serve on a holding penalty assessed at 11:30.

Provost wound it up at 7:06 of the third with his shot off Orr's leg.

The game was thrown into consternation with 3:53 showing as the time left to play on the Forum clock. However, when it came time for it to move into the four-minute descent the digit indicating minutes didn't move. Then this fact was finally brought to the attention of officials. It was found that only 3:53 remained in the game.

Tough to Beat

Boston left winger Glen Sather bells over Montreal Canadien goalie Rogatien Vachon in attempt to score during first period NHL eastern division playoff action in Montreal Tuesday night. Blackboard in St. Louis $pells Out Cup $ignificance

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A large blackboard dominates the locker room of the St. Louis Blues' hockey team. Written across it in foot-high numerals is $9,750.

That's what the Blues would gain—above and beyond their regular salaries—if they win the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup.

"Through bonus clauses in our contract, most of us will make more than that," said defenceman Barclay Plager. "But that's a nice sum to start with."

The Blues, champions of the NHL's West Division, will meet the survivors of the East Division finals between the Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins with Montreal leading the best-of-seven series 3-2.

St. Louis romped through the West playoffs by dispatching Philadelphia and Los Angeles in eight games, matching the playoff record first set by Montreal in 1944.

"I must admit that winning eight straight was a big surprise to us," said Scotty Bowman, the 35-year-old general manager and coach of the Blues. "But it shouldn't have been. I know the capabilities of this club when everyone is working together."

"Boston and Montreal both have good clubs. They'll be tough enough as it is. I don't want to give them any later ammunition by picking one over the other."

The Blues never have beaten Montreal in their two seasons, including last year's Stanley Cup finals, which the Canadiens swept in four games. They had an 8-3-1 record against Montreal this year ago and they were 5-5-1 this season.

St. Louis was 2-3-3 against Boston this year and 1-3-1 last season.

Can't Buy Goal, Espo Still Climbs

Phil Esposito picked up two assists Tuesday to maintain his lead in Stanley Cup scoring, but the Boston Bruin centre will probably have nightmares about the points he didn't get.

Esposito, who led the National Hockey League in scoring with 126 points in regular-season play, now has 17 points in nine games on eight goals and nine assists.

Esposito's eight winger Ken Hodge also advanced to scoring, firing Boston's two goals, both in the second period. He now has five goals and seven assists for 12 points.

Hawk Finally Roosts

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Harrelson will be in a Cleveland uniform tonight when the Indians play New York Yankees, Gabe Paul, president and general manager of the Indians, said Tuesday.

A four-hour session in the office of commissioner Bowie Kuhn settled the six-player trade between the Indians and Boston Red Sox which was thrown into confusion Sunday when Harrelson, a slugging outfielder-first baseman, said he would retire from baseball rather than report to Cleveland and lose an estimated $753,000 in business opportunities in Boston.

KEN HARRELSON

Harrelson and pitchers Dick Ellsworth and Juan Pizarro were sent to Cleveland for pitchers Sonny Siebert and Vicente Romo and catcher Joe Azcue. The other players had been ordered withheld from action until the deal was irved out and Boston manager Dick Williams immediately named Siebert as today's starter against Washington.

"I'm glad we've settled this thing," said Harrelson.

"I feel great. I'm a ballplayer. I want to get back and do my thing."

The agreement reunites Harrelson, 27, with Cleveland skipper Alvin Dark, who was manager of the former Kansas City Athletics when Harrelson played for them in 1967.

Harrelson helped the Red Sox win the pennant in 1967 and batted in 109 runs last year, tops in the American League.

Saskatoon Bid Accepted For Snow Games

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatoon's offer to build a mountain for ski events was a big factor and the Prairie city is getting the 1971 Canadian Winter Games, Health Minister John Munro told a Progress conference Tuesday night.

Because of the mountain, to be built at a cost exceeding $500,000, "many western young skiers are going to start skiing who might not have," the minister said.

Mr. Munro also said that the booming success of the 1967 Winter Games in Quebec and the promotion involved in the 1969 Summer Games in Halifax-Dartmouth could lead to the games being held on an annual basis rather than every two years.

He said they not only help Canadian athletes step up badly-needed facilities for sports, they also encourage more Canadians to do better in athletic events, he said.

Mr. Munro said the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation had a tough time selecting Saskatoon over the other 10 cities seeking the 1971 games.

A joint bid from Kelowna-Penticton B.C., and others from Regina and Calgary were in contention to the last moment, he said.

Other bids were from Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto, Peterborough, Sudbury and Ottawa.

Compulsory sports for the 1971 games will be basketball, fencing, figure skating, gymnastics, hockey, skiing, speed skating, synchronized swimming, table tennis, volleyball, weightlifting and wrestling.

Saskatoon will choose four optional events.

Costs of the games are shared by three governments. Ottawa contributes one-third of the cost of building facilities and picks up the full tab for operating costs.

Mr. Munro estimated the federal contribution to the 1971 games at $1,200,000.

Saskatoon mayor Sid Ruck-wold said the man-made mountain will rise to the level of a 25-storey building and will have ski-jumping facilities as well as "some exciting runs."

Tuesday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching—Bill Stoneman, Expos, followed up his no-hitter with a second straight shutout, pitching a six-hitter for Montreal's 2-0 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

Batting—Tony Perez cracked four hits including a two-run homer leading Cincinnati Reds to a 14-0 romp over Houston Astros.

Retirement For Drysdale?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers may have lost more than a baseball game to San Francisco.

Don Drysdale, who bobbi a fistful of pitching records and 205 lifetime victories — the most by any Dodger in history — intimated after Tuesday's 3-0 loss to the Giants that he may be on the verge of retirement.

"I'm going to have to do some serious soul-searching in the next few days," he remarked softly after being chased from the mound during a three-run Giant uprising in the fifth inning.

Drysdale's ineffectiveness stems from a shoulder injury dating back to last year when he was forced to miss the last six weeks of the season. The injury came after he had established a major league record of 58 3-3 consecutive scoreless innings.

The right-hander said he planned to talk to club owner Walter O'Malley and vice-president Al Campanis "within the next couple of days — to discuss his future.

Manager Walt Alston said he felt Drysdale had "better stuff than the last two times he's pitched ." He didn't seem overly concerned by Drysdale's poor showing.

Second Stoneman Zero Slaps Down Cardinals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

All good things must come to an end—Los Angeles can testify to that. But do all bad things come to an end? That's what Houston Astros would like to know.

The Dodgers' good thing ended at six straight victories Tuesday night when they absorbed a 6-0 defeat from San Francisco Giants, Houston's bad thing kept right on going as the Astros took a 14-0 thumping from Cincinnati Reds for their seventh consecutive loss.

In other National League action Tuesday, Montreal Expos shut out St. Louis Cardinals 2-0, Pittsburgh Pirates swept a doubleheader from Chicago Cubs 7-5 and 6-5 and San Diego Padres socked Atlanta Braves 6-4. Philadelphia's game at New York was postponed by rain.

Ray Sadecki put an end to the Dodgers' string of victories, limiting Los Angeles to six hits only two after the second inning.

Bobby Bonds socked his second home run of the season for the Giants, who shelled Don Drysdale and lagged the Dodgers ace with his second loss in three decisions.

An error by Ted Sizemore led to a pair of unearned runs for the Giants in the fourth and Ken Francisco knocked out Drysdale with three more in the next inning.

Tony Perez clubbed four hits, including a two-run homer, and Johnny Bench drove in five runs as Cincinnati's drubbing of Houston. The Astros managed just three hits against Mel Queen and Clay Carroll.

Queen, attempting a comeback from arm trouble, worked six innings before his arm acted up and Carroll took over. The Reds reaped 16 hits to raise their two-game totals to 25 runs against the Astros.

Bill Stoneman, who hurled a no-hitter in his last start, came back with a second straight shutout as Montreal blanked St. Louis. Stoneman allowed six hits and got the only run he needed when Rusty Staub singled home an unearned run in the first inning.

Mack Jones' third homer gave Stoneman a cushion run in the ninth.

Pittsburgh swept two games from the Cubs with rookie Bob Robertson playing a key role.

Robertson doubled home a pair of runs in the fourth inning of the opener and then delivered the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning. Robertson had tripled and scored earlier and Willie Stargell had whacked a grand-slam home run.

Ollie Brown walloped a three-run homer, highlighting a six-run San Diego explosion in the sixth inning that carried the Padres past Atlanta. Brown also had a single and a double and drove in four runs.

Indians Need Help; Lose Seventh Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Do Cleveland Indians need Ken Harrelson's powerful bat? You bet?

After Harrelson decided to forego retirement Tuesday and report to Cleveland, the Indians went out and celebrated in what has become their accustomed way—by losing. However, Harrelson wasn't in the lineup.

The Indians were grounded by Baltimore Orioles 3-2 Tuesday for their seventh consecutive defeat and 11th in 12 games this season.

Meanwhile, Boston Red Sox showed again they can win without Harrelson, unloading four home runs to beat New York Yankees 8-3 for their second victory in three starts since trading Harrelson last Saturday.

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers rallied for a 4-2 decision over Washington Senators, Kansas City Royals fought for a 2-1 victory over Seattle Pilots, Oakland Athletics trounced Minnesota Twins 7-0 and California Angels mauled Chicago White Sox 8-0.

The Indians, desperately needing fire power after scoring only 34 runs in 12 games, this time rolled over and died for Tom Phoebus and Pete Richert.

Phoebus, raising his record to 2-0, yielded only three hits before walking the bases full with two out in the eighth inning, but Richert came on to retire Max Alvis on one pitch and shackle the Indians in the ninth.

Cleveland needed a walk, stolen base, passed ball and an error to get one run and Larry Brown homered for the other.

The Orioles won on Boog Powell's first homer that broke a 2-2 deadlock in the fifth inning.

Boston showed little effect from losing Harrelson, the American League's runs-batted-in champion of 1968, as Mike Andrews, Rico Petrocelli and Carl Yastrzemski slammed solo homers and Tony Conigliaro belted a three-run shot in the fourth, breaking a 2-2 tie.

The attack against Stan Bahnsen, 0-4, made it easy for unbeaten Ray Culp, who went his third in a row with a four-hitter. Only Jod Pepitone's two-run homer troubled him.

Winter Olympics Not Wanted

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian ski official said Tuesday there is no doubt that president Avery Brundage of the International Olympic Committee wants to junk the Winter Olympics.

"Mr. Brundage would prefer to have the Winter Games cancelled," Rae Grinnell said, "there is no doubt of that."

Grinnell, Canada's representative on the Federation International ski Ski, has just returned from an FIS meeting in Germany which resulted by bitter Brundage's demand that Olympic ski medals won by Canada's Nancy Greene and France's Jean-Claude Killy be returned.

Brundage claimed in his letter that both skiers failed to abide by Olympic regulations in the 1968 games at Grenoble, France.

Grinnell said the FIS referred the IOC head back to national Olympic bodies.

Grinnell also said that if the IOC decides to discontinue the winter games; then the various national bodies may run their own competitions.

"There is no incorporation, or patent, on Olympics," Grinnell said.

"They (the IOC) are a group of men who got together and decided to put on the games. If they discontinue them, the various international bodies can organize and run the games anyway on their own terms."

Grinnell also reported that the FIS rejected speed-ski races suggested by the United States and Canada.

Takes Two Swings

Frazier Batters Bricklayer

HOUSTON (AP) — Now that he has disposed of a bricklayer with two vicious swings of his wicked left hook, the question before boxing circles today was whether Joe Frazier is ready to risk his square in the world heavyweight title against rugged Jerry Quarry.

It took the New Jersey-listed Frazier only 96 seconds to destroy Unbeliever and unranked Dave Zyglewicz Tuesday night in the Philadelphian's third title defence.

A news conference was called for noon, EST, today by the Madison Square Garden Boxing, Inc. for "an important announcement concerning a major title."

Speculation was that Frazier had been offered $250,000 to meet Quarry, the No. 2 World Boxing Association heavyweight, June 23 in the Garden.

Quarry, who posted an impressive 12th-round knockout over Buster Mathis March 24 in the Garden, is 31-3-4 with 18 knockouts.

Frazier, now unbeaten in 23 bouts with 20 knockouts, quickly sended Zyglewicz record of never having been knocked down.

The champion caught the former Navy Atlantic Fleet champion with a blistering left hook and down he went.

At a mandatory eight count, Zyglewicz was doubled over with a right and then lashed with another left hook and it was all over.

"I never felt nobody hit as hard," said Zyglewicz. "He's real fast."

Frazier said: "There's nobody I can't beat. He (Zyglewicz) has a lot of heart. I think he was a good fighter to get up."

Eaton's Heir One of Favorites for Mosport Challenge

TORONTO (CP) — George Eaton, 23, may not be in a class with such legendary racing car drivers as Fangio or Stirling Moss or Graham Hill, but he is well on his way.

"George has great skill," said John Osborn, of Toronto, one of the top United States drivers. "Last year he discovered he was capable of going very quickly in a race car.

"That gave him the confidence he needed; all he requires now is experience."

Eaton, voted Driver of the Year by the Canadian Racing Drivers Association, began racing in 1966 with a 1,000 c.c. Austin Sprite, and progressed to the Chevrolet-powered, 3,-000 c.c. McLaren Formula A.

He plans to drive a 7,000 c.c. McLaren Mark 12 Group 7 car in the 11-race Canadian-American Challenge Cup series, which opens at Mosport track near Toronto June 1.

The three-event Canadian championship completes his 25-race card, his busiest yet.

"A busy schedule? Maybe," one of the heirs to the Eaton's department store chain said in an interview. "I'd like to race about 40 times a year in all types of cars."

Eaton said he was "happy" with his progress last year driving an under-powered McLaren Mark 3.

"I did much better than I expected. I got that third at Laguna Seca, Calif., and ran in the top four at Elkhart Lake for most of the race.

"I gained a great deal of experience and most important, car sense.

"For instance, I learned to go deeper into the corners before braking and to get on it quicker. Passing is another thing.

"Suppose I'm running behind a car that's a second per lap slower than I am and there are 10 corners on the track.

"That means a tenth of a second for me on each turn. I had to learn to pick my spots to pass, to take advantage of every little edge."

One of the "edges" he has is the money to buy Chevrolet engines modified by Canadian Racing Motors, a firm founded by Higgs Murphy and Good Chance, two transplanted Californians.

"We'll have four engines for each car," said team manager Paul Cook, one of Canada's best. "We'll do two races with each engine, then rebuild them.

"It's costly, but we're making a total effort in racing this year and can't leave anything to chance."

Ontario Trout Anglers Oiling Reels for Saturday

TORONTO (CP) — The fishing season for trout swings into full action in Ontario Saturday but they'll still have to drill holes through the ice in the north.

A Canadian Press survey shows that while most rivers and lakes are open in southern Ontario, there is still as much as 14 inches of ice on lakes in the north.

In fact, the Cochrane district of the department of lands and forests reports snow depth at 37 inches and predicts that breakup will not come until mid-May.

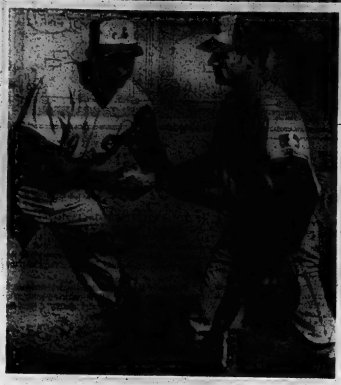
River and creeks in southern Ontario are generally high with plenty of feed for trout. Anglers are advised to try a variety of lures, starting with worms, and fishing all areas as trout of all species move over a wide area in cold water.

Trout, especially the speckled variety, are a wary fish, and when fishing stream banks fishermen must be light-footed or fish will be spooked.

Large rainbow trout have started to move into creeks and rivers. Best bait here is usually a pouch of salmon eggs or spinner, both bounced along the bottom.

While most anglers will concentrate on trout, Lake Huron is producing a fish new to provincial waters. Coho salmon, planted in the U.S. have moved into Canadian waters and the department reports that during April 12 and 13, 50 anglers caught 20 coho, the largest weighing three pounds, 11 ounces.

Anglers trolled at depths of about 20 feet between Grand Bend and Goderich and also had success casting for coho on the Bayfield River.



The season for most species of trout opened Jan. 1 in Northern Ontario.

The speckled trout limit is generally 10 pounds plus one, or 15 fish—whichever is less, and rainbow and brown, five a day.

Anglers are asked to contact local department of lands and forests offices for limits and openings in specific areas. Another reminder is that all male anglers over 18 must have a licence this year.

The pickerel season is closed in most areas of southern Ontario until either the first or second week in May, allowing the fish to spawn.

Smelt fishing has reached a peak in some southern Ontario waters, especially Turkey Point, Rondeau, Port Burwell and Normandale areas, all on Lake Erie.

Is This Hap-py Day?

OTTAWA (CP) — Hap Emms, owner and general manager of Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, will announce today whether he will accept the position of general manager of Canada's national hockey team.

The 56-year-old Emms met Tuesday with Health Minister John Munro and three executive-board members of Hockey Canada Corp. in preparation for a major corporation meeting in Toronto today.

Emms said after the meeting he had not decided whether to take on the task of reshaping the team with the aim of regaining Canada's international hockey prestige of a decade ago.

He said he would definitely make the announcement today.

Canada, without a world hockey championship for eight years, finished fourth at the 1969 tournament in Stockholm last month.

Hawks Packed House

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Figure released Tuesday showed St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association drew an all-time record attendance for home games last season.

Black Hawks, who finished second in the regular OHA Junior A schedule, attracted 122,008 fans to Garden City Arena in 36 games.

The previous record stood at 105,261, set in 1953-54 when the St. Catharines Tee-Pees won the Memorial Cup.

Attendance for each game averaged 3,388 in the 3,000-seat building.

Argo Back on Dodge

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted Dickie Moore, former little all-America football fullback who has signed to play for Toronto Argonauts, for alleged failure to report for induction into the United States armed forces.

The grand jury returned the indictment Monday and U.S. District Judge Henry L. Brooks signed a warrant for Moore's arrest.

Moore, 32, is in Canada where he has signed to play for the Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Departmental Loop Seeking 8th Entry

STAFF — The magic number is now eight for the city's Departmental Softball League.

With seven entries definite for the 1969 season, the league is hoping for another in order that two divisions can be formed and a schedule drawn. The new set-up is intended to keep the teams balanced, and to lessen the chance of lop-sided contests between established entries and new arrivals.

Last night's league meeting at the Recreation Centre was attended by representatives from the CN Turbos and Combines, Post Office, Union Carbide, Belleville Teachers, Allied Chemicals, and the Intelligencer.

There was no representation from the prospective eighth entry, Corbin Lock.

The league executive decided that this year all protests must be submitted in writing to president Austin Watkin, to be forwarded to a committee composed of OASA secretary Cliff Belch, OASA executive Jim Tetworth, and George Rutledge.

It was also agreed that ground rules will be decided in advance of the season for the various playing fields used by the league by a special committee.

The Belleville and District Umpires' Association will once again handle Departmental League games.

Tentative plans call for the season to open around the May 24 weekend.

Ship Repair Firm Defended in Costs to Refit Bonaventure

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington South) said Tuesday the Commons public accounts committee is going to take a close look at the furniture repairs done during the 1966-67 refit of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure—a small but increasingly controversial part of the biggest naval repair job ever done by a Canadian shipyard.

When the committee resumes its Bonaventure hearings Thursday, it will begin hearing witnesses from the national defence and supply and services departments, Mr. Hales said executives of Davie Shipbuilding Ltd., which did the refit at its Lauzon, Que., yard, have also been invited to testify.

Top Davie executives, President Richard Lowery and General Manager Takis Veliotis, came to Ottawa earlier this week to complain to supply department officials about furniture repair estimates that were published when the Commons public accounts committee inspected the Bonaventure March 20 in Halifax.

They issued a statement Tuesday in which they said the committee was "gravely misled" if it believed these figures had any connection with the prices Davie charged for the items enumerated.

The items were:

—$258.20 for minor repairs to a medicine cabinet 18 inches by 24.

—$61.90 for repairs to a cabinet door pull.

—$734.40 for minor repairs to a wooden desk.

—$450.20 for fixing a wardrobe door and lock.

—$700 for replacing a berth drawer.

Mr. Lowery said these figures had nothing to do with the Davie company.

"He's right there," Mr. Hales commented later. The committee chairman said these were the defence production department's own estimates of what the work might cost.

Mr. Lowery also objected to the publicized figure of $12,000,000 as the cost of the Bonaventure refit. If this much money was spent, he said, it did not all go to Davie. The amount his company received for the job was $10,200,000.76.

Glamorous Haida Fights Against Rigors of Age

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Ton for ton, she was perhaps the most successful fighting ship in the Allied fleets in the Second World War. Never licked in a hundred sea battles, she sank 14 enemy ships and helped send 21 others to the bottom.

Now she's fighting her last Battle, the hardest of all.

At 36, HMCS Haida is old. She fights the insidious enemy, rust, that attacks all old ships. Helping her is a group of landlubbers determined to keep her afloat.

Here, at Port Weller drydocks, welders swarmed over the 1,927-ton destroyer Tuesday, patching and sealing the cracks and holes that developed in her bottom during two years in Toronto harbor. The job will take another two days to complete and will cost an estimated $300,000.

The Haida was towed here by the tug James E. McGrath Sunday. She will make the 5½-hour return trip across Lake Ontario the same way, once again to go "on station" at the foot of York Street as a memorial to the 100,000 Canadians who served in the navy during the Second World War.

British built, commissioned in 1943, the Haida was named for the warlike Indian tribe that once ruled British Columbia's Pacific Coast. She was 377 feet in length with a beam of 37 feet and her armament of six 4.7-inch and two four-inch, high-angle guns, six anti-aircraft guns and four torpedo tubes put her almost in the light-cruiser category.

She fought on the convoy run to Murmansk and off the French coast in the English Channel. Of the 14 ships to her credit, three were destroyers and one a submarine; the others were smaller coastal escorts or merchant ships. She had many memorable actions, including the sinking of a German destroyer that had torpedoed Haida's sister ship, the Athabascan, April 28, 1944.

Teachers Stage One-day Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — About 8,000 Protestant teachers picketed elementary and secondary schools Tuesday in a one-day strike against the Quebec government.

No incidents were reported as the pickets carried their placards in mild but noisy weather, giving an estimated 100,000 students a holiday.

Quebec's 70,000 teachers have been without a contract since June, 1968.

And that contract, following a teachers' strike in 1967, had been extended by special legislation to last June.

Negotiations for a new contract started 12 months ago, but broke down at the mediation level in March.

Tuesday's picketing affected 174 of 370 Protestant schools, mostly in Montreal.

A spokesman for the teachers said the walkout was "symbolic" measure designed to arouse public opinion against the "autocratic attitude of the Quebec government."

A spokesman for the Protestant teachers said Tuesday's action was "90 per cent effective."

De Gaulle's Referendum Stand Prods Opposition to Action

PARIS (CP) — President de Gaulle's threat to resign in the event of a referendum defeat next Sunday has become the focus of intense campaigning by a suddenly-rejuvenated, though still-divided, opposition as the current pursuit of votes nears its climax.

And with reports widespread that the powerful Gaullists are worried, a 65-year-old spokesman for the opposition Centre party is quietly advertising his merits as a possible successor to the general.

The new hopeful is Alain Poher, now president of the Senate and comparatively little-known until April 2.

That was the day he fiercely attacked de Gaulle's referendum proposal for changing the upper house in a consultative body from its present status as a chamber actively participating along with the National Assembly in the legislative process.

The 78-year-old general, whose referendum project couples the Senate plan with one for giving more power to regional authorities, has eclipsed rivals such as Poher before.

Friday, de Gaulle again will take a favorite medium, television, to reiterate his arguments for a "yes" referendum by the people in his reform program.

But Poher and other opposition chiefs campaigning along similar lines have managed to give a previously-unimpressive campaign new life by concentrating their attacks on de Gaulle's resignation threat and his contention that such a departure would mean chaos.

Any departure by the president would mean, under the present constitution, that Poher would take over as interim chief of state.

Court Rejects, NDP's Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — An appeal by the Ontario Woodsworth Memorial Foundation against two banks and a holding company, seeking the return of $125,000 it lost on a property sale, was rejected Tuesday by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The loss was sustained by the foundation in 1962 when it sold the New Democratic Party's Ontario headquarters building.

Samuel Resnick, a Toronto lawyer and the foundation president, placed $125,000 of the money in his own trust fund.

"It is common ground that the signature of Marion H. Bryden, then the vice-president of the foundation, was forged on the cheque by Resnick," the high court said in its judgment.

The money was deposited to Resnick's account in the Bank of Nova Scotia. The Royal Bank of Canada, on which the cheque was drawn, paid it Nov. 8, 1962.

The board of directors of the foundation learned in February, 1963, that the Marion Bryden signature on the cheque was a forgery but did not notify the banks of this until May, after futile attempts to regain the money Resnick.

Michener Begins Tour of Canada's Eastern Arctic Regions

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener, dressed in a mackinaw parka, arrived at this community on the southeast corner of Baffin Island Tuesday to begin an 11-day tour of Canada's eastern Arctic regions and the District of Keewatin.

The governor-General and Mrs. Michener, along with their party of eight and 14 members of the press, television and radio, made the 1,339-mile four-hour flight here from Ottawa in a Canadian Forces Yukon aircraft.

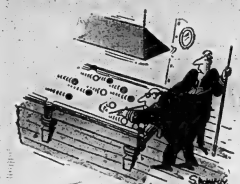
At Frobisher Bay, Canada's largest Eskimo settlement with a population of 1,200, the vice-regal couple was greeted by Stuart M. Hudgson, commissioner of the Northwest Territories council.

Also lining the runway strip at the airport were Eskimo children, many of them dressed in cuty uniforms, and a group of Canadian Rangers on motorized toboggans.

The Canadian Rangers are a 1,683-man force of Eskimos and Indians who operate in Canada's North as an unpaid frontier militia. There are four companies on Baffin Island.

The rangers collect information on unidentified objects and wreck sightings and also assist in rescue operations and supply guide service to regular military units visiting the North.

Later the Governor General was taken to the federal building where he was briefed on the Frobisher Bay Development Plan, a housing, educational, industrial and recreational project expected to be undertaken this summer.



Frobisher Bay was the first stop in a 9,000-mile tour during which Mr. Michener will make 24 flights in Yukon, Hercules, Dakota, Cosmopolitan and helicopter craft.

During the trip he will become the first Governor-General to visit Canada's most northerly settlement, Albert, on the northeast tip of Ellesmere Island 500 miles from the north pole.

Mr. Michener will be based here for three days, making side trips Wednesday to Cape Dorset on the southwest coast of Baffin Island and Thursday to Pangnirtung north of here on the island's east side.

The party will then leave for Resolute Bay on Cornwallis Island from where it will make several more trips to communities on the Queen Elizabeth Islands.

Polish Remover Was Fatal

TORONTO (CP) — Mustard oil should be added to nail-polish remover to make it obnoxious to inhale, a coroner's jury recommended Tuesday.

The jury was told that Brian John Calamatta, 18, of Toronto, suffocated last month when he became unconscious after inhaling nail-polish remover from a plastic bag which he had put over his head.

The jury also called for a concerted education program for parents, teachers and teenagers on the dangers of inhaling toxic substances such as nail-polish remover and glue.

Strictly Personal

Esthetics Not Relative

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It's interesting how people are "relativist" about things it suits them to be relativist about, and "absolutist" about other things it suits them to be absolutist about.

A man called me on the phone this morning to ask about a play I recently reviewed. He wanted to know if it is "morally offensive." All I could reply was that it didn't offend me, but I couldn't speak for the party he was planning to take to the theatre.

Now, this man would never call me up to ask whether a certain piece of music is "beautiful." He no doubt believes that beauty is in the eye (and the ear) of the beholder. If I recommended a certain poem he didn't like, he would shrug it off with a phrase about "a matter of taste."

People tend to be relativistic about their esthetic standards, but absolutist about matters of "sex" and "decency" and "obscenity." They want the right to judge for themselves whether a painting or a piece of music is beautiful and appealing, but ask for an objective judgment on whether a play or a novel is "immoral" or "offensive."

But if "beauty" is in the eye of the beholder, so is "obscenity." I personally happen to find the collected works of Mickey Spillane "obscene" in their crude combining of indiscriminate violence and mindless sex — but the public bought such books in the millions, while at the same time regarding D. H. Lawrence as "obscene."

In my own view, esthetic judgments are much more absolutist than sexual ones. There is not a trained musician in the Western world who would not agree that Beethoven wrote greater music than Grieg, or that Schnabel was not a finer pianist than Liberace — no matter what the uninstructed in such matters might believe.

But the very people who would bellow with outrage if we tried to impose such esthetic standards upon them ("I may not know music, but I know what I like") are the same ones who demand absolute conformity in sexual matters, and who think that "dirtiness" can be defined by counting noses and accepting the majority opinion.

There are certain absolutes for the human race — in that the nature of our being cannot be violated with impunity — but sexual customs are not among them. It's odd that the people who worry whether certain plays are "morally offensive" so rarely worry about the moral offensiveness of war, poverty and bigotry.

Workload Won't Be Increased

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto school board chairman Alex Thomson, responding to a threatened teacher walkout, said Monday the board will do its best not to increase the teachers' workload next year.

He said in a statement the board will seek to ensure that the average class size will not exceed the present ratio of 16 pupils to one teacher.

Mr. Thompson's statement followed distribution earlier this week of a circular to the city's 2,600 secondary school teachers. The teachers' executive committee suggested a half-day walkout within a month to support demands that classes remain the same size.

Fiery Debut Made By MP

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's youngest member of Parliament, Roman Catholic civil rights worker Bernadette Devlin, made a fiery parliamentary debut Tuesday as British troops guarded vital installations in her native Northern Ireland.

Miss Devlin, 22, today, spoke during an emergency debate on the Northern Ireland crisis hours after arriving here to take the seat she won in a by-election last Thursday.

The petite brunette waved her arms and pounded the bench with her fist as she spoke emotionally on the demands of the North's Roman Catholic minority, demands which caused a weekend of arson and rioting there.

She told a crowded, silent Parliament:

"There is no place for us, ordinary peasants in Northern Ireland.

"There is no place for us in the society of the landlord because we are the have-nots and they are the haves."

The people of Northern Ireland are oppressed by a corrupt, bigoted and self-interested government and the people have had enough she declared.

Miss Devlin sat down to sustained cheers from all parties, including Prime Minister Wilson.

The British troops were ordered to guard installations in Northern Ireland because of violence since Saturday which included the blowing up of power lines and post offices.

Policemen Rebuffed By Metro

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's executive committee Tuesday upheld its refusal of a request from policemen for an equal voice in how their pension fund is invested.

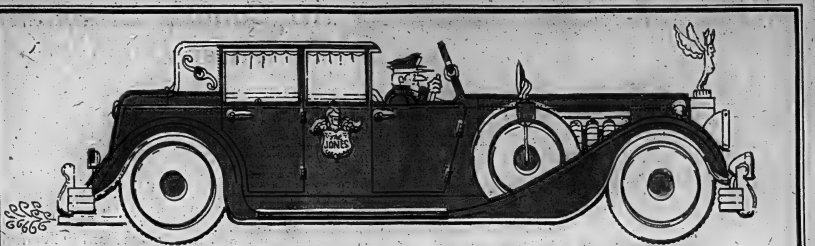
It called for a report on the request from a nine-member pension-benefits committee on which police have a majority voice. The report is expected within two months.

During debate on the issue, Sydney Brown, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, repeated his argument that more money would be available for pensions were it not for the "restrictive investment policies" of the three-man board of trustees which administers the fund.

Human Rights Supported

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should station full-time human rights staff in "key centres" throughout the country, the Canadian Civil Liberties Association told the Senate committee on legal and constitutional affairs Tuesday.

This staff would go into the community and in co-operation with provincial agencies, "promote positive compliance" with Canada's fair-practices laws.



The association's suggestion accompanied its recommendation for strengthening human rights legislation and administration throughout the country.

The Toronto-based organization, represented by its vice-president, Ramon Park, assistant Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America, opposed a Senate bill which would amend the Criminal Code to prohibit the advocacy of genocide and make hate literature illegal.

Mr. Park said there is not enough evidence of danger in the social peace or the "target groups" to warrant taking the risk of freedom of speech he said is inherent in the bill.

"We believe that the emphasis should be directed not primarily at outlawing the words of the hatemonger, but rather at improving the social context in which he seeks to operate," Mr. Park said.

"Our efforts should be focused essentially upon further immunizing the Canadian public from the message of the hatemonger."

Air Canada Union Prepared To Water Down Pay Demand

MONTREAL (CP) — Talks aimed at settling the strike that has grounded Air Canada since Sunday night were to resume today following union indications that it is willing to water down wage demands.

Mike Pitchford, negotiator for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said in an interview Tuesday that the union, which has been asking for a 30-per-cent increase in a one-year contract, does not expect to gain hoped-for wage parity with their American counterparts now that the federal government has stepped into negotiations.

The union earlier had declared it wanted parity.

"You can't—[illegible] the government," said Mr. Pitchford. He was referring to Prime Minister Trudeau's description of the Air Canada offer of a 23-per-cent increase over three years as "fair and generous," and to the presence of Bernard Wilson, assistant deputy labor minister and William Kelly, director of conciliation and arbitration, at talks here.

A face-to-face meeting of union and Air Canada representatives, scheduled for Tuesday morning, was cancelled, although the six-man teams of negotiators met separately throughout the day with the federal trouble-shooters.

Separate talks by union and company officials with labor department men started minutes after 6,300 union mechanics, storemen and maintenance workers walked off their jobs at 11:59 p.m. EST Sunday and continued all day Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Wilson said the issues—including wages, shift premiums, and protection of union job designations—have been discussed endlessly."

Members were on strike after rejecting the Air Canada offer 8,325 to 1,118. Earlier talks broke down April 8 and the union notified the company of its intentions to strike.

Wages under the old-contract, which expired Dec. 31, ranged from $2 to $3.97 an hour compared to a range of $2.85 to $4.40 at Northeast Airlines in the United States, Mr. Pitchford said.

The strike, costing Air Canada a net loss of about $800,000 a day, grounded the entire fleet of 108 aircraft for the second time in the company's 31-year history. The first time came when the machinists association walked out for two weeks in 1960.

The strike has also resulted in "off-duty-without-pay" status for thousands of other unionized Air Canada employees—about 3,000 pilots and flight attendants and about 2,200 passenger agents and communications personnel.

Air Canada said this is normal procedure in the event of a strike and is not a layoff.

The 18,000 passengers normally carried by Air Canada are being offered a wide range of alternative transportation by bus, rail and air.

The Canadian Transport Commission has approved a number of emergency flight services by CP Air and 12 smaller airlines operating regionally from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

Credit cards can be a boon to your vacation plans this year, but you could end up with one of the most expensive vacations of your life, if you lose them. The motorist is advised that the convenience of having and using a credit card requires additional responsibility on the part of the holder. A credit card should be guarded more closely than cash, for there is no limit to what a thief or casual finder can do with many of them.

Travelers, especially, should not carry any more credit cards than necessary, and should consider traveler's checks, which are easily replaceable if lost or stolen, to assure they have funds available.

The Ontario Motor League offers these suggestions.

1. Don't carry credit cards loosely or leave them where others can pick them up. After use, get them back and make it a habit to return them to the same place.

2. Keep a list of the cards and their numbers. If any are lost or stolen, immediately contact the issuing company. All purchases prior to notification of the loss may be charged to you. (Check warning and instructions on back of most cards).

3. Don't carry or retain cards you don't want. Return or destroy them.

When signing a purchase, check the slip before signing. Your statement will be for what the slip indicates and adjustments may be difficult to obtain.

QUESTION: We are spending three months in Europe this summer visiting different countries. We have heard the Eurailpass is an economical way of travelling. Please tell me where we could get information on this and how much it costs.

ANSWER: The real beauty of this unique pass is that you can get on the train wherever you want and get off wherever you want. And as you travel you have a picture-window view of Europe.

All you have to know is your destination and when the next train leaves — which in most of Western Europe is unbelievably frequently, even half hourly between some large cities. In Europe trains are still the main way of getting from city to city. It gives you 100,000 miles of routes to choose from and the first class section in trains — which is quite posh in most cases in Europe. It gives you the greatest flexibility possible other than having a car. You can stay as long as you want or leave on the next train if a city disappoints you. You'll be given a map with your pocket-sized pass which shows the web of lines you can use. If you are considering going by Eurail, the first thing to do is make a rough map of your itinerary — you can make as many changes as you want later. Then add up the mileage. If it works out to five cents a mile or less for the pass it is worth it. Anything over that is a stiff premium to pay for convenience.

Try to avoid the trains that stop at every small place. The fast trains of the Trans-Europe Express zip between more than 100 large cities in seven countries cutting hours off your travelling time. Many of Europe's railways are electrified and the trains hit 125 m.p.h. Eurailpasses must be purchased before you leave Canada, from your travel agent or foreign airlines. All you need to buy one is your passport number and the necessary cash. They are good for travel in 13 countries of western Europe but not in Britain, Ireland, Greece, Turkey, or the Iron curtain countries. Several types of Eurailpasses are available. One for 21 days of unlimited travel sells for $118.80. A one-month pass costs $151.20, a two-month pass $194.40, a three-month pass $236.80.

The pass is wallet-sized and does away with the need for buying tickets. It will be punched the first time you use it and from then on all you do is show it to the conductor when you board trains until your time runs out.

Total Eye Transplant Is Made

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A total human eye transplant, the first on record, has been performed at Methodist Hospital here.

John Madden, 54, received the eye from the body of O. B. Hirkman, 35, of Beaston, who had died 24 hours earlier of a brain tumor.

Dr. Conard D. Moore, who performed the transplant, said Tuesday that Madden, owner of a photography studio at Conroe, Tex., was in excellent condition. Moore added it was too early to tell whether the patient would be able to see with the eye.

"The operation is simple but the problem in keeping the optic nerve cells alive," said Moore.

"Even with a perfected procedure it could be used only with in an accident," he said. "The in an accident," he said. The type case we had here might happen once in a thousand times."

Madden lost his right eye two weeks ago when a corneal transplant was unsuccesful because of bleeding. He was still in hospital when the donor eye became available.

Despite loss of the eye, Moore said, it was found that the nerve essential to vision had not been destroyed. This led to the transplant in which the nerves of the donor eye were connected with the Madden's optic nerves.

"We now just have to wait and see what happens," Moore said. "We are hopeful the nerves will unite. But even if the vision doesn't work he will have a normal looking eye."

Eye transplant recipients, unlike heart recipients, face few organ rejection problems because the eye does not have as many exposed blood vessels, Moore said.

Surgeons have performed successful total eye transplants on animals.

Moore is an assistant professor of ophthalmology at Baylor College of Medicine. He was recently named as assistant director of the Institute of Ophthalmology in the Texas Medical Centre.

BC Indians Plan UN Appeal on Fish

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fraser Valley Indians have warned they will go to the United Nations or international courts unless action is taken on their salmon fishing grievances.

The parliamentary standing committee on fisheries and forestry was told Monday the Fraser Valley Indians will do everything in their power to protect their hereditary and aboriginal fishing rights.

"This is part and parcel of our unsurrendered title in B.C.," said Be Paul, executive director of the Confederation of British Columbia Indians.

"If we don't get satisfaction from the federal government, you leave no other choice for us, but to seek a solution outside Canada — either at the United Nations or the international courts of law."

Mr. Paul presented a list of 10 items on which the Fraser Valley Indians want action.

Tourists Can Destroy Tourism

Canada Is Called Custodian Of Resources for Recreation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada must continue its role as "the major custodian of recreation resources in North America" to succeed in the increasingly competitive international tourist industry, American travel expert William D. Patterson said Tuesday.

Mr. Patterson, publisher of Saturday Review magazine spoke to 400 delegates at the annual meeting of the Canadian Tourist Association.

He said Canadians need to protect the quality of their environment and way of life against the "cultural shock" of achieving a successful tourist industry.

In an interview after his speech, Mr. Patterson said a country could lose its resources by failing to protect itself from the corrupting influence of tourists.

By being careless in building up its tourist industry a country could destroy both its tourist potential and its environment for its own citizens.

"Look at the United States," he said. "A lot of our national parks are nothing more than rural slums and our national shrines cheaply exploited, razmatazz and hookytonk."

Mr. Patterson compared the "junk and debris" on the American side of Niagara Falls to the "beautiful" Canadian side.

He said Canada's conservation of its park and natural resource facilities "set an example" to the United States. CEGada is considered North America's recreational custodian, he said.

In his speech Mr. Patterson said there has not been much promotion of U.S. tourist facilities within Canada before. Until about seven years ago, the balance of tourism had been in favor of the U.S. But by last year Americans spent $800,000,000 in Canada compared to Canadians spending $640,000,000 in the U.S.

Dymond Introduces Bill

Province Seeks Tighter Rein Over Homes for Youngsters

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Matthew Dymond Tuesday introduced in the Ontario legislature a bill which authorizes him to establish, regulate and control facilities for children suffering from mental or emotional disorders.

The largest individual group of training and treatment centres for emotionally-disturbed children in Ontario is Browndale, a non-profit school which once formed part of Brown Camps Ltd., owned and operated by John Brown, NDP member of the legislature for Beaches-Woodbine.

The bill introduced by Dr. Dymond also provides provincial grants to childrens' mental health centres.

It permits the health minister to establish and operate mental health centres, and forbids their operation except under licence.

Licences can be refused by the director of children's service branch of the health department if a centre is operated in a manner "contrary to the best interests of the public or of the children."

The act establishes a five-member board of review which will have the power to subpoena witnesses and documents and to hear evidence given under oath.

Any summoned witness who fails to appear can be referred to the courts where the offence can be punished as a contempt of court.

The Minister can, while the board of review is holding hearings, apply for an ex parte court order authorizing him to occupy and operate the centre under question.

If the licence for a mental health centre is revoked, the parents or guardian of the children must remove them as soon as possible.

If the children cannot be moved to other accommodation or care, the health minister can for a period up to six months.

The act also provides for appointment of inspectors who can enter any premises where groups of children suffering mental or emotional disorders are being cared for.

Breaches of the act are subject to fines up to $2,000, and obstruction of an inspector to a fine of up to $500.

Minister Says PSI Not Out

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Matthew Dymond said Tuesday reports that Physicians Services Inc. has rejected a proposal under which it would become agent for federal medical care insurance in Ontario are "a little premature."

The health minister had been asked in the legislature by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and NDP Leader Donald MacDonald to confirm reports that said the 11-member board of governors of PSI had rejected the proposal in the belief that PSI's policy-making and fee-setting powers would be emasculated under the federal scheme.

Dr. Dymond said he would give no further information at this time on negotiations between himself and private health insurance carriers about medical care.

He said the report was based on the reactions of PSI officials while in fact only the PSI's House of Delegates can make a final decision on this sort of question.

Dr. Dymond has not yet announced whether Ontario will enter the federal medical scheme, but earlier this month he said his department had made a draft proposal to certain health insurance carriers concerning their possible role in the plan.

He said Tuesday that he has arranged a tentative meeting for Friday morning with representatives of PSI.

PSI, a doctor-operated, non-profit health insurance plan, has about 1,400,000 subscribers in Ontario to make it second in size to the government-sponsored Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan which has about 2,000,000 participants.

Hospital Raise Set By Board

TORONTO (CP) — An arbitration board, ignoring guidelines set by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, has awarded a 25-per-cent wage increase to non-professional workers at Peel Memorial Hospital in nearby Brampton.

In setting its guidelines, the commission had said it would refuse to meet any part of a hospital's budget relating to wage increases in excess of eight per cent a year.

The arbitration board's award, the first to exceed the OHSC stipulations, was based on an earlier memorandum of agreement between the Building Service Employees' International Union and the hospital, but later withdrawn by the hospital because the commission would not provide the funds.

The decision covers about 170 employees, including maids, practical nurses, orderlies and other non-professional staff. Hospital employees are forbidden by law from striking.

The wage increases mean the rate for maids would go from $254 a month to $293 this year and to $316 in 1970, with the contract expiring June 30, 1970.

Gulf Oil Discovers Major Uranium Find in Saskatchewan

LA RONGE, Sask. (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher and residents of this northeastern community were optimistic Tuesday after Gulf Oil Corp. announced that a highly promising vein-type uranium deposit has been discovered in the Wollaston Lake region.

In Regina, Mr. Thatcher said he is extremely optimistic "that we have a major uranium mine in the province."

The announcement was made earlier in the day at Gulf's annual meeting in Los Angeles.

Board Chairman W. D. Brocket said that drilling in the property near Wollaston Lake, about 300 miles northeast of La Ronge, 450 miles northeast of Saskatoon, had encountered high-quality ore-grade mineralization. He said additional rigs were being moved into Saskatchewan to speed evaluation of the deposit.

"It's what we expected," said Hugh McCracken, board manager and president of the Chamber of Commerce in this community of 2,300.

"With that amount of exploration up there, they're bound to find something. It will make the other mining companies make a move."

Gulf Minerals Co., a subsidiary of Gulf Oil, announced in Toronto in March the discovery of probable ore-grade uranium mineralization. The firm said another good sample had been taken 400 feet away from the first hole, although the mineralization was not disclosed.

Last December, Gulf said that a first test hole had yielded mineralization averaging .56 per cent.

Mr. Thatcher said the company is being cautious in its approach to announcements concerning its work on the property, "but everything we hear makes me extremely optimistic that we have a major uranium mine."

Also in Regina, Mineral Resources Minister A. C. Cameron said the government has known since December that considerable work will be needed to assess the size of the ore body and the possibility of a mine.

Mr. Cameron said the work will continue for sometime but the government is confident that further encouraging announcements will be made.

Bill Knauf, a prospector in La Ronge for the last four years, estimated that Gulf's deposits of uranium in the Wollaston Lake region are "probably quite extensive."

"It was hard to evaluate without more details," he said. "Big companies are notoriously secretive about anything they do."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Sparked by bullish news, western oils rose sharply in a mixed Toronto stock market today. Industrials continued to retreat from Monday's record high.

By mid-morning the western oils index jumped 4.15 to 252.25. Trading was active.

Mill City was up 55 cents to $5.70, Consolidated East Crest 50 cents to $9.50, Permo 30 cents to $3.35, Dynamic 20 cents to $4.95 and New Continental 20 cents to $4.45.

All five have an interest in drillings by Gulf Minerals in the Wollaston Lake area of Saskatchewan.

Gulf Minerals is a subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corp. of Pittsburgh who said Tuesday that a third drill hole in the Wollaston Lake area has encountered promising ore-grade mineralization.

Gulf Canada, which also has an interest in the Wollaston Lake drilling was up ¾ to 25¾.

Gulf Canada and Shell Canada paid $2,405,780 for leases to 96,000 acres in the Smokey River area of Alberta and $2,319,452 for another $2,000 acres of the same area.

Revenue lost ¼ to 17½. The American Stock Exchange said it will continue the trading halt in Revenue pending receipt of requested information.

Trading has been halted on the Amex since Friday.

Pacific Pete rose 1⅛ to 39½, Brazilian 1¼ to 21¼, Home A 1 to 59½, Prairie 1⅛ to 31⅛ and Asamera 1¼ to 37¼.

Gesco fell 1¼ to 14½, National Drug ⅝ to 11⅜, Norcanda ¼ to 35¾ and Numac ¼ to 10⅝.

On index, industrials were down .18 to 183.14. Golds gained .44 to 252.93 and base metals .17 to 114.68. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,122,000 shares compared with 923,000 at the same time Tuesday.

The Toronto market cut its midday loss in half Tuesday but still dropped moderately in light trading.

The market followed the trend in New York, opening with a small decline and then falling sharply about noon.

However, Toronto lacked the climbing momentum of New York and closed with a loss.

The industrial index has been falling steadily since touching a record high of 193.83 early Monday.

Salada gained ¼ to 16¾ and Slater Steel, which controls about 50 per cent of Salada's shares, slipped ¾ to 15¾.

Slater formerly accepted Kellogg Co.'s offer, made last week, for at least 90 per cent of Salada's stock at $17.50 a share.

Sherritt lost ¾ to 11¾, the stock rose sharply Friday after the company said its current drillings in northern Manitoba intersected copper and zinc values.

Computing Devices rose 1¼ to 28½ after reporting a more than 50 per cent increase in its six month earnings.

Stelco slipped ¼ to 26 after reporting lower first-quarter earnings despite increased sales and production.

On index, industrials were down .54 to 192.33, base metals .51 to 114.51 and western oils .70 to 248.10. Golds gained 2.43 to 253.49. Volume was 3,155,000 shares compared with 3,739,000 Monday. Losers outnumbered gains 325 to 248.

Tomorrow night:

Celebrate at Leslie's 50th Anniversary "OPEN HOUSE"

Leslie's are celebrating fifty years in business, and to help you enjoy the fun, they're taking the night off. No sales will be made Thursday evening. Tomorrow night is party night. It's your night, and what a night! Give-away for young and old. Lucky door prize tickets. Refreshments. A live dixieland band. Join the fun. Bring a crowd. Skip dessert and have it at Leslie's. "Open House" is from 7 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. at Leslie's, where for fifty years ,the right fit has meant more than just the right size.

Free Gifts For All

To commemorate their 50th anniversary, Leslie's are giving away gold-colored, metal shoe horns that are guaranteed for fifty years! And there's probably nothing else you can get today that's guaranteed that long. In addition, there'll be balloons galore for the kids.

Free Refreshments

Forget your calories and dig into the delicious donuts that Leslie's are supplying. You won't need dessert for a week! Have a cup or two of coffee. Loads of soft drinks for the kids. And it's all on Leslie's, to help you celebrate their fiftieth anniversary.

Live Dixieland Band

While you're enjoying your refreshments and your free gifts, you'll see and hear a live dixieland band. This band, right before your eyes, will southern fry some traditional dixieland classics with a style that will make your feet itch, unless you're wearing Leslie's shoes.

Door Prize Tickets

Pick up a door prize ticket, nothing to buy. And you could win first prize: a fifty dollar shoe voucher. Or second prize: a thirty dollar shoe voucher. Or third prize: a twenty dollar shoe voucher. Or you could win fourth or fifth prizes: colorful, seasonal tote bags.

Special 50th Anniversary Offer

10% off anything you buy at Leslie's on Friday and Saturday this week! This is the first time Leslie's have made such an offer and there probably won't be another like it for fifty years. If you need shoes this season, now is the time to buy them. No layaways please and no sales Thursday night.

Survival in Doubt

Hawaii Gives Birth To The Hawaiians

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Monkees Brothers have discovered a gold mine in James Michener's Hawaii. The big bestseller has now inspired a second movie, The Hawaiians, a rare example of a single novel providing plots for two movies.

"I want to get the message across: The Hawaiians is not a sequel," insists Walter Mirisch, the producer of both Michener films. "A sequel uses the same characters and moves them beyond the time span in the original movie. Our picture will use entirely new characters in another period of Hawaiian history."

Michener's style has had a curious career in the film world. Fred Zinneman was originally scheduled to make the movie. Overwhelmed by the immense story—from the geological beginnings of the islands to statehood—he decided it could be told only in two separate films.

"But our financial people decided we could only do one picture at a time, so Fred dropped out of the picture," recalled Mirisch. George Roy Hill was enlisted as director.

Midway in the location filming, the Mirisches decided Hill was proceeding too slowly, and he was removed. But a threatened mutiny by the native actors restored Hill to command. Hawaii finished far over budget and opened to rather unkind notices, even in Hawaii.

"Nobody liked it but the people," Mirisch remarked happily. Also no doubt by the popularity of Julie Andrews, the film has already grossed over $30,000,000, with more expected from reissues and television.

The producer admitted that he was too weary at the completion of Hawaii to think about another film based on the Michener novel. But the picture's receipts buoyed his spirits, and last year he began preparations for The Hawaiians.

"The title came to me in the middle of the night," he said.

James Webb wrote the script and Tom Gries will direct. The new story covers 35 years, picking up about 30 years after the end of Hawaii. Charlton Heston will play Whip Hoxworth, son of the character portrayed by Richard Harris in the first film. The only other casting thus far is John Philip Law, as Heston's son.

Real Cause Not Revealed

NEW YORK (AP) — The third in NBC's series on The Ordeal of the American City Tuesday night attempted to make some sense out of the dismaying and frightening disturbances affecting many of the colleges in the U.S. It may have released some heat, but precious little light.

The 90-minute program had frightening, effective film footage of the turbulence at San Francisco State College. There was also some interspersive talk by a teacher who stuck with the establishment in crisis and more from a compulsively outgoing colleague who joined the strikers.

But what remains murky to the television viewer is the real cause of the trouble. Is it professional trouble makers? Is it a fad like panty raids? Or is there something real and valid in the issues? Do bear the directors make their demands, beat the sociologists speak of the anger and impatience of the ghettos.

But what appears on our screens seem to be an assortment of youthful show-offs most often dressed as if they were going to attend a masquerade party and chanting insulting jargon and, when questioned, making little sense. All of them seem to enjoy their brief moments in the TV sun.

Then, via tape, we are taken over the familiar rounds of the other side—the college administrators. But we hear little or nothing from the vast majority of students who have been swept away from the trouble centres and the cameras. There is little reflection of the public's attitudes, which must be undergoing some hardening.

Television news shows have the responsibility of covering current events. Television documentaries must do more. It may be the current crop about collegiate turmoil have jumped in too soon with too little to illuminate the screen.

Filming begins July 14.

Mirisch declined to reveal the budget "because I'll look like a jerk if it gets changed in the middle of shooting." An educated guess is $8,000,000.

And after The Hawaiians, what? He admitted that other sections of the book offer splendid possibilities for film subjects.

STUDY MATERIALS

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Researchers at North Carolina State University are trying to combine metals and ceramics into a substance for making artificial hard bones. Dr. Charles R. Manning says, "Ceramics are very compatible with body tissue, but are also brittle. So what we are looking for is a ceramic-metal material with the strength of the metal and the compatibility of the ceramic, along with other properties necessary to engineer bone design."

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Sorrow, is there anything that can be done to prevent my unpleasant affliction? — Mrs. G.

Comment: I have always believed that snoring deserves serious investigation. I recall one man who admitted that his wife was becoming a physical wreck because of lack of sleep. In his case nothing in his physical examination gave us a clue to his snoring.

One day I asked him, "Do you sleep with your dentures in or out?" He said, "Out." I suggested he try sleeping with them in: to firm up the tissues around the mouth and lips. He did. To our surprise, his snoring problem disappeared. He says he is a good sleeper always work so miraculously.

I suggest, Mrs. G., that you see a nose and throat specialist look you over. In some cases snoring has been helped temporarily by a nasal spray which obstructs natural breathing. Perhaps nasal congestion due to allergy is the reason. Special nose drops, sprays or antihistamines may help. In some children relief comes after the removal of enlarged tonsils and adenoids. Unfortunately, more often the cause cannot be discovered. In many there is this abnormal vibration of the soft palate and the soft structures of the nose and throat. They lose their normal tone and become flabby.

Loud snoring does not usually wake up the snorer himself. For this reason, he often thinks his room partner is exaggerating. Those who suffer from listening to the nightly snorts at last give up in desperation. Some rebel. I recall at least one patient who divorced her husband because he treated her complaints as a joke.

People who disturb others with loud snoring should at least consult a physician — not only to seek a cure, but to show they are sympathetic.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For years I have had osteoarthritis of the knees and hips. The last few months I have noticed that the ends of my fingers have been getting knobby and unsightly. They ache, but not too much. Is there any connection? — Mrs. R.

Comment: From your description I'd guess that the bony changes at the ends of your finger joints are what we call Heberden's nodes. Often they are associated with osteoarthritis. Unlike some other types of arthritis (for example, rheumatoid) these joint changes at the fingers do not interfere with manual activity. I have known typists who continue to type; women who continue to sew; pianists who continue to play. What hurts most, perhaps, is — as patients say — "my fingers look ugly."

Tweed

TWEED — After twenty-odd years in business, Mr. and Mrs. William Kellar of Pievna, Ontario have sold their property and are moving to a farm home near Perth, Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Kellar operated a general store and laundromat in the village of Pievna.

The new owners of the Pievna business are Mr. and Mrs. David Summers from Aurora, Ont.

Harold Perry of Pievna, who will be starting work on a dam large beckoner on the Angliers Church Rectory there. This will be done at a total expense of $30,000, a spokesman for the Church in Brockville, Ontario.

Peter Enright of St. Augustine Seminary, spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Harrigan, Read, Ont.

The members of the Pievna Community Club have completed plans and sent out invitations for the annual reunion of former or Pievna area residents, on Sunday, May 18th, 1969, from 10.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m. The day's program will include services in the Catholic, United and Anglican Churches. This is the 6th annual "At Home" for former citizens. 450 persons attended last year from as far away as Vancouver, B.C. and several points in the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Allaby of Queensboro will celebrate the 50th wedding anniversary on April 26, 1969. They were married in St. John's Roman Catholic Church, Flinton, Ontario on April 26th, 1919. The attendants were: Mae Bosley and Edmund Brushey.

Sailor Says Round-world Trip Was Just 'Very Nice Holiday'

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — Robin Knox-Johnston, his clothes tattered and his canned food running out, brought his yacht into port Tuesday to complete the first known non-stop voyage around the world by a lone sailor.

Boat whistles tooted and crowds at dockside cheered.

"I am a little overwhelmed by this reception," the 30-year-old merchant marine officer said. He jokingly told reporters: "You are attaching a lot of importance to what I consider was a very nice holiday."

The "holiday" lasted nearly 11 months, including long stretches of rough sailing weather.

High winds dogged the solo sailor to the last.

An ugly storm chased him into the famous Cornish port of Falmouth, scene of many great sailing ships' arrivals, as others wind had forced him miles off course.

An ancient harbor cannon boomed a salute to the bearded and smiling British mariner and his 32-foot ketch Suhaili, covered in bright red rust, barnacles and weed.

Thousands watched from the surrounding headlands and Queen Elizabeth and Prime Minister Wilson sent their congratulations.

Knox-Johnston had spent 313 days alone at sea—longer than any sailor in history—on a voyage that covered nearly 30,000 miles.

Knox-Johnston's arrival in Falmouth, where he set sail last June 14, will win him the Golden Globe Trophy in the non-stop round-the-world race sponsored by the Sunday Times newspaper of London.

With luck he could also collect $12,000 for the fastest circumnavigation, providing his time is not beaten by the two contestants remaining in the race. The original field was nine.

On board one of the escorting craft was another world voyager, Sir Francis Chichester, who girdled the globe alone in 1966 but stopped on the way in Australia.

Red weather and bad luck had followed Knox-Johnston all the way. Within weeks of leaving England, the Suhaili nearly capsized off Africa. Days later the steering gear broke down. A failing tide ran the yacht aground near Otago Harbor in New Zealand.

Immense waves were the biggest I have ever seen," he recalled—nearly smashed the Suhaili and salt water polluted his drinking water, leaving only eight gallons between himself and death. He caught rain water in a sail.

Last November, with his radio broken, his rudder damaged and his self-steering gear smashed, Knox-Johnston was out of contact for 138 days.

A mid-Atlantic search by British, Portuguese and American ships and 30 NATO vessels failed to find the navigator and adventurer who had gone to sea with stocks of canned food, recorded music, liquor, chewing gum, onions and a rifle.

Then a British tanker sighted the battered Suhaili 800 miles from the Azores on April 5.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: The year ahead: time to consider and put into effect the great adjustments. There is more responsibility than in most years and more authority. Your home and regular working place become increasingly important and require attention. There may even be important changes to improve both. Today's natives usually pay little attention to rules and customs. Travel interests these people.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Property deals, buying or selling antiques, or signing long leases are greatly favored. At short range, the associated tensions are apt to upset your partner or family members.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): This is one day where your personal response to the needs of others could be tested. By day's end you may have added additional stewardship or guardian type chores to perform all through the coming year or two.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Romance is out today altogether along with any important business beyond routine. Everybody prefers to manage his own affairs and wants to be left alone. Consideration has its rewards in subtle terms.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): The temptation is to sulk. Be glad of a chance to work alone or to have privacy. Do some writing. Let go of what comes of it.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Arrangements still are not stabilized around your homestead, so delay a bit while people decide what they want and how to plan it. (New friends should not be taken as authorities.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Anything you say today will be contradicted if in clear terms. Wait until people are in the mood to listen rather than oppose. It is much easier now to get certain matters out requiring close cooperation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Move with all the energy at your disposal — mainly in business channels. Get a deal settled, then celebrate in solitude. All tend to have a chip on their shoulders (which falls off if you so much as look at it).

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): The urge is to recapitalize, to borrow for refinancing. Be sure to check with financial specialists on what is involved in the deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Settle down, put in a day of consistent work. Make up for details skipped recently, add a note of apology where appropriate. Your hobbies beckon for the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): The day is tense, so that energy is better focused on practical matters. With a good day's performance behind you, the tension is eased and you can settle to a nice evening of home life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Nobody is available for full cooperation, and there is nothing specially difficult to watch for. So do the things you have been planning keeping records. There is a chuckle in the late evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Today levels out to fairly comfortable achievement and healthy pleasures. Make the most of it while this atmosphere prevails.

Record Year Seen For Housing Here

Now Close To '68

By Roy Peacock
Staff Reporter

The construction of 141 senior citizens and single family housing units planned for Belleville by the Ontario Housing Corporation will make for the establishment of a housing construction record in the city this year.

This is the expectation of city building inspector Grant Sickle who said the Ontario Housing Corporation program would be a "big help" toward setting a housing construction record.

The OHC plan construction of 96 single family housing units, and a further 45 senior citizens housing units.

The contract for construction of the 141 units has been awarded to Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd., subject to the receipt of architecturally designed plans.

Mr. Rollins said today that the required detailed plans would be forwarded to Ontario Housing Corporation in the near future and he expected a construction start on the building program by August or September.

Saturday Drinking Hours Extended

TORONTO (CP) — Effective May 12, Saturday night drinkers in Ontario won't have to order up those double shots just before the 11:30 p.m. bar curfew. They'll still have 90 minutes for elbow-bending.

The extension of Saturday night sales in all licensed premises to 1 a.m. on Sunday was one of six changes in Ontario liquor laws announced in the legislature Wednesday by Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

The relaxation of the laws is part of a continuing study of a cabinet committee which Mr. Welch said is concerned also with such matters as a possible lowering of the present minimum drinking age of 21.

Other changes include:

—Hours of sale in all licensed premises will be uniform from 12 noon to 1 a.m. Monday to Saturday. The 1 a.m. week-day closing time now applies only to cocktail lounges, and not to beverage rooms and clubs.

—Hours of sale on Sunday of liquor with meals will be extended so that sale and service will be continuous from 12 noon to 10 p.m., rather than the present noon to 3 p.m. and 5:30 to 9 p.m.

—Sale and service of liquor with meals will be available on Good Friday as it now is on Christmas Day, 12 noon to 10 p.m.

—Special occasion permits will be issued for Sundays.

—The Liquor Licence Board will consider applications for patio licences during the summer months.

The special occasion permits are for international, national and provincial conventions between 12 noon and 10 p.m. They would be granted also to other groups, provided that liquor is served only to persons seated at a table for a meal, which must not be limited to such services as cheese and crackers, soup or sandwiches.

Mr. Welch said the government also will encourage beverage room and public house owners to eliminate, on application to the liquor licence board, their segregated, men-only premises.

'Then the poor people had a tax reduction and lived happily ever after!'

Flood Waters Buffet Trail

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — An army of civil defence and volunteer workers fought today to save this south central British Columbia city of 12,000 from further damage after the waters of three tributaries of the Columbia River boiled into the city.

Every able-bodied man was called out for sand-bagging duties and emergency accommodation was hastily prepared for 240 families forced from their homes.

Dynamite crews blasted holes up to 20 feet wide in retaining walls, built to keep the Columbia River out of the city, so the rampaging creek waters could escape into the river.

The floods struck without warning.

Trail Creek quickly inundated the northern portion of the city Wednesday — ripping up culverts from which it normally flows into the Columbia and forcing the evacuation of about 300 persons.

Air crews prepared to blast retaining walls on the Columbia, a second creek overflowed its banks.

A third creek then poured into the city centre.

Unofficial reports that at least two lives were lost could not be confirmed.

Hellyer Quits Cabinet Over Housing Delays

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Paul Hellyer today announced his resignation from the Trudeau cabinet.

"I really feel that there is no alternative but to submit my resignation," the 46-year-old Toronto politician said after explaining that he had been unable to sell the cabinet on some of his recommendations to increase the housing supply in Canada.

His resignation came Ja.. one year and four days after Prime Minister Trudeau formed his first cabinet after succeeding Lester B. Pearson as head of the Liberal government.

In his opening statement to a hastily-summoned news conference, Mr. Hellyer said:

"Due to the fact that I have been unable to get approval for the submission (to cabinet) I put forward and . . . at the moment have no indication when it would be approved . . . I really feel I have no alternative but to submit my resignation.

"This was not a decision easily arrived at."

Mr. Hellyer, considered one of the comers in the Trudeau cabinet and a key minister in the former government of Lester B. Pearson, said he had been trying particularly to find solutions to housing problems for persons in lower income brackets.

He said he "wanted to open up new avenues" for these people.

But cabinet had not given approval to his plans yet and he had "reluctantly come to the conclusion" that it might be weeks before such approval was forthcoming.

The Canadian people are tired of "buck-passing" in the housing field, Mr. Hellyer said. They do not really care what level of government has the prime responsibility for housing. They wanted action.

In this situation, he felt his only move was to submit his resignation.

The transport minister appeared at ease and unruffled when he arrived for the news conference theatre where rumors had already started to circ..

Uneasy Irish Quiet Broken

BELFAST (CP) — Scattered violence punctuated an uneasy quiet in Northern Ireland Wednesday night after the government agreed to the Roman Catholic demand for universal suffrage in municipal elections.

Shortly after midnight Wednesday night saboteurs blew up an unguarded water pumping station near Belfast Airport. The blast reduced water supplies to the capital, where water already is being rationed because of two pipe explosions last week.

Late Wednesday night a Roman Catholic school in Tirgavel was damaged by a fire bomb.

The Catholic Civil Rights Association, which has campaigned for six months in the streets for "one man, one vote," announced it is trying to call off all street marches and demonstrations for the next few days to tighten discipline among its followers.

Prime Minister Terence O'Neill issued a call for a "truce in our streets" after he risked his political future by pushing the suffrage extension through a caucus of Unionist party members in the Ulster Parliament.

The members of the Protestant government party approved O'Neill's proposal by a 28-to-22 vote.

No date has been set for the new rule to be put into effect, and O'Neill still must get approval from his party's 300-man standing committee at a meeting next Monday. It is an all-Protestant body whose members range from country squires to Belfast shipyard workers. It speaks for those who have most to lose if the Roman Catholic vote is enlarged and gerrymandering of local election districts is ended.

Jury Sentences Sirhan to Die

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury believed Sirhan Bishara Sirhan's mind was impaired, says juror George Stitzel, but not to a degree to affect its verdict—death in the gas chamber for the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

What of the month-long testimony from psychiatrists and psychologists as the defence tried to prove Sirhan, 25, lacked the mental capacity to form malice and "premeditated" plot against Kennedy?

"It stunk—I don't buy that stuff," said Albert N. Federico, another juror. He expressed his view to reporters after the verdict was announced in court Wednesday.

Stitzel, 57, a pressroom foreman at the Los Angeles Times, was asked: What was the overriding consideration that made him vote the death penalty?

"The gravity of the crime," he told reporters. "The cold-blooded murder of an individual. A planned murder."

Did he believe the jury would have decreed death if the victim had not been Kennedy, a candidate for president? "I think we would . . . as long as it was this cold-blooded, heinous crime."

Other jurors said the same thing.

Federico agreed with Stitzel that the seven man, five-woman jury believed Sirhan's mind was impaired, but not to a degree to affect the verdict.

Under California law, the same jury which finds a defendant guilty sets the penalty in a later trial. Superior Court Judge Herbert V. Walker set May 16 for the formal sentencing. State law provides for an automatic review in capital punishment cases and Sirhan's lawyers have said they will move for a new trial. Judge Walker also has the power to reduce the penalty to life in prison.

Vandals Are Active On Overpass Site

Construction sites always seem to have some after hours attraction for young-sters. Many of them seem to have an aversion for vandalism.

The new CPR- Bay Bridge Road overpass is a case in point. The contractor is in his first year and again this spring has been plagued by prankesters, says a works official.

Last year it cost the contractor time and dollars each week to replace detour signs which were consistently upset or mysteriously disappeared.

With resumption of work this spring the problems have been renewed.

Youthful pranksters have been practising their throwing accuracy by "shooting" out a lighted ramp approach sign. They also have turned their attention to equipment.

Windows in a mechanical shovel have been smashed. Recently workmen found tires on one of their machines completely deflated.

BGH Sets New Hours, Visitors from 10 A.M.

Commencing Monday, April 28, Belleville General Hospital will adopt a system of "open visiting" — replacing the specified hours schedule now in vogue.

New visiting hours at the hospital now will be from 10:00 a.m. until 8:30 p.m.

Hospital Administrator Philip Rickard said he felt the change to open visiting would be a "progressive step" and convenience both out-of-town visitors and the hospital.

However, Mr. Rickard emphasized, the need always to keep the patients' welfare uppermost in mind.

"Visitors should avoid staying too long and only two persons should visit at any one time," he said.

He added that visitors must be prepared to leave a patient's room any time, when asked by doctors or nurses to wait elsewhere while a treatment is being carried out.

In addition to being a convenience for out-of-town visitors, Mr. Rickard said it was expected the change to open-visiting would benefit the hospital as the traditional daily 2:00 p.m. visitors' rush would be avoided.

Damaged Insulators

Norman Manning, public relations officer for the Eastern Region Hydro, examines a number of hydro insulators that were damaged by trigger-happy marksmen.

Sharpshooters: Menace To Ontario Hydro Lines

One of Ontario Hydro's biggest headaches, "trump hunters" are out and about again this year.

Warmer weather is seeing hydro-line insulators to fall prey to frustrated hunters.

According to Norman Manning, public relations officer for the Eastern Region of Ontario Hydro, episode in Frankford last March was fair warning of the expense, inconvenience and possible danger in store for another year.

"Trump hunters" is the nickname given people that take pot shots at hydro insulators with shotguns, rifles, air guns, sling shots and stones.

In Frankford in March, 11 insulators were destroyed. This incident marked the first episode in the Eastern Region.

Mr. Manning said that evidence indicated a shotgun was used. Materials alone cost $200 and the labor of a line crew needed to repair the damages also ran about $200.

Security division men handle an average of one case of sharpshooter damage to insulators every day.

There are other tricks. There was one case where an archer shot an arrow attached to a wire over a series of hydro lines, causing insulators to burn. Hunters also shoot at cables.

Effects of this vandalism are more extensive than realized.

Mr. Manning said that production losses in some industries and other damages could amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"Some industries can lose $25,000 to $30,000 because of one "trump hunter" incident.

Also, destruction of insulators can be dangerous.

If a line falls it could spark a fire. If someone, maybe even the hunter, touched the line, the electric shock could be fatal.

Lines near dumps are usually more prone to vandalism. A hunter may go to a dump to shoot small rodents, and afterwards practices on hydro insulators.

One damaged insulator can mean disrupted electrical supply, hazards to linemen and the public, restoring of service costs and loss of revenue.

This could mean an increase in rates.

The expense of this vandalism means that a frustrated hunter indirectly hits himself in the pocketbook as a result of shooting an insulator, says Mr. Manning.

Paving Depends on Weather

Finish-coat asphalt paving on the approach ramp to the new CPR-Bay Bridge Road overpass could be laid as soon as the weather permits.

The news comes from a spokesman for Lightfoot Construction Ltd., general contractors.

Paving could be finished about mid-May.

For several weeks the contractor has been engaged in tidying-up operations. The overpass approach west into service on Dundas Ltd.

Stone reinforcement has been placed on slopes beneath the overpass. Grading and loam application has been going ahead on the ram-approach slopes in preparation for sodding.

Construction Starts on New Industrial Centre

Construction already started on Belleville's shopping centre . . . the one for industry, that is.

Pan Properties, with Abram Tobe and Sidney Spiegel at the company's helm, plan to have their multiple - tenancy industrial building ready for shops or warehouse within six weeks.

A long range plan cites 80,000 square feet as the final goal for space. The initial stage which is being put up now will take up a large portion of the final goal.

The announcement in build was made last year.

But weather and other minor factors delayed construction.

"Now that we've got the weather on our side, it shouldn't be too long before it's finished," said one of the principals this week as he went out to the city's industrial park to view the building's progress.

And a check with the office of Industrial commissioner Ray Brown indicates that interest in the project is high.

"Most probably there will be a tenant, or two, even before the building is completed," said Mr. Brown.

"This is what Belleville needs, and I commend Pan Properties Ltd. for taking the initiative on a speculative basis."

Not only is the idea of the building novel. So are the construction methods.

Canada Tilt-Up Ltd. of Toronto is doing the work. Sections are precast on the floor which, once poured, is used as a casting slab.

Jim McDyre of Canada Tilt-up said there is no nuisance to obtain the remaining $40,000 by asking village council to issue debentures or campaigning for public subscriptions.

"I am optimistic whatever is needed will be provided," chairman Lawrence said today.

The project is within 25 per cent of reaching its goal. So far costs run to $100,000 — a sum collected through community efforts from business men of money, labor and materials.

The balance will be used to finish the hockey arena, complete with ice-making machine, overhead lighting and seating.

Local interest runs high, and concessions to roam properties of the time it has taken and the numerous disappointments encountered, the chairm a n said.

He noted gifts of materials are due to the committee in a week as a "most encouraging sign."

Work involved and each section of the building is very adaptable.

Besides tilt-up construction, running very much into the building centre at this time is a fast building method.

The industrial shopping plaza in the industrial park, is the second building Pan Properties will have in Belleville.

Additions to the building will be made as tenants require the space. Industrial commissioner Ray Brown said he thought expansion will be in the air almost as soon as the building is completed.

Community Project

Frankford Rink Near Reality

FRANKFORD — The fund-raising committee for McMullen Memorial Recreation Centre here sees the end in sight for the project.

Within the next week, committee chairman Ken Lawrence says he will announce ways and means of securing the cash balance required. It will realize a dream arising from the ashes of a fire that destroyed the local hockey rink 10 years ago.

The committee at present is considering a choice: Whether to obtain the remaining $40,000 by asking village council to issue debentures or campaigning for public subscriptions.

"I am optimistic whatever is needed will be provided," chairman Lawrence said today.

The project is within 25 per cent of reaching its goal. So far costs run to $100,000 — a sum collected through community efforts from business men of money, labor and materials.

Hellyer

culate that he might offer his resignation.

He began his statement by saying that 20 years ago he entered public life primarily because he wanted to do something about two things—full employment, without inflation, and housing.

These, he said, had been up permost in his mind because of their importance to "the people I represent. . . . I'm from a working man's riding you know."

He said he had hoped some day to be in a position to influence in a real way government policy on these two matters.

For that reason, he had been happy when Prime Minister Trudeau last year assigned him responsibility for federal housing policy.

He said the chance to make an in-depth study of the housing problem was something for which he would always be grateful.

"I have found that I haven't been able to get final approval at cabinet level for the proposals of things that needed to be done."

Mr. Hellyer made it plain that not all the recommendations of his housing "task force" had been taken immediately to cabinet by him. He said he had made it plain that the recommendations would not all be implemented at once and that the whole program would take years to solve.

Some of the proposals had been designed to open up a range of opportunity or choice for the low-income earner, but cabinet had not been prepared to accept his recommendations.

Mr. Hellyer said he saw the prime minister this morning and found him "most gracious, kind and understanding."

Paving Depends on Weather

Finish-coat asphalt paving on the approach ramp to the new CPR-Bay Bridge Road overpass could be laid as soon as the weather permits.

The news comes from a spokesman for Lightfoot Construction Ltd., general contractors.

Paving could be finished about mid-May.

For several weeks the contractor has been engaged in tidying-up operations. The overpass approach west into service on Dundas Ltd.

Stone reinforcement has been placed on slopes beneath the overpass. Grading and loam application has been going ahead on the ram-approach slopes in preparation for sodding.

Warning Given on Separatism

"To appease the Quebecois the other provinces have gone a long way, for should their separatism become complete, Canada would not survive as a nation."

William Michaud, secretary of the Canadian National Railways Pensioners Association, yesterday spoke to some 75 pensioners at luncheon held at Club Canara.

Mr. Michaud said that the federal government is going "all out" to satisfy Quebec's demands because other provinces are thinking along the same lines of special status.

"If Quebec leaves us it is obvious other provinces will seriously consider their position within confederation."

The association secretary said that British Columbia is toying with the idea of making it a change and that the middle western provinces are dissatisfied with their politics in Canada.

While saying that Canada could not survive the stress of a separated Quebec Mr. Michaud added that a second danger lies in the other provinces following this example.

Obituaries and Funerals

RALPH WALLACE FREDERICK

Stricken with a heart attack Ralph Wallace Frederick, 217 Coleman street, died suddenly in hospital shortly after admittance on Wednesday afternoon. He was in his 72nd year.

Mr. Frederick was born in Picton, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Burton Frederick and spent most of his life in Picton until he moved to Belleville 14 years ago. He was employed with the McFarland Construction for some years but of late years was a bookkeeper in this city.

Mr. Frederick was prominent in baseball circles in Prince Edward County in the days before the Second World War. He was a catcher of note and played on two Intermediate championship teams from the Prince Edward County town.

During the Second World War he joined the Hasty Pees in 1941 and served as a staff sergeant at the Picton armories for the duration.

Surviving are his wife, the former Emma Muriel Cole, and three daughters, Mrs. Fredrica Breakenridge and Mrs. Ronald (Noreen) Van Dusen, both of Picton, and Mrs. Alfred (Lois) Thompson of Hamilton.

Also surviving are one brother, Cuthbert Frederick, Picton, five grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Mr. Frederick is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home, Belleville, but he lied in the chapel on Friday, April 25 at 10 a.m.

Interment will be in Belleville cemetery with Captain Shirley Rowcell of the Salvation Army officiating.

MRS. JAMES GUNNING

TWEED — In failing health for some time, Mrs. Sarah Mabel Gunning, R.R. 1 died at Queensboro on Saturday and a funeral service was held from the W. M. Bush Funeral Home, Tweed to St. John's United church on Monday afternoon.

Rev. W. Kennedy conducted the service in the church and also said the graveside prayers in Victoria cemetery. During the service a friend of the family sang a favorite solo "In the Garden."

The bearers, all grandsons of the deceased, were James, Gordon, Maurice and Glenn Gunning, Keith Coulson and Beverley Barry.

Mrs. Gunning was born in Hungerford township, 81 years ago, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph William Bateman and resided in the community all of her life.

She was a member of St. John's United church in Tweed and a lifetime member of the UCW.

Surviving are three sons, Laureson Gunning, Tweed, Gerald of London, Lorne of Tweed and three daughters, Mrs. William (Mabel) Barry, Oshawa, Mrs. Carl (Vera) Spry, Bonarlaw and Mrs. Harold (Margaret) Coulson, Thomasburg.

Also surviving is one sister Mrs. William (Stella) Woods, Tweed, 17 grandchildren and eight great grandchildren. Three sisters, Mrs. William (Grace) Kerr, Mrs. Murney (Emergard) Geen, Mrs. Earl (Lena) Holland and two brothers Ernest and Stanley Bateman predeceased. Her husband, James Gunning died in 1939.

JOHN H. HUGHES

TWEED — John H. Hughes, 82 years of age, an euphonium player in a Kingston band for the past fifty years, died earlier this month at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Barrie, Ontario. He was born in Kent, England, but immigrated to Canada with his parents in 1905, settling initially in Saint John, N.B.

Mr. Hughes later lived in Belleville and Kingston before moving to Oakville in 1956 and then to Barrie four years ago. A veteran of the First World War, he served overseas with the 146th Battalion. He was stationed at Petawawa during the Second World War.

Mr. Hughes was a member of the Salvation Army and played in the band. An accomplished musician, he performed as guest artist in many large Canadian and American cities, and composed two marches, which he submitted to the Kingston Citadel Band. He was the recipient of a life membership last summer in the Barrie Canadian Legion.

Surviving are his wife, the former Ada Woolston; a daughter, Mrs. H. (Ivy) Nicholson, Barrie; a son, Jack, Oakville; three grandchildren, a great grandson; two brothers, William and Harry, and three sisters, Mrs. Florence Reading and Mrs. Ada Latimer of Kingston and Mrs. Phyllis Sharp of Markham.

Burial was in Glenhaven Memorial Gardens with Jack Hughes, Hamlet Nicholson, Stanley Hughes, William Kent, Alec Nicholls and Edward Keeler as bearers.

MRS. MERRITT L. KERR (Charlsbarry)

The death occurred on Thursday last at Victoria Hospital, Renfrew, of Mrs. Minnie Kerr, formerly Jessie Duncan, in her 87th year.

She was born at Collingwood and spent most of her life in the Georgian Bay district.

Mrs. Kerr was a member of the United church.

Surviving are one son, Bruce Merritt Kerr of Belleville, one daughter, Mrs. Clifford (Bessie) Perrett, Renfrew and two grandchildren. Another daughter, Miss Daisy Kerr and her husband, Merritt L. Kerr, died some years ago. Mrs. Kerr was the last of her family.

The funeral was held on Friday evening from the McPhail and Perkins Funeral Home, Renfrew, and the body was transferred to Thornbury and a service was held at the Davidson's Funeral Home on Saturday afternoon with interment in Union cemetery at Thornbury.

GILBERT BLAKE BEDELL

The funeral for Gilbert Blake Bedell was held from the John R. Bush Funeral Home on Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. John Hobbs conducted the service in the chapel and also said the graveside prayers at Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Alden and Lorne Bedell, Lorne Jarrell, Clarence Vermilyea, Joseph McDonnell and Edward Burling.

MRS. FLOSSIE EVELYN BRICKMAN

The funeral for Mrs. Flossie Evelyn Brickman was held from the John R. Bush Funeral Home on Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. Robert Crooks conducted the service in the chapel and also the committal rites at Albury cemetery.

The bearers were Harmon Montgomery, Melvin Pulver, Ralph Redner, Clarence Vancise, Wilbert Green and Malcolm Hubbs.

Housing Hits Record

The contract is believed to be the biggest housing building project ever awarded to a Belleville contractor.

The total cost of the completed project is just short of two million dollars, including land acquisition.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the housing project would provide months of employment for many Belleville and district workers.

The senior citizens apartment complex will be similar to the existing block on Turnbull street which was erected two years ago. The new building will also be on Turnbull street, immediately to the north of the present structure.

The single family housing units will be located at various sites throughout the city rather than being located in specific sub-divisions.

The decision of the Ontario Housing Corporation to build additional rental housing in Belleville was reached last year after a survey revealed that more senior citizens and family housing units were badly needed in the city.

The survey revealed there was a long waiting list of eligible tenants for both categories of public housing.

The award of the contract to Maurice Rollins Construction is fitting, in that the Belleville firm already is responsibly the largest single housing contractor in the area.

With the 141 OHC units, City Building inspector Stickle sees 1969 easily establishing a record for housing construction in Belleville.

Already 150 permits for housing units (single family and apartment complexes) have been issued this year and the OHC permits will boost this total to almost 300.

The permit total so far this year includes the 80-unit apartment complex planned for the West Bridge Street area by local businessman Ted E. Schwab.

In addition, Mr. Stickle said permits for another 48 housing units made up of twelve-plexes and six-plexes are expected to be issued almost immediately.

Last year permits for 333 housing units were issued at city hall.

This year's final total is expected to far exceed the 333 housing units erected in the city last year. The 1968 total was almost double that for 1967.

But it appears all the new housing units will be needed.

New industry is being attracted to the city as it is indicated by the location of several new plants within the past two years.

The latest industry to announce location in Belleville is Brooke - Bond Ltd., which last week stated it would build a two million dollar plant employing 100 persons in the city's north - east industrial park area.

Also this year approximately 250 Unemployment Insurance Commission claimants will be transferred to Belleville to work at the new regional office to be built near the Belleville Plaza.

Prefer Police Careers

TRENTON — High school students here seeking career advice last night showed a definite preference for law enforcement.

Of 55 separate counselling services organized, the OPP and RCMP officers interviewed the largest number of future graduates.

Careers Night at Trenton high school was sponsored by Trenton Rotary Club and the Business and Professional Women's Club. It involved students attending both Trenton and Brighton secondary schools.

It was the fifth successive year for the project.

Grant Rathbun, committee chairman for the Rotary Club, says more students and parents toured displays and talked with the counsellors.

Mr. Rathbun said increased enrolment of dental students at various universities could be traced directly to information provided for college interviewers at the careers night project.

Among counsellors this year were representatives from Loyalist college.

Talking It Over With the OPP!

Students thronged Trenton High School last night to talk over careers with advisers from many professions. Much interest was shown in police work — and here students talk over prospects with OPP officer.

Business Boost

Business is where you find it, and Ontario is a leader in this regard. For instance, representatives of 12 firms are on their way to Britain, Italy and Germany in a search for new products, processes and ideas.

The Department of Trade and Development is sponsoring the trip and the representatives will scout for items that can be manufactured in Ontario under licence for the North American market.

In the last four years Ontario companies have negotiated 544 licensing agreements. These regulted in new sales of more than $148,000,000, capital expenditures of nearly $30,000,000 and the employment of more than 3,000 people.

The 12 firms involved in the mission are from Weston, Kingston, Don Mills, Toronto, Scarborough, Galt, Cornwall, St. Catharines and Dunnville.

Down to the Sea

It is ironic that a man can sail around the world alone in a ketch and survive the torments of the ocean, while in other, what would seem more favorable, circumstances, men can go down to a watery grave.

Robin Knox-Johnston has arrived in Falmouth after the first known solo non-stop voyage around the world, while in Howe Sound, about 30 miles north of Vancouver yet another steel-hulled tow boat has been lost. Three men died when the boat went down in a storm.

The tow-boats have been described by Captain Cecil Rhodes, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild's Western Division as "floating death traps," and he says he is prepared to recommend they be taken out of service.

One man survived and was taken to hospital, but the overall count of foundered vessels of this type, and casualties, is disturbing. Captain Rhodes says that since January 1958 there have been five deaths as a result of the sinking of 37 wood-hull tugs, while 29 men have lost their lives in the sinking of 27 steel-hull tugs. According to Rhodes these boats "go down like rocks."

This is a matter for Government investigation. The tugs are clearly unseaworthy and lives are being lost unnecessarily. It is surprising, in view of these facts, that a safer tug has not been designed for the kind of work involved.

The Way Ahead

If there is one thing that restores our faith in human nature — and in the young in particular — it is someone who knows what he (or she) is talking about.

Consider the business of being on unfamiliar ground and you want to find your way. How encouraging it is to be directed by one who obviously knows the lie of the land and describes it pleasantly and accurately.

There we were in Wooler, by the Upper Rideau for the first time in half-a-dozen years and there were these two teenage lasses and we were asking them the way to Highway 38 and south to 401. The blonde one in green spoke up. She was about 14 and she said her piece and she said it well, taking care to mention the gravel section near Burridge and advising us to avoid it in favor of the paved road bearing sharply to the left.

And so on, past a big lake where the road hugs the shore and twists ominously round great slabs of rock and finally you reach Highway 38 at a spot called Godfrey.

Westport has been quiet in the late afternoon sun. There is a suggestion of old Europe there, in this village by the blue lake. There were not many people about — but there was this youngster and she may not drive a car but she knows her way around.

The Church in Japan

The Christian church has spread its teachings to every quarter of the globe and flourishes in one way or another wherever Christianity is followed today. This includes Russia and the other communist countries.

Even in non-communist countries which follow other religions the Christian commitment is surprising. Japan has 800,000 Christians and the Anglican Church, for one, is working there. St. Francis Xavier visited Japan in 1549 and the Anglican Communion began work in Nagasaki in 1859.

The principal forms of religion in Japan of course are Buddhism, with 12 sects, and Shintoism with 13. Both have more than 100,000 shrines and temples. However there are several thousand Christian churches and the Roman Catholics have an archbishop and three suffragan bishops.

The Eternal Deficit...an Art Centre's 11 Bars et al

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Right about now you ought to be signing that cheque and mailing it with your T1 General or your T1 Short income tax form to National Revenue.

You can't afford to put it off much longer if you're hoping to get in under the month-end deadline — not after what Postmaster General Eric Kierans and the feuding postal unions have been doing to the mail service.

That amount on your cheque is a bit of a shock, what?

Know the reason?

It is as basic and simple as the federal finance ministers being just about the world's worst financial crystal gazers.

Ever remember when they have guessed right?

Item: the statement by former Finance Minister Sharp in 1967 that federal spending in the next year would be held so tightly in check he would be able to come up with a near-balanced budget, or at the very worst, a small deficit.

His idea of "small" turned out to be $675 million.

Item: the statements by Mitchell Sharp and his successor, Finance Minister Benson, in that same 1967, that spending in the following year positively, and in subsequent years, hopefully, would be held to an increase of not more than four percent.

That guaranteed "not more than four" came out at nine percent in 1968 and nearly 10 percent for 1969.

Item: the statement by Mr. Benson last October that spending in the last nine months of this year and the first three months of 1970 would be limited to $11 billion, 670 million.

And that came out at $11 billion, 857 million, a mere $187 million over the forecast.

Item: the statement last November by Mr. Benson that he would bring in a small surplus of $5 million in the current 1969-'70 federal fiscal year which began this April 1.

Well, that rosy outlook now, based on the new Federal Estimates for still bigger and fatter spending; a deficit running something like $1.62 million. And it can and very certainly will go higher, topping $200 million when the government produces its usually several sets of Supplementary Estimates.

"Supplementary" is a handy little word in official federalese which, translated into the financial English the taxpayers understand, actually means surprise, chaps, but we forgot about these little extra expenses the first time around."

The way the federal boffins fling it around, $5 million is not much in the way of tax loot.

But as a surplus, it would have been nothing less than sensational.

For there has not been a federal surplus in 12 years, not since 1957 when former Liberal Finance Minister Walter Harris brought in one worth a whacking $357,305,582.

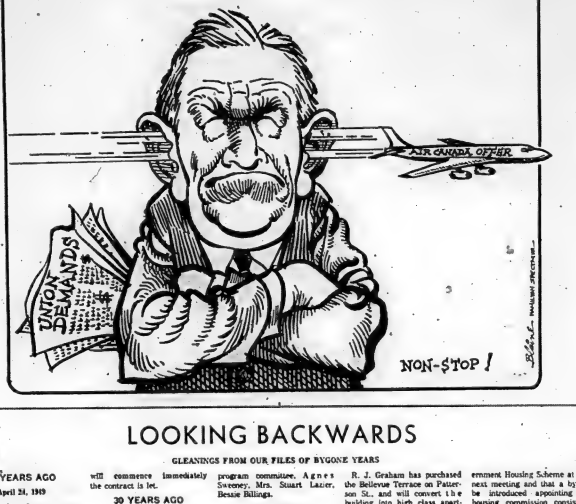
That was the last of the St. Laurent years, before the era of the big spenders, John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson, who competed for 11 wasteful years in racking up deficits.

A budget surplus was the established way of federal financial life through most of Prime Minister St. Laurent's nine years when the books were balanced eight straight times.

The biggest surplus: $676 million.

The smallest: $33 million.

Since then there have been 12 unbroken deficits with the 13th waiting in the budget wings.



When the federal financial wizards can go that wrong, they should not complain—but weep they do — that the industrial, business communities, like the ordinary taxpayers, refuse to take them seriously when they preach restraint and practise extravagance.

The government has taken to protesting that it has no control over its spending because it is locked into such programs as Medicare, family allowances, and other social security measures.

The fact is the government has all the authority it needs, has power to spare, in its parliamentary majority to control any and all of its spending.

But shucks, if it did — if it performed as easily as it promises — if it did not make a joke out of its anti - inflation preachments — how on earth could it afford such necessities, for example, as the National Capital's Centre for the Performing Arts with its 11 bars and cocktail lounges, which initially was estimated at $8 million and is costing something like $50 million.

Like that old federal wheeler-dealer, C. D. "Trader" Howe, told it, the business of government is "tax and spend, tax and spend."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 24, 1949

Stated to be of rare occurrence in the animal world, a muskrat with snow white fur was trapped in the Flinton district just before the close of the trapping season. The albino muskrat, which was of normal size, was trapped by Gordon Hasler. The muskrat had white fur, tail and feet. Game overseer Robert Davison said a white muskrat was an unusual novelty and the one trapped by Hasler was the first to be taken in the Tweed district in many years.

With plans for the building having been completely approved by the Department of Education at Toronto, tenders for the construction of the new school in West Belleville are now being called. Construction will commence immediately the contract is let.

With Laura Newman, St. Catharines, past president of the Canadian Federation of University Women's Clubs, as guest speaker, an inaugural banquet, instituting a club of this nature for Belleville district, took place at the New Queen's Hotel, Mrs. John Precious being the unanimous choice as president of the new organization. The report of the nominating committee was presented by Mrs. J. E. Bateman, the other members being E. Grout and Nellie Merry. The following executive was elected: president, Mrs. John Precious; vice - president, Mrs. William Doyle; secretary, Olive Priest; treasurer Hilda McLaren; social convener, Erie Grout; program committee, Agnes Sweeney, Mrs. Stuart Lazier, Bessie Billings.

Ulster Turmoil

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Whether Ulster is on the verge of civil war, as civil rights leaders have prophesied, may be overstating the danger at this stage, but there is no doubt that all the elements of a prolonged struggle are present.

It is ironic that the Catholics, who are again taking to the streets in support of their demands for political and economic equality, are the same people who failed to take advantage of their opportunity to register overwhelming support for politicians most ready to take action on their behalf.

Support for Prime Minister Terrence O'Neill and his special group of Unionist party members committed to a more liberal civil rights policy would, have been a positive move but the strong vote for the rabid anti-catholic supporters of Rev. Ian Paisley.

Secondary School Cost Is $928 Per Student

(Ontario Government)

Excluding Metropolitan Toronto the four largest school populations are Carleton County with 117,807; Wentworth County with 99,425; Essex with 79,000 and Middlesex with 68,571.

Metric school enrolment totals 633,127 with 265,844 in public schools; 72,185 in separate schools and 115,118 in secondary schools.

The county with the smallest student population is Haliburton County with 1,576 in public schools and 554 in secondary schools.

The majority of new teachers entering elementary schools are graduates of teachers' college and the largest single group leaving the teaching profession are married women returning to household duties. During 1967-68 a total of 3,277 married women left to return to the home.

In the calendar year of 1967 the annual operating cost of the public elementary system was $453,940,000; the average day school system was $420,983,000 while the annual operating cost of the separate schools was $150,868,000.

The annual per pupil operating cost for 1967 was $486 for public elementary schools, $427 for separate schools and $928 for public secondary schools. The higher per pupil cost of secondary education can be attributed in part to the higher cost of vocational education.

Largest item of the annual operating cost is teachers' salaries which total $345,181,000 for public elementary, $236,807,000 for secondary and $82,850,000 for separate schools.

Public to Blame for High Taxes

Ottawa Journal

It is a right and healthy thing that there is now public outcry against high taxes in our city.

Right — because taxes are getting too high, specially on the poor and middle-income people.

Healthy — because it was the public which had demanded many of the comforts and services which sent taxes up.

But civic politicians and officials also bear a share of the responsibility, through waste, boondoggling, duplication of effort, lack of planning, and — bad judgment.

The politicians and officials have not been firm in making clear to the public what would be the total costs of its demands. Similarly, school and collegiate and other board and committee members have been too reluctant to say "no." From all these the public deserves more careful stewardship.

But in the last analysis the public has been the demanding party. The public wanted finer schools, demanded higher pay for teachers, roasted bad roads, screamed if snow wasn't cleared instantly, sought better lights, more hospitals, more playgrounds, faster bus service, more compassionate welfare of all kinds, better wages and working conditions for firemen, police and all city employees, and enlarged recreational buildings and services.

This newspaper has warned repeatedly over these last ten years that our way of life was getting beyond our ability to pay. When we expressed that view there were numerous letters complaining about our being old-fashioned and not understanding the new economy.

Green Is 'In' Man!

Windsor Star

Men are more modest in attire than are womenfolk. But, truth to tell, this season they are endeavoring to brighten themselves up like peacocks or cock-pheasants. Certain color schemes, of shirts, ties and suits, are something to behold indeed.

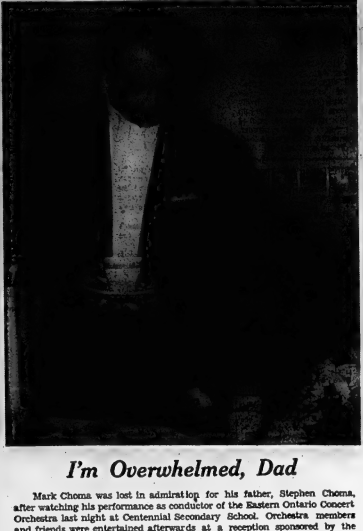
Green hasn't been a popular color for men's suitings since back in the 1920s. But now men, of all ages, shapes and sizes, are parading about in various shades of green. It is evident that though some of them look like overgrown leprechauns, they are spreading about in various fields. It's encouraging that this exodus has now been slowed.

More Immigrants from U.S.

Toronto Telegram

The winds of change in the United States are blowing northward toward Canada with increasing force.

Americans, disgusted over the prolonged Vietnam war, the destructive race riots and rising tensions, are looking hopefully to Canada more and more as a place to make their permanent homes.



The department of manpower and immigration has revealed that the number of U.S. immigrants to Canada last year totalled 30,422, almost double the figure of five years ago, and the highest since 1930. Canada was then 25,622 Americans flocked into Canada in the face of the depression, seeking employment. The 1967 total was 19,038.

Canada, for years, has been losing people to the U.S. at the rate of about 35,000 annually, many of them university graduates and specialists in various fields. It's encouraging that this exodus has now been slowed.

In 2953, for instance, emigration to the U.S. totalled 51,512. In 1967, it had dropped to 38,854. And last year's figure was about 30,000.

The restrictions imposed against Canadians under the U.S. Immigration Act of 1953 were one of the main reasons for the drop in Canadian emigration to the U.S. But there have been other factors, too. Job opportunities have improved here. Pay is now higher. Many Canadians simply don't want to live in the U.S. have been frightened off by race riots and Vietnam war and high living costs.

It's interesting that the U.S. overtook Italy and ran second only to Britain as a source of immigrants in 1968. Immigration from all countries totalled 183,974, down 17.5 per cent or about 39,000 from 1967. The Italian figure fell to 19,724 from 30,055, and the British to 37,889 from 62,439.

I'm Overwhelmed, Dad

Mark Choma was lost in admiration for his father, Stephen Choma, after watching his performance as conductor of the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra last night at Centennial Secondary School. Orchestra members and friends were entertained afterwards at a reception sponsored by the Belleville Home and School Associations and the Conservative Women's Association.

Orchestra Merits Ringing Applause

By EUGENE LANG

Arts Festival '69 has now emblazoned itself for this sixth decade upon the cultural history of Belleville, as the final attraction featuring the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra, was presented before a sellout crowd at Centennial School auditorium last evening. For the third consecutive year this now anticipated series of creative events under the general sponsorship of the Quinte Arts Council has achieved an overwhelming success. As in the past the orchestra of amateur musicians male and female, ranging over an age span of nearly half a century, displayed their collective musical endowments to a thoroughly reciprocative audience. The specific sponsorship was under the direction of the St. Julien Chapter, IODE whose Concert Group chairman, Mrs. Ralph Ellis, spoke a few words of greeting before the concert began.

Since its founding in 1961 by the present conductor, Stephen Choma, the half a hundred musicians have improved consistently in creativity and calibre, notwithstanding a certain turnover in personnel that is bound to take place. In its eight years of existence the orchestra has given over 86 performances in the Quinte area. To make music to the best of their ability and for the appreciation of their listeners is the goal of every member, and to this attainment, under the continued guidance of Mr. Choma they have seen a realization come true. That necessary ingredient, rehearsal, has seen the hour of practice rewarded by showers of applause from the thousands who have heard this instrumental assembly.

The program presented was of varied nature, encompassing the classical, romantic, salon and contemporary musical genres. Examples following should suffice. The Caliph of Bagdad Overture by Boieldieu was taken in sprightly sprint with strings jauntily skipping, although brass and winds had the odd jagged edge. The Corelli Sarabande and Allegro offset stately playing in former with lively pomposity in latter as the ragged edgers here redeemed themselves to our ears. The Andantino and Overture by K. F. Abel proved a choice delight with flight in trings and bite in brass. The Overture from Klamet borrowed from Borodin exemplified bounce and rhythmic rippings in melitous orchestral carvings. Slavians by Holesovsky brought tonal colorings from various instruments and piquant pizzicatos from the strings. Sustained song of winds given entreatingly as contrast to bright pacings in ever increasing tempos. Choma and Company gave enticing performance of these three Slavic dances.

In the slower selections the Scheherazade excerpt was presented with accent on melodic mellowness from all involved, however a less languid approach perhaps could have given a trifle more emotive effect. The Brahms Andante from the Double Concerto for Violin and 'Cello saw the richness of the string section come to the fore in a soft voicing of the langurous theme (one of Brahms' loveliest) while the rest of the orchestra dappled pellucidly with pastel shadings.

Three selections of recent (20th century) vintage were given exemplary renditions, with Legrand's I Will Wait For You again finding the strings in resonant voice, especially in the reprise. Medleys from Blossom Time and Mame found the orchestra in ever changing aspects as they led hearers into an engulfing web of tonal totality. To enthusiastic applause a short vehicle for string motivity entitled Perpetual Motion was delivered willily as an encore.

Guest artists Hazelanne and Robert Reid brought warmth and feeling into their singing of four Negro Spirituals as their clear and vibrant voices filled the encircled contours of the auditorium. The weaving of a previous bout of laryngitis precluded Hazelanne from continuing, but Robert brought all hands together in ringing applause for his highly dramatic handling of the familiar Matinata by Leoncavallo. Ronald Robertson provided the keyboard accompaniments. We hope for a complete and speedy recovery for Hazelanne as hundreds will be looking forward to her appearance next week in Messiah.

Assessment in retrospect: An overall fine performance by the orchestra for their playing which grows in stature as the years go by and congratulations to Mr. Choma for his interpretative insight which he has passed on admirably to his players that come from all walks of life. Their playing certainly merited the heavy applause they received.

Arts Festival Ends, Now Plans for 1970

The Quinte Arts Council ended its third annual festival last night with a sold-out orchestral performance and plans for expansion next year.

Council president Mrs. Charles Wilson revealed the organization in 1970 hopes to include other Quinte communities and involve more people as participants and spectators.

Plans are still indefinite, but sponsors feel the time has come for a week festival events to the entire district.

Mounting success of the three-year-old venture was indicated by two sold-out events this year — Saturday's performance of the Theatre Guild's play, The Diary of Anne Frank, and last night's appearance of the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra.

"Higher standard of performance" and "better calibre of craftsmanship" characterized Arts Festival '69, in the opinion of two directors.

But both Murray Irwin, of the Belleville Choral Society, and Paul Bernard, coordinator of the Visual Arts Display, agreed the three-week event must be enlarged next year.

Both would like to see more involvements of young people and school groups.

Their opinion was seconded by Roy Higgins, Cobourg, brought in to oversee technical aspects of the festival.

"The festival could be expanded to include six or seven events next year by bringing in massed school choirs and bands," he suggested.

Mr. Higgins also suggested a high school film festival as part of the Quinte Arts Council roster of events.

The production manager was an enthusiastic booster of the Arts Council's program.

"I'm sorry it's all over and I have to leave Belleville," he said. "It's fantastic that an area such as this can produce a festival of this size and standard of excellence. Canadian talent is seldom given enough challenges such as this."

Mr. Higgins paid tribute to "the co-operative spirit" of community organizations "who worked so well together" in assisting the Arts Council and its president, Mrs. Charles Wilson, to mount the festival.

Legion Readies Derby

TRENTON — It's time to forget about the big one that got away last year.

The trend in Trenton now is for fishermen to ready their gear for the seventh annual Fish Derby held by Branch 110 of the Canadian Legion.

Yesterday Legion committee co-chairman Bill Smith spent part of the afternoon unpacking prizes local firms have donated for contest winners. There also is a reward for the person who guesses the weight of the largest fish caught.

The derby also attracting entries from the United States, is open to grown-ups and juveniles—boys and girls 14 years and under. It is set for May3-4.

The first and second prize fish will be mounted free as trophies.

Area for derby contestants is restricted both days to the Trent River and Bay of Quinte from No. 1. dam to Baker Island on the east and Twelve O'Clock Point on the west.

Contestants must obtain an official entry form and an Ontario fishing license to become eligible.

Ann Landers
Letter Describes God as Everyman

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your cavalier treatment of the question from "that nut" who asked if it was true that God is a Catholic, a Negro and a Democrat, was, in my opinion, undeserved.

ANN LANDERS

You should have told the inquirer that God is indeed a Catholic, a Negro and a Democrat. He is also a Hindu, a Jew, a Protestant, Chinese, Japanese and Indian — a Republican, a Socialist and an Independent. He speaks Spanish, Portuguese, Swahili, Russian, German, French, Italian and Thai. God is a priest, a rabbi, a minister, a merchant, a miner, a farmer, a truck driver, an artist, a physician, a lawyer, an architect, an engineer, a musician, a bootblack and a bank president. He is Everyone. — ONE WHO READS YOU OFTEN.

DEAR ONE: I'm pleased that you read me often. I wish you'd write often. Thanks for a superb letter.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Because of so much emphasis on emotional problems and psychiatry these days, a great many parents blame themselves when their children behave obstreperously and get into trouble. I hope you will print my letter, which proves that parents aren't always at fault.

Lynn is now four years old. When I brought her home from the hospital she was screaming. She kept it up 10 to 14 hours a day until she started to walk at age seven months. The doctor gave me tranquilizers.

At age two Lynn was taking the curtains off the windows regularly between 2:00 a.m. and 4:00 a.m. She tore up everything in sight, including our wedding album.

I was ashamed to take her in public. She was always covered with cuts and bruises from self-inflicted injuries. She looked like a battered child.

Family and friends told me I was to strict, too lenient, too attentive, not attentive enough. I was loaded with guilt — convinced it was all my fault.

One day Lynn banged a gash in her head when I insisted that she take a nap. She needed stitches so I rushed her to the doctor's office. When I told him about the child's impossible behavior he had her tested the next day. The tests revealed that Lynn was a hyperkinetic child. This is a congenital defect, the cause of which is not known.

Thanks to a wonderful doctor, new drugs and therapy, Lynn is well on the way to being a normal youngster. The doctor has said that in a few months she will not need either drugs or therapy. If I had taken Lynn to a doctor earlier she would have received help earlier. And time is very important. A friend of mine has a son seven years old who just started treatment and it might be too late. The boy is already severely emotionally disturbed.

Tell mothers everywhere that if they see these symptoms in their child to run, not walk, to the nearest clinic which does testing. — GRATEFUL.

DEAR G.: I've printed other letters on this subject, but I'm pleased to print yours. Thank you for writing.

Presbyterian Women Mark 10th Anniversary

The Presbyterian Women of St. Columba Church celebrated their tenth anniversary on Monday, April 21, when guests were present from Kingston and Belleville.

Mrs. B. Hackett and Mrs. W. Grieves welcomed the members and friends pinning a white flower on all past presidents and a blue flower on chartered members.

The worship service, centred around the women at the cross, was conducted by Mrs. H. Vos, Mrs. A. Dunsmore, Mrs. W. Grieves, Mrs. J. Smit and Mrs. S. Gerdes. Mrs. G. Lyons, Presbyterial President from Kingston gave the offertory prayer. Mrs. R. Smith was pianist for the evening.

Miss Margaret Near, deaconess at the Chinese Presbyterian Church, Toronto, was guest speaker. She told of her work among the older as well as new immigrants and related how the two groups work closely together for their Church. Miss Near is responsible for the church school, day nursery, language classes and work among the youth and women.

A question period followed.

A highlight of each year was given by Mrs. A. Dunsmore in reading the history of the group.

Congregating around the birthday cake, three candles were lit representing the past, present and future. Mrs. A. Ryan, first President of the group spoke of the vision, faith and action which characterized the past. Mrs. B. Hackett, president, in lighting the candle of the present said "today is ours to fashion as our own crown, and so we must not only act but dream, not only plan but believe, now." Miss Sue Ward, president of the Senior High's lit the candle of the future with a prayer.

Tea and birthday cake were served.

Pictures and notices of past years were on display.

Mother Labels Billy A Dumbell

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My son Billy, at 12, is a dumbbell. At seven he had to go to a special school to learn to speak properly. After three years the teacher said he was coming along fine, but then we moved.

He started at another school but had to be put back again at the special school. He can't do a thing on his own. When he is told to do a thing a second time he gives you a dirty look.

Words go in one ear and out the other. When I ask him to repeat what I've said he puts on an awful face trying to think and say what I've said and takes his own sweet time to answer me.

He doesn't even know what is clean and dirty. He'd wear them over and over. Please tell me what I can do about him before I go out of my mind! — Mother of a Dummy.

Dear Mother: Just how much attention will you pay to what I say? You have your mind all made up about Billy. He is not lazy; not disobedient; not without potential. At the moment he is doing what comes naturally, in his circumstance.

You can ruin every scrap of initiative he has in him with the tactics you are using. Obviously he has difficulty learning, but whether this means a low I.Q. or some special handicap, I couldn't say, from here. And if he is retarded do you suppose calling him a dummy is going to encourage him to use what brain he does have?

Talk to his teacher for clues. And resolve to get on his side. This will be more of a learning process for you than for him, or I'm a monkey's aunt.

* * *

Dear Doris: My trouble is my hair smells. A couple of days before I go to the hairdresser or wash my hair (weekly)' it smells.

I don't let the hairdresser put any spray net on my hair because it is worse. In three days it smells. My hair is not oily. — Red Roses.

Dear Not: Look to your diet. Do you like strong seasonings, like garlic? Try avoiding highly seasoned dishes and see if that helps. Some medicines have a garlic ingredient; check that one with your druggist.

Body odors yield to frequent bathing. If nothing else helps, increase frequency of shampoos.

* * *

Dear Doris: A few weeks ago I sent for your leaflet on Baby Showers as I was planning a shower for an adoptive baby. Last evening the shower was held and your ideas on decorations and games helped me so much to make the party fun and a success. — Grateful.

Dear Grateful: Good for us! And thanks for saying so.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Grandma prefers to speak French, but we don't let her do it when she takes care of Terry. We're afraid it will confuse him while he's learning to talk."

Friend: "It's hard enough for little tots to learn one language."

A 2-year-old will be able to learn two languages more easily than ever again in his life, and surprisingly enough, with very little confusion, especially if he can associate each language with a different person or persons.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN VICTORIA SCHOOL

The general meeting of the Queen Victoria Home and School association was held recently.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. R. Skrill, who welcomed everyone. There is now a membership of 94.

The principal Don Lockyer also welcomed the group and mentioned that Queen Victoria school collected $134 for the Junior Red Cross.

John Luscombe introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Mike Mahoney, who works out of the Queen's University Addiction Studies Unit at the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital for the Alcohol Drug Research Foundation. He feels that it is important to reach young people concerning the active and potential damage of chemical substances being used experimentally by the young people.

Students from grade 5 and 6 were present.

Mr. Mahoney was thanked by Mr. John Luscombe.

Young Couple to Devote Lives to Making Pottery

TORONTO CP — When Diane Cumberland married her husband Ken three years ago he gave her more than his name. He also passed on his passion for pottery, and now both have decided to devote their lives to ceramics.

The two potters will graduate in May from the Ontario Crafts Foundation school of design at Sheridan College, Port Credit, Ont.

"We may have to work at something else for a year or two to make some money," Mrs. Cumberland said.

"But our goal is a studio in the country, preferably an old stone house where we can live and work."

After three years in sociology and psychology at the University of Buffalo, N.Y., Mr. Cumberland decided that what he really wanted to do was what he had been doing as a hobby — work with his hands.

And Mrs. Cumberland, who graduated from the Ontario College of Art and went to work in the art department of an advertising company, decided after her marriage that pottery was her calling too.

Mr. Cumberland said the couple prefers pottery to other crafts because "with pottery you are in control all the time."

There is control "with shape which you can change at any moment in response to a whim, and the color, which has a wide range."

"And you have an enormous backlog of tradition from which to work."

CHURCH GROUPS

VOTA VITA GROUP

The Vota Vita Group of the Mission Circle at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was in charge of the April meeting.

The president, Mrs. Joyce Stovell, welcomed members and visitors and opened the meeting with inspirational thoughts on the theme "Smile Sing and Pray".

Mrs. Carol Sabie led the hymn sing after which an interesting devotional was presented by several of the newcomers, under the leadership of Mrs. Pauline Dempsey. Two duets were sung by Mrs. Sills and Miss Chisholm of Foxboro, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Dorothy Reilly.

The guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Kay Hall, director of Mission Circles for the Trent Valley Association. She gave a most informative talk on her work in this area.

A brief business session was held, followed by lunch and a time of fellowship.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Kentish Apple Delight A Special Dessert

By MARY MOORE

Canada is apple country. From Nova Scotia, Ontario, and British Columbia come the best in the world.

But our recipe comes from Kent in England and it is a little beauty.

Please remember to clip this recipe for it may be used with other fresh fruits in season, such as peaches and even bananas. Notice its low sugar content.

KENTISH APPLE DELIGHT
(Serves 6)

6 med.-sized apples
4 tbsps. butter
2 eggs
3 tbsps. flour
3 tbsps. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups milk
One orange unpeeled and sliced wafer thin

Measure butter in saucepan. Pare and quarter the apples and add to butter in saucepan and cook, stirring several times, for 10 min.

In a bowl beat together the eggs, flour, sugar and salt until mixed then beat in milk.

Turn partially cooked apples into a buttered shallow baking dish and cover with the thin orange slices. Pour custard over all being sure it coats orange slices as you pour.

If desired, sprinkle top with another tbsp. sugar to induce browning.

Bake at 400 deg. F.ahr. for 35 min. If necessary place under direct heat of broiler burner until top is light gold.

Serve warm or at room temperature, with cereal cream if desired.

Secretaries Present 'Boss of Year' Award

By LINDA GELDART

It was a different kind of an evening — even the secretaries got a chance to relax — with their bosses watching, of course.

The action took place Wednesday evening at the Hotel Quinte, the highlight of Secretaries' Week under the auspices of the NSA — the National Secretaries' Association.

The Association, which is devoted to bringing recognition to all secretaries, and to inform the public of their many contributions to the community, is an international organization, known and respected for its high professional standards.

Last night's executive night was the culmination of a great deal of special effort and pioneering spirit, because it was the first secretaries' week observed by the newly - formed Bay of Quinte Chapter.

The dinner, attended by NSA secretary members and their bosses, was highlighted by guest of honor Mayor J. R. Scott, bringing greetings from the city of Belleville.

The evening was significant for another reason, too. The "boss of the year" award was presented to winner G. F. Bradley, manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. Mayor Scott made the presentation.

Winners were judged by two non - NSA members. Each secretary submitted a written composition as to why her boss should be named "the boss of the year", and according to those in the know, it was a most difficult decision.

Mr. Bradley, after receiving his award, spoke highly of the NSA, and the ideals that it serves.

"Our secretaries assist us in countless ways — they are a great group", said the award - winning Mr. Bradley.

Guest speaker for the evening was Canadian Division Secretary, Mrs. Barbara Williams of Kitchener.

Defining a secretary as an "executive assistant, with a mastery of office skills, plus initiative and judgment", Mrs. Williams suggested that the executive could put to work more of these readily available talents for him.

"The pace of business today is fast, coupled with a mounting tide of paperwork, the need for a good secretary to come to the rescue increases, to free him for his executive tasks," she asserted.

Mrs. Williams stressed teamwork, and the fact that "the secretary should work with the executive rather than for him."

"After all," she reminded the gathering, "your secretary is your staunchest supporter."

Naturally, when a secretary wants to improve her secretarial skills, she joins NSA, established for this express purpose.

Mrs. Williams described the members of the local chapter as an "interesting and alive group of women, proposing to meet the challenge of tomorrow."

Later in the evening, several of the secretaries put on a skit, which drove home the necessity of a good and loyal secretary.

The event was the climax of a special week — devoted to secretaries — and this time got all the attention they deserve.

No Way for Habs Here!: Sinden

BOSTON (CP) — Coach Harry Sinden says the National Hockey League's Eastern Division championship will be decided in Montreal Sunday after his Boston Bruins defeat the Canadiens here tonight.

"There's no doubt this will be a seven-game series," Sinden said Wednesday following an optional workout.

"There's no way Montreal is going to win here.

Bruins haven't lost a home game to the Canadiens this season.

Sinden is almost taking tonight's sixth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final for granted despite Montreal's 3-1 edge in games. But he's the same guy who said Montreal would not win another game this year after the Bruins lost the first two in Montreal in overtime.

Boston won the third and fourth games at home, but goaltender Rogatien Vachon and the Canadiens dumped the Bruins 4-1 in Montreal Tuesday even though the Bruins had a 42-25 advantage in shots on goal.

"Vachon played well, but we did our best to make him look good," Sinden said.

"We won't be shooting at him this time."

Sinden and coach Claude Ruel of the Canadiens have had a running verbal battle since mid-season. And when a Boston reporter asked Ruel for a prediction Tuesday night, the rookie coach replied:

"Ask God (Sinden) across the hall."

Phil Esposito was still shaking his head about Tuesday's second period when the Bruins ostahot Montreal 36-10 and still trailed 3-2.

"I'll bet I had eight of those shots and they wouldn't go in," he said.

HARRY SINDEN

"We were shooting at him, into his pads and off the post. And I'll tell you, Vachon isn't that good."

Sinden took his club to a suburban motel Wednesday night, but before he left he said:

"There's a fairly good chance we'll have Derek (Sanderson) in the lineup."

The young centre skated in the optional workout and took a whirlpool treatment for the charleyhorse he picked up in Sunday's fourth game here.

"Any way you look at it, man, I'll be there," Sanderson said.

Sanderson has eight goals in as many games, including two while the Bruins were shorthanded, and he and Ed Westfall form one of the most effective penalty-killing teams around.

Sinden still had not decided Wednesday night who will start in goal. Ed Johnston has not played since the second game of the series when Canadiens won 4-3 in overtime, and Sinden was worried that Gerry Cheevers may be overworked.

"With Gerry, it's a question of whether he is tired after playing such great goal for us," Sinden said.

"I won't know until tonight. I want to sit down with Eddie and Gerry and talk it over first."

STILL A BOSTON FAVORITE — Washington Senators' Manager Ted Williams, motions to two youngsters to get back off roof of dugout, as they sought his autograph prior to game with the Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park Wednesday. Wants Three Leafs

Emms on Job a Day And Already in Hassle

TORONTO (CP) — A difference of opinion on the calibre of players Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League will contribute to Canada's national hockey team has developed between Leighton (Hap) Emms and Jim Gregory.

Emms, new managing director of Hockey Canada, accepted the position Wednesday mainly on the strength of a promise by Stafford Smythe, president of the Leafs, that he could select three players from the Toronto team's active roster to help Canada's National's in next year's world hockey tournament.

"Any three I choose," emphasized Emms, who held off accepting the position until he knew of the calibre of assistance he was likely to get.

HAP EMMS

"I can only hope we get the same co-operation from Montreal Canadiens that we got from Toronto," said Emms.

But Gregory, Leafs' new general manager who returned Wednesday night after a West Coast scouting trip, said he doubts that the Leafs are committed to lend players of the calibre of Dave Keon, Tim Horton or Norm Ullman to the Nationals.

"At the moment I can't comment on it," Gregory told a reporter. "I haven't been speaking to Mr. Smythe about this and I don't know which players they're committed to lend. This commitment was made in January.

"There's another question: Are they on loan for two weeks or a year?"

David Molson, president of Canadiens, was one of the directors of Hockey Canada who didn't attend Wednesday's session of the directors at which Emms made his announcement.

Emms, who had prepared a long report on what was needed to give Canada a contending team in world competition, didn't accept the job until he was satisfied help would be coming from the pros and that he would be in undisputed command.

He will also continue to operate his Niagara Falls Flyers' franchise in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, although he will rely more and more on his son Paul, who coaches the Flyers, to assume operating responsibilities.

Emms said he hasn't any definite plans on hiring a coach. He would like to change the date of next year's World Hockey Tournament which will be held in Winnipeg and Montreal during the last two weeks in March.

He said he would prefer February dates or after the Stanley Cup, obviously aware that Chrysler Arena's ice would be easier to keep at such times.

Smythe's contribution to the new set-up went beyond player and ice assistance. Smythe said he will pay the salary and expenses of an assistant to help Emms build the club.

Ski Spokesman Says Subsidies Is A Fact of Life

CHICAGO (AP) — President Avery Brundage of the International Olympic Committee, evading rumors of all Alpine skiing medals because they were tainted with commercialism in the 1968 Winter Games at Grenoble, France, was caught in a groundswell Thursday.

Earl Walters, president of the U.S. Ski Association, suggested in Salt Lake City that the trail of commercialism leads throughout the entire Olympic program.

"You could probably eliminate all Olympic competitors on one score or another by sticking strictly to the rules," said Walters.

"The big difference between the skiers and other Olympic participants is that skiers make a little less effort to conceal it than some of the others.

"The truth of the matter is that all athletes in all Olympic sports are receiving financial aid from one source or another, even if it's just from their grandmother, in order to prepare themselves for Olympic competition.

"There really isn't that much difference between government subsidy and industry subsidy."

Walters said he didn't think Brundage would be able to get the medals returned and that his attempt will "just create more problems."

Brundage said he has asked the Federation International du Ski — FIS — to reclaim Alpine ski medals won in Grenoble a year ago.

Among those winning ski medals were Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C., and Jean-Claude Killy of France.

Clancy Has Coast Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Crozier, general manager and coach of Vancouver Canucks, said Wednesday he has offered King Clancy the job of assistant general manager with the Western Hockey League team.

"Clancy has to be the ideal man for a team getting ready to go into the NHL," said Crozier.

Clancy, a long-time assistant to Punch Imlach, fired as general manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs when the team was eliminated in the National Hockey League quarter-final playoffs, has not given an answer.

"I know Toronto is trying awfully hard to get him to stay with the Maple Leaf organization, but the door will always be open to him here," said Crozier.

Crozier disclosed the offer following Vancouver's 3-1 victory over Portland Buckaroos that gave the Canucks their first WHL championship since 1960.

He also issued a challenge to Los Angeles Kings of the NHL's expansion division.

"The NHL governors have been saying our bid for a franchise has been stalled because of a lack of talent," he said. "To see how much of a difference there is, we'd like to play a series against Los Angeles."

Los Angeles finished fourth in the NHL's western division and eliminated Oakland in the quarter-finals before losing to St. Louis Blues.

In Toronto, Clancy had no comment.

Sport Brief

PRAGUE (AP) — Emil Zatopek, the Czechoslovakian sports idol fired from his job by the state, said Wednesday he wouldn't care if he went to prison because of his protests. Zatopek, winner of three gold medals for distance running in the 1952 Olympic Games at Helsinki, has been stripped of his post as track and field coach at the Dukla Sports Club. He still maintains an office as a colonel in the army. The defence ministry accused him "of spreading untruthful reports and of action as variance with relevant orders of the ministry of defence." Zatopek, 47 and balding, has been one of the most outspoken critics of the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia to put down an incipient reform movement by the Czechs.

TWELVE MILES TO GO — Participants in Wednesday's Belleville-Trenton relay race mill around in the drizzling rain prior to the start of the 12-mile run. At right, Trenton High School's Bruce Radbourne dons his track shoes as race time approaches.

Picton Runners Lead Parade In Annual Relay

STAFF — A strong third leg in which Dave Yaeger overcame a 250-yard deficit sparked Prince Edward Collegiate of Picton to a run-away victory in the third annual Belleville-to-Trenton 12-mile relay race Wednesday afternoon and snapped Trenton's domination of the event.

The Picton foursome of Larry Ferguson, Peter Rigby, Dave Yaeger and Paul Cooper were clocked in the record time of one hour, five minutes and 44 seconds, breaking the record of 1:08:35 set last year by Trenton High School, which won the initial two runnings of the annual race.

Three other four-man squads, representing Centennial, East Northumberland Secondary School of Brighton, and Quinte all surpassed the old record as 16 teams, representing 10 area high schools and one public school, battled cold and windy weather.

Each member of the four-man squads ran a leg of approximately three miles, and the members of the top three finishers were rewarded with individual trophies sponsored by the Trenton Jack Club, a member club of the Central Ontario Track and Field Association.

Trenton's "A" squad took an 80-yard leading the first leg of the race, followed by Brighton, Picton and Centennial in that order.

Trenton widened the gap to 150 yards in the second leg, but fell back in the third leg when Picton roared into the lead and Craig Perry of Quinte made up an 800 yard deficit to move the Quinte Saints from ninth place to fifth.

Picton went on to win, with Centennial second in 1:07:08, Brighton's "A" squad third in 1:08:07 and Quinte fourth in 1:08:25.

The Trenton "A" squad floundered after their fast start, finishing in seventh spot, five seconds behind fifth place Cobourg East and one second behind the Trenton "B" squad which came in sixth.

Queen Elizabeth Public School of Picton, whose coach Myron Porter said before the race "We're in this race for experience; I'll be happy if we beat a few of the high schools," pulled an upset and pleased their coach by finishing 14th with a time of 1:18:30, beating the Albert College "B" team and the Brighton "C" squad.

Mann Cup Possible?

Lacrosse Hopes Are High

STAFF — Belleville's Senior lacrosse team hasn't played a game yet, but the equivalent of Senior "A" hockey's Allan Cup organizers are already thinking of a Mann Cup championship.

Club directors have taken steps to provide local fans with a top calibre team, which will be sponsored by local businesses and will be called the Belleville Merchants.

Bert Boyce, former coach of the Huntsville Hawks Senior "A" club, and a past member of the Ontario Lacrosse Association executive, has been named manager of the Merchants.

"The squad held its first full scale practice under the direction of coach Gerrard Byrne Monday night in Peterborough — Directors of the new Belleville Merchants Senior A lacrosse entry announced today the signing of Greg Marchen. Marchen was a member of the pro Peterborough Lakers entry in the National Lacrosse Association last year, and has been a member of the Belleville Mo-Hawk Senior A hockey club for the past three year's.

"I believe we'll have a strong team this year and I know the players are looking forward to introducing lacrosse to Belleville fans."

Byrne, who signed Monday night to coach the Merchants this season, was a player and assistant coach last season for the Peterborough Lakers of the Eastern Division of the National Professional Lacrosse Association.

During his earlier playing days, the 27-year-old Byrne was a star forward for Peterborough's Junior "A" and Senior "A" teams.

Team director Ken Pappas, a former Belleville resident was also optimistic. "I think we could possibly have a team capable of winning the Mann Cup in Belleville this year when we sign some more top players to augment our present squad. I know Belleville's a good sports town and will support the team which I'm sure will play a hith calibre of lacrosse worthy of fan support."

Three players — goaltender Wayne Platt and defencemen Larry Jones, graduates of the 1968 Peterborough Junior "A" Tee Pees, and veteran Senior "A" defenceman Jack Armour have already inked contracts with the Merchants for the coming season.

Fred "Soapy" Smith, the trainer of the Belleville Morrisons Junior "B" hockey team, has donated his services as co-trainer of the Merchants for the coming season.

Team directors reported Wednesday that the league schedule will be changed at an OLA executive meeting in Toronto this weekend with the recent announcement that a sixth team, Streetsville, has been accepted into the Senior "A" loop for the coming season.

With the addition of the Streetsville entry, the six team league will be comprised of teams from Belleville, Brantford, Bramalea, Brampton, Huntsville and Streetsville.

First Peek Monday

STAFF — Local sports fans will get their first peek at the Belleville Merchants Senior "A" lacrosse squad Monday night at the Belleville Arena.

Team director Ray Mortimore said Wednesday fans sports fans are invited to the Merchants' practice and inter-squad game Monday night at the Memorial Arena with no admission charge.

The Merchants will practise and hold an inter-squad game with their farm club, the Peterborough Junior "A" TeePees, at 8.30 p.m. Monday night.

Mortimore added that the senior players would hold an instructional period for local youngsters prior to the inter-squad game.

Notable among the players local fans will see Monday night are three who have already signed for the coming season.

The Merchants' goal should be well protected this summer by Wayne Platt, an outstanding Junior "A" netminder for Peterborough the past two seasons.

Platt was selected, in a poll of Peterborough fans, as the TeePees most valuable player last season, and was named to the Junior "A" loop's all-star squad.

Among these protecting Platt will be defenceman Larry Jones, an all-star who was voted the junior club's most valuable player award by the TeePees players and executive, and Jack Armour, a veteran Senior "A" player who was a member of Peterborough's 1966 club which won the Mann Cup — emblematic of the Canadian Senior "A" lacrosse championship.

This trio will be on hand with the rest of the team before Monday's inter-squad game to provide lacrosse instruction and give tips to Belleville lacrosse novices.

Commercial Softball Makes Debut May 20

STAFF — All signs point to a seven-team entry when the Commercial Softball League launches its 1969 season Tuesday, May 20.

Aside from setting the opening date, last night's second league organizational meeting at the Armouries dealt mainly with player eligibility.

Of prime concern was how the league plans to allow players who participated in senior-class softball last year to join Commercial clubs.

President Bill Vallance polled the representatives from the prospective league entries for the verdict that Bob Ebbire, Wayne Wood, Carl Boomhower, Ralph Plane, Larry Mavety, Bill Barberstock, Bob McAlpine, Gerry St. Denis, and Joe Clapp will be considered eligible for Commercial League competition this year. It was agreed that any additional players desirous of playing in the league will have to forward their request in writing to the league. Others may be forthcoming, due to the reported folding of the four-team Trent Valley loop.

Entry fee deadline was set for a May 7 meeting, at which time club representatives will determine how the new players will be allotted among the various entries.

Prospective league teams at present are the Ellis Juniors, Corby's, and Stinson's, Belvedere, Point Anne, City Hotel, and Black Diamond from last year's six-team loop. Brant's Body Shop is the only 1968 league member not represented at league meetings to date.

Borrow Stadium for Win

For White Sox, Home Is Where the Heart Is

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago White Sox played their first of 11 transplanted home games in Milwaukee County Stadium Wednesday night with Gary Peters scattering six hits and Buddy Bradford rapping a three-run homer in a 7-1 victory over California Angels.

A crowd of 8,565 paid to watch the game in 41-degree weather.

In nine home-away-from-home games at Milwaukee last season, the White Sox never drew less than 20,000 fans. The numbers inspired a return for 1969 and two new teams added two more games to the Milwaukee schedule.

Elsewhere in the American League Thursday, Baltimore Orioles edged Detroit Tigers 3-2 in 10 innings, Kansas City Royals nipped Seattle Pilots 4-3, Minnesota Twins topped Oakland Athletics 7-6 and Washington Senators whacked Boston Red Sox 8-2. New York's game at Cleveland was postponed by cold weather.

The Angels pushed across a first-inning run against Peters but nothing more. Chicago got that one back with none to spare in the fourth when Bradford's third home run of the year produced three runs.

Hits by Sandy Alomar and Carlos May produced another run in the fifth and Chicago wrapped it up with three more in the seventh, two of them scoring on a single by Luis Aparicio.

Mark Belanger, whose two-run homer had tied the game for the Orioles earlier, won it for Baltimore with a 10th-inning single against Denny McLain. That scored Ellie Hendricks, who had opened the 10th with a double, ending a string of 21 consecutive batters retired by McLain.

Mike Cuellar allowed five hits in the first three innings and nothing after that to gain his first American League victory for the Orioles.

Chuck Harrison rapped a two-run pinch single in the bottom of the ninth that gave Kansas City its victory over Seattle.

Jerry Adair, whose Inside-the-park homer had given the Royals their first run in the seventh, started the winning rally with a one-out single. Pinch hitter Bob Taylor doubled and then Harrison delivered the runs with his single.

Astros' Skid Stops at Seven

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Larry Dierker and Jerry Koosman have written off a couple of embarrassing numbers and replaced them with zeros.

Dierker braked Houston Astros' seven-game skid Wednesday night with a two-hit 4-0 triumph over San Diego Padres while Koosman cut a pre-game 9.00 earned run average down to size by hurling New York Mets past Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0.

Don Sutton, who started the day with a 7.04 ERA, spotted Cincinnati three early runs, then stopped the Reds cold in pitching Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-3 victory in the only other National League action.

The Atlanta-San Francisco, St. Louis-Chicago and Philadelphia-Montreal games were rained out.

The Astros ended their losing streak as Dierker, 2-2, held San Diego hitless after the third inning. The Houston right-hander gave up an infield single by Ed Spiezio in the second and a single by Roberto Pena in the third, then retired 14 Padres in order.

Norm Miller doubled in the first inning and scored the only run Dierker needed on a single by Curt Blefary. A walk, singles by Miller and Joe Morgan and a balk by reliever Frank Reberger gave the Astros two more runs in the sixth. Another scored in the eighth on a bases-loaded walk to Miller.

Koosman, a 19-game winner for the Mets as a rookie last year, scattered five hits on the way to his first 1969 victory after two setbacks. The shutout lowered the left-hander's ERA to 4.61.

Wednesday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching—Larry Dierker, Astros, pitched a two-hitter, retiring 14 consecutive batters after one stretch as Houston Astros ended a seven-game losing streak by beating San Diego Padres 4-0.

Batting—Mark Belanger, Orioles, tagged a two-run homer and drove in Baltimore's winning run with a 10th-inning single that beat Detroit Tigers 3-2.

Lakers Win by Basket

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry West, hitting from all angles, scored 53 Wednesday night leading his Los Angeles Lakers to a 120-118 victory over Boston Celtics in the first game of the National Basketball Association championship final.

West scored 17 of his points in the final quarter when the Lakers trailed by seven points with 10 minutes to play in a hard-fought battle which saw the lead change hands 21 times.

John Havlicek scored 27 for the losers but only seven came in the final quarter which saw 35-year-old Sam Jones pace the Celtic attack with 13.

A crowd of 17,554, largest ever to watch a basketball game in the Forum, saw the Lakers take their 1-0 edge in the best-of-seven series.

Elgin Baylor contributed 24 as he and Jerry kept the Lakers in the game during the first quarter with 10 and 15 respectively.

Bill Russell and the Celtics battled back time and time again but at no time led by more than seven points.

Russell hauled down 27 rebounds to 22 for his lout-time rival Wilt Chamberlain. Russell scored 18 points and Chamberlain 15.

Paper Says Trudeau Will Curb Spending

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says Prime Minister Trudeau has declared his government will introduce no more spending programs without making equivalent cutbacks in some other area of services.

In an Ottawa interview with the Telegram's political editor, Fraser Kelly, and Ottawa bureau chief Peter Thompson, Mr. Trudeau said all levels of government had gone beyond their depth in spending. The prime minister said the federal government had been helped to that position by a series of minority governments.

"There is a limit. And paradoxically I think that we are only beginning to discover it."

Expenditures now are beginning to rise at a much faster rate than revenues, Mr. Trudeau said. In retrospect, it was strange that it took so many years to reach this point.

"A country can always do more by borrowing more, or by taxing more, but what we failed to sense was that while this was theoretically true, there would be a point beyond which borrowing or taxing would be counter-productive."

Stanfield Attacks Trudeau

PM's Policy Called 'Fortress America' Concept

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield says Prime Minister Trudeau has embraced a "fortress America" concept of foreign and defence policy.

And he charges the prime minister with trying to mislead and confuse the Canadian people on matters affecting military policy.

Mr. Stanfield delivered a stinging attack Wednesday in the Commons against the government's plan, announced by Mr. Trudeau April 3, to keep Canada in NATO but reduce Canadian military commitments in Europe by an as-yet unspecified amount.

He spoke after the prime minister, in a lively exposition of government plans in the external affairs field, announced major new Canadian initiatives both, on disarmament and foreign aid. Mr. Trudeau did not go into detail.

The prime minister, opening a two-day foreign policy debate, moved a resolution calling on the House to support the government's NATO decision.

He said western Europe's increased capability of defending itself "reduces the present need for a sustained Canadian military contribution."

At present, Canada maintains an air division and a mechanized infantry brigade in Europe, a total of about 10,000 men.

Both Mr. Stanfield and New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas moved amendments to the government resolution, which will be voted on as the debate winds up today.

The Conservative opposition chief's amendment condemns the government's "retreat from internationalism to isolationism."

Mr. Douglas's amendment attacks the government from the opposition position: For failing to announce a complete Canadian military withdrawal from Europe, not demanding a reassessment of NATO's role as a condition for continued Canadian membership, and not re-channelling defence expenditures into foreign aid.

The NDP leader said Canada is going along with a NATO commitment "because of ear ingrained habit of tagging along behind the U.S. or Great Britain or both."

By committing itself to membership in NATO and NORAD, Canada was limiting its ability to deal effectively with its other foreign obligations.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the government's decision to re-deploy forces from Europe to North America will not save five cents," though he made clear he favored the principle of withdrawal.

Peace and justice in the world, which Mr. Trudeau had said he was seeking, were worthy objectives.

"Before we go preaching this to the world, though, we must set it up at home," said Mr. Caouette.

Mr. Stanfield said the prime minister has "properly" rejected neutralism for Canada.

Why then, he asked, does the prime minister wish to downgrade the broader alliance of NATO and bring Canada into more intimate association with the North American defence partnership—"and to do so probably at a greater financial cost and at the cost of some influence in a broader sphere?"

He went on:

"At this point we come face to face with the truth about the prime minister's philosophy in this regard. His concept is a 'fortress America' concept. It contains two ideas which most Canadians long ago rejected — isolationism and continentalism."

Mr. Trudeau told the House that, apart from the United States, Canada is the only NATO member which is carrying out an extensive NATO military role on two continents."

Canada's military presence in Europe was more important from a political than from a military point of view.

NATO's role in the search for a n East-West understanding was one of the compelling reasons why Canada remained a member.

Canada, Mr. Trudeau said, must "imaginatively and resolutely" pursue arms control and disarmament agreements.

"It is the intention of this government that our foreign policy should provide a growing investment of intellectual resources in this important area. . . . We think that our defence policy decisions are consistent with this scheme of priorities."

Reporters Stranded At Arctic Outpost

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A weary group of reporters rejoined Governor-General Roland Michener's touring party here late Wednesday night after being stranded for almost a day in Cape Dorset, and the vice-regal party made plans to go ahead today with a visit to Pangnirtung.

The group of eight stranded reporters left for the Cape before the Governor-General's plane and was able to land before heavy cloud and fog covered the area.

The weather, combined with a meagre take-off area, prevented the group of reporters from taking off until late in the day and they didn't arrive back in Frobisher until almost 11 p.m. EST.

There is no air strip at Dorset, 200 miles northeast of here on Baffin Island, and planes landing and taking off on skis on the snow-covered area have hills and cliffs to contend with.

The group made five take-off attempts and could not clear the cliffs but was successful on the sixth try.

Meanwhile, the Governor-General's party that returned here shortly after noon without landing at Dorset, continued its tour of Frobisher Bay and attended Tuesday Tyme activities in the evening.

Tuesday Tyme is an annual celebration in this predominantly Eskimo community, marking the end of winter in the Eastern Arctic.

The 69-year-old Governor-General, making a 9,000-mile, 11-day tour of the Eastern Arctic and Keewatin district, was to be stalled as chief honorary tuesik.

A fur-garbed man wearing an Eskimo mask, representing tuesik, presented Governor-General Michener with a scroll marking his installation.

The Governor-General, who presented a trophy in a beauty contest, which chose the Tuesik Tyme queen, also received a soapstone carving of a walrus.

How Many Know How to Live?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts At Large:

People complain of their busy-ness, that "there is so much to be done" that we do not have "time to live" — but how many, relieved of this busy-ness, would take time to live, would know what it is, would become more than they are now, rather than less? Leisure, to be tolerble, calls for more talent than work does.

• • •

What we define as "history" is mostly a record written by the winners, whose version of events has become standardized, while the losers' story is buried in the debris of conquest or annihilation.

To pursue at the same time policies of armament and disarmament, as we are doing, is as futile and contradictory as trying to find a common cure for malaria while engaging in separate research to breed new species of malaria-carrying mosquitoes at the same time.

• • •

It is a sign of national megalomania (as George Orwell points out) that each country colors the world map with its own territory and possessions in red.

• • •

Speaking of Orwell, I am going through the new four volumes of his collected letters, essays and journalism, and heartily recommend them to every journalism and "communications" school in the country, both for clarity of writing and honesty of mind.

• • •

Perhaps the most pregnant passage in modern writing is compressed in one paragraph of Bonhoeffer's "Ethics," where he says: "The demand for absolute liberty brings men to the depths of slavery. The master of the machine becomes its slave. The creature turns against its creator in a strange reenactment of the Fall. The emancipation of the masses leads to the reign of terror of the guillotine. Nationalism leads inevitably to war. The liberation of man as an absolute ideal leads only to

A haberdasher tells me an interesting fact: men with chubby necks keep getting shirts with collars a half-size too tight, in the mistaken notion that this will give them a slimmer look, whereas it does exactly the opposite — a loose collar makes the neck look smaller.

• • •

Young people searching for their "real self" must learn the real self is not something one finds as much as it is something one makes; and it is one's daily actions that shape the inner personality far more permanently than any amount of introspection or intellection.

Nigeria Expects Civil War to Range Another Five Years

LAGOS (AP) — The end of the Nigerian civil war is not in sight despite the reported capture Wednesday of Umuahia, Biafra's provisional capital.

One high-ranking Nigerian officer said he expects five more years of fighting before federal forces subdue the Ibo tribesmen of Eastern Nigeria who seceded from the federation May 30, 1967.

The Biafrans are expected to make their capital now in Orlu, 36 miles northwest of Umuahia. It is near the two airstrips by which they receive arms and other supplies.

In addition to pockets of resistance behind the lines of the federal troops that took Umuahia, the Biafrans say they control three-quarters of Owerri, 30 miles west of Umuahia. The federal 3rd Marine Division took the town last October but authorities in Lagos now admit one brigade is isolated there.

Federal military authorities said their troops still are fighting around Umuahia. If the fighting continues, it would represent a change in the pattern following the fall of other Biafran centres since the war started 22 months ago.

Invariably the fall of a major town had meant a pause as the Nigerians waited for the Biafrans to surrender and went about re-supplying their forces.

There is no anticipation in Lagos of a Biafran surrender. The secessionists last Sunday rejected an appeal from the Organization of African Unity to agree to a united Nigeria before starting peace talks and a ceasefire.

The Nigerians say they have pushed the Biafrans into a tightening circle of about 2,000 square miles, compared with the 29,000 square miles Biafra claimed when it declared itself independent. But despite the advance of the 1st Federal Division to Umuahia from the northeast, two other federal divisions have been unable to report any advances.

The fall of Umuahia is, nonetheless, a serious blow to the Biafran cause. It had been the capital since the Nigerians took Enugu in October, 1967.

Federal authorities said the Biafran defences wilted under heavy bombardment after a 48-hour fight. The Nigerians have plenty of artillery while the Biafrans rely largely on home-made mortars.

A government statement said Biafran losses of men and equipment were severe and federal losses were light. No mention was made of the thousands of civilian refugees who had flocked to the area.

Robarts Reluctant to Appoint Political Foes as Delegates

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts said Wednesday he wouldn't mind if Ontario opposition leaders attended the June constitutional conference in Ottawa, but he wasn't anxious to have them among his official delegation.

"I would have no objection to inviting you as observers," he said in the legislature to Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Donald MacDonald, leader of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Nixon noted that Prime Minister Trudeau had said there would be no objection to individual provinces bringing opposition members, not merely as observers but as part of their official delegations.

Mr. Robarts said he would consider the possibilities, but he thought it "would pose certain difficulties." He said he would write to Mr. Trudeau and other provincial premiers to get their views.

Mr. MacDonald, promising not to interfere in provincial strategy sessions, said:

"The leader of the Opposition and I could go out for tea when you have your secret strategy session."

The June 11-13 meeting is to be a working conference where, unlike two previous federal-provincial conferences, civil servants may take an active part in discussion along with the prime minister and the premiers. The sessions are to be closed to the press.

In other business Wednesday:

—Premier Robarts said a study of 50 Ontario lakes has not revealed "any specific cause for alarm" about levels of the insecticide DDT in Ontario waters, but he said its presence in some of the lakes is "a matter of real concern." He said the province is co - operating with the U.S. in a program to test pesticide concentrations in the Great Lakes.

—Mines Minister Allan Lawrence said his department has ordered a portable monitor to test gas concentrations at International Nickel Co. Ltd.'s smelter at Copper Cliff where workers have complained of sulphur dioxide emissions.

He said department engineers never have found a constant concentration of gases in the smelter that would endanger health in the working areas.

—The legislature opened debate on second reading—approval in principle—of a bill to create a single city at the Lakehead. Fort William and Port Arthur would be amalgamated in the new city.

—Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said he was not satisfied with the treatment of drunks in the provincial courts.

Airline Talks Resume

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada and striking ground employees Wednesday agreed to resume direct negotiations today but the airline's pilots' association complained about being placed "off duty without pay."

Mike Pitchford, president of the International Association of Machinists, said renewed negotiation was "a good sign."

Company and union negotiators met briefly at the same bargaining table with a federal mediator Wednesday night.

The ground employees have been on strike since midnight Sunday for higher pay.

The airline has offered a 21-per-cent wage increase over three years but the machinists have asked for 30 per cent on a one-year contract.

Earlier Wednesday, the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association filed a grievance with Air Canada because 1,100 of its members were placed on "off-duty status without pay" as a result of the strike.

A spokesman for the association said about 6,000 non-union employees of the airline were still being paid full salary.

Air Canada said it is normal procedure to place all unionized employees "off duty without pay" in the event of a strike.

The company's 6,300 mechanics, storemen and maintenance men grounded Air Canada's fleet of 108 aircraft when they walked off the job Sunday.

Labor and management teams of negotiators had been working on separate floors of a downtown hotel and labor department officials had been acting as go-between until the parties agreed to meet face-to-face Wednesday.

Federal mediator Bernard Wilson said earlier Wednesday there had been "some movement both ways" since mediation began Monday and a number of points had been agreed upon.

However Mike Rygus, vice-president of the machinists' union, said the two sides were still far apart on the question of money.

Mr. Rygus said the question of "work jurisdiction" was also a long way from being settled. Work jurisdiction involves the introduction of new methods which could possibly put some union members out of work.

"We're not trying to resist change," he said. "We're trying to protect the opportunities for advancement in the job."

Senator Backs Bill On Drugs

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Daniel Lang (L—Ontario) said Wednesday a government bill aimed at reducing prescription drug prices in Canada by increasing competition will allow Canadians the advantages enjoyed by citizens of other countries.

PSI Vetoes Role as 'Post Office for Federal Medicare'

TORONTO (CP) — Physicians Services Inc., Ontario's doctor-operated health insurance plan that covers about 1,800,000 subscribers, announced Wednesday it has declined an invitation from the provincial government to participate in the federal medical care scheme.

Dr. O. M. Miller, president of the 21-year-old non-profit group, said at a news conference PSI could play no meaningful role as an agent for the plan.

He said under the "rigid structure" of federal legislation governing the national scheme, PSI would have no authority, serving only as a "post office" or "way station, if you like."

He said PSI was asked if it could assume a carrier role in mid-March by Ontario Health Minister Matthew Dymond.

"Ontario has not announced a date for participation in the national plan but Mr. Dymond said earlier this month proposals had been made to some health insurance carriers concerning their possible role in the plan.

Dr. Dymond said in an interview Wednesday he was surprised at PSI's decision.

"Their decision is not really expected. I had believed PSI would do as carriers in other provinces have done and fall in line."

He said the decision did not necessarily hamper government plans for possible Ontario entry into the plan, but he declined to give details.

PSI, with a staff of 365 and 1,830,214 subscribers, is second in size only to the Ontario Medical Services Plan, the government-operated scheme which has about 3,000,000 participants.

Two other non-profit plans operate in the province-Windsor Medical Services with an estimated 200,000 to 300,000 subscribers in Essex and Kent Counties, and Associated Medical Services with about 300,000 participants.

In addition, there are a variety of county co-operatives which also offer non-profit plans.

Dr. Miller said he has arranged to meet soon with Dr. Dymond to outline the group's position and determine how best to proceed with implementation of a national scheme.

He said he would want to assure that PSI subscribers continue to receive coverage during any changeover. He said subscribers who belong to PSI's $,-000 group plans would have the option of being absorbed by OMSIP or "some other medical care plan of their choosing."

The fate of PSI itself would depend on legislation Ontario implements to enter the national plan, Dr. Miller said.

If PSI is permitted to do so under new legislation, it would revert to providing extended benefits not covered by the national plan, such as insurance to cover payments of private hospital rooms, nursing services and, possibly, dental care.

This would reduce PSI to a "very small organization," Dr. Miller said.

Dr. Millar said both PSI and the provincial government were caught "in a bind" between the need to conform to federal rules under medical care and provincial fiscal responsibility.

Plan for College

By KEN WEEBES

Everyone knows that post high school education is becoming more and more essential. Advanced training of some form is becoming mandatory.

Unfortunately, Canada does not yet enjoy free education, nor will it in the foreseeable future. As a result, the costs of higher education are still faced by many families.

The cost of post high school education will vary depending upon the institution the student attends and other circumstances. However, a rough estimate for one year at university would include fees $400; room and board $600; books $100; clothes $200; and misclaneous $300; for a total yearly cost of between $1300 and $1500. Then a four-year course will cost about $6,000 while a seven-year course will cost about $10,000.

To have this amount of money available when needed requires careful planning several years before the expense actually occurs. Most of the cost of education still falls on the parents and they should provide for the cost when the potential student is still young.

Many banks, insurance companies, trust companies and so on have developed systematic savings plans for education. One chartered bank, for example, has set up a plan whereby monthly payments of $25 a month beginning five years before university and continuing for nine years will pay to the student four annual amounts of $1,000. Of course, if the monthly payments begin earlier, they will be smaller.

Some parents invest one lump sum of money when a child is born. By the time the student reaches the university age the fund may supply sufficient funds to cover their expenses. Many families deposit their family allowance cheques in special accounts and allow them to accumulate. Accumulated over 18 years, they go a long way toward financing university.

Proper planning well in advance of university entrance lightens the load considerably.

In many cases, however, this advanced planning was not made and the family is now faced with heavy education costs. If the student is average or above average in ability and has a real need he should apply for a bursary, grant or scholarship. Each year many dollars are made available in this manner. These funds are available from a variety of sources including universities, labor unions and other organizations.

Many firms offer the children of their employees grants to assist them in education. Also, various service organizations provide grants and scholarships to deserving students.

The federal Government provides funds under the Canada Students' Loan Plan. These loans are for a maximum $1,000 a year for five years. The government pays the interest on these loans until six months after the student graduates. Contact the Department of Education in your province or your local bank manager for more information.

Many banks, credit unions and so on will lend money for university expenses. Various methods of repayment are possible.

Many students are able to earn a substantial amount through summer work and part-time employment during the school term. Most educational authorities would agree that 10 or 12 hours a week for work will not be a hardship on most students. In many cases, it can be beneficial providing a break from studying.

Another alternative is for the student to work a year or two after high school before going to university. Not only will h'e able to save enough to finance at least one year of school, but also gain the benefit of work experience.

There are many sources of funds for capable students but often you have to search to find them. Begin by contacting your high school, college, bank manager and Department of Education. Also investigate if funds are available through your employer, church, union and similar organizations.

No child, in today's society, who has the necessary ability and desire needs to give up higher education because of lack of funds.

Gananoque Coroner Rebuked by Cotnam

KINGSTON (CP) — Ontario chief coroner Dr. H. B. Cotnam Wednesday refused a claim by coroner Dr. Kenneth Gray of Leeds County that his neutral role prevented him from asking questions at an inquest Monday into the deaths of three Kingston residents.

Dr. Cotnam said in a telephone interview from Toronto that "generally speaking, that is what a coroner is there for, to ask questions pertinent and relevant to the inquest."

A coroner's jury at Gananoque, Ont., ruled Monday night that the drownings of Mr. and Mrs. James Nairn, both 54, and Ruby Blasko, 45, after a car rolled off a ferry on the St. Lawrence River March 16, were accidental.

Dr. Gray said Tuesday he was disappointed with the inquest.

He said he did not try to draw out answers because he preferred to remain neutral when a Crown attorney is conducting an inquest.

Dief Foresees Radical Protest

REGINA (CP) — Deep western resentment will prompt federal government policies is bound to lead to radical protest actions, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Wednesday.

Many Prairie farmers have justifiably lost hope that the present federal government will recognize their grievances, Mr. Diefenbaker said in an interview. That hopelessness leads to fear and desperation measures.

"When you get to that point, there will always be radical plans developing.

"I don't call it separatism, but there is a deep sense of resentment building up in the West."

French Battled Close

Uncommitted To Decide Fate Of Referendum

PARIS (CP) — President Charles de Gaulle, who has threatened to resign if his referendum is defeated Sunday, is pressing his biggest oratorical guns into the battle for what would be the decisive prize in a seemingly-close fight—France's uncommitted voters.

Gaullist officials are reported to be predicting victory for the general but by a slim margin.

Elsewhere—though on the basis of opinion measurements taken earlier this week—the anti-Gaullist cause was said by one poll to have gained a slim lead among committed Frenchmen.

But the number of undecided voters is considered to be large and the electoral state of mind possibly subject to vital switches between now and the voting day.

Top Gaullists, making much of a belief that their leader's personal prestige is holding steady, were quoted Wednesday as saying that the anti-Gaullist cause may have reached its peak at the beginning of this week.

Ready for oratorical action is de Gaulle himself. And his Friday night television appearance promises to be crucial to the Sunday vote on his program for vesting more power in the country's regions and for re-organizing the Senate.

Tonight: Premier Maurice Couve de Murville goes on TV, one day after a significant appeal for support of de Gaulle broadcast by a previous premier, Georges Pompidou.

Though Pompidou's expressions of loyalty had a resounding ring, some observers insisted on viewing them against the background of his status as a possible presidential successor to de Gaulle if Frenchmen vote "No" on Sunday and the general quits.

Thinking that the former prime minister is available, voters might not be as inclined as they had been previously to take fright at de Gaulle's predictions of chaos if the present chief of state leaves the Elysee Palace.

Instant Beams Can Be Glued to Ceilings

A room is a total enclosure — with access on the word total. When planning an interior design, the total concept must be envisioned. True, one starts with a floor plan, but walls and ceilings must be included in total planning.

To improve many of the uninspired rooms in new buildings, attention should be directed toward products which can answer some of today's architectural voids.

No one wants to live in a plain white box, regardless of how spacious it is. Modern dwellings that effect a stark white look rely on the huge expanse of windows which incorporate the exterior landscape into the interior design, using white walls as a field to reflect the beauty of the grounds.

For the more conventional structures in the newly-built, stripped - down interiors, ways must be sought to beautify the interior and incorporate structural interests which too often have been omitted.

One answer can be the polyurethane instant beams which are light in weight and a cinch to install. Four feet long, they weigh a mere 24 ounces and can be glued on in a manner of minutes. The beams come either in Colonial or Mediterranean styling and lend themselves to an infinite number of design arrangements.

Both finishes, aged oak and aged walnut, bleed into almost any design theme. They retail at approximately seven dollars a beam. Incorporated into their design are weather-checks, adze marks, saw cuts and splits for a mellow, hand-hewn appearance. When instant beams are up, they are literally indiscernible from the forest variety.

It isn't necessary to 'beam' an entire room to achieve an architectural motif. For example, three ceiling beams can shorten the look of a long, narrow hallway. Two beams, cut to two-feet each, can frame a ceiling chandelier. The beams are easily shortened, angled or mitred. They can be cut with a simple bread knife.

A tube of adhesive comes with each beam plus full instructions for gluing up — an extremely simple procedure.

The ceiling or wall is marked with a pencil where the beam is to go. In fact, the beam can be held in place and an outline traced. Glue is applied to the beam in a thin line. The beam is then held into place long enough to transfer some of the glue to the surface, removed to let the glue set a minute, and then permanently placed. The effect is handsome.

Instant beams are available in two styles — the Colonial with a double dowel design at each end, and the Mediterranean with a bolt design giving a hand-hammered look.

For large scale installations, 6" to 16" length beams are available. Instant beams because of their short length are however, easy for homemaker to handle herself. Virtually, architectural miracles can be achieved with these unique new beams.

Featherweight Beams

Featherweight beams of rigid polyurethane foam weigh only 24 oz. each. Available in standardized 4' length, for easy handling, they can be butted together to form an endless variety of ceiling and wall design.

Patio: A Wide Appeal

Probably no home-improvement prospect has such wide appeal as, installing an outdoor patio. It can add much to family (and guests') pleasure during the pleasant outdoorsy months.

The handyman householder or professional has the choice of many building materials.

Slender concrete patio block is available in sizes and colors that lend themselves to many pattern combinations. A mixture of sizes achieve a flagstone effect, while units in different colors create a checkerboard pattern.

In installing a patio, its boundaries are marked off and the soil is excavated to a depth that will accommodate a 2-inch layer of sand with the concrete blocks laid on top.

With patios abutting the house, a slope of about 1 inch per 15 feet will assure proper rain run-off. Some installers lay blocks on edge around the patio boundaries before leveling off the sand and laying the blocks in a preplanned pattern, starting from one corner.

Home Builders To Discuss Subdivisions

Members of the Quinte Home Builders' Association and the Quinte Construction Association will be asked to meet with the public utilities commission to discuss costs of street lighting in all electric sub-divisions.

The Utilities is asking the cost of special street lighting in such sub-divisions be included in the sub-dividers' agreement.

The PUC request was presented to city council two weeks ago and was tabled to allow the Quinte Home Builders' Association express their view.

Yesterday Association president Albert Horlock said that the suggested additional costs would be a direct cost to the home buyer and would have to be taken care of by increased down payments at the time of purchase.

"People just cannot afford these additional costs," he said.

However, if the request of the PUC was granted Mr. Horlock asked that conventional "old style" overhead wiring box and poles be used to alleviate additional costs to the purchaser.

He said the Quinte Home Builders' were desperately trying to hold the line in housing costs and requested that council do everything in its power to help.

Keeping Out Moisture

The plant sitter is one idea of many offered in a new booklet for garden enthusiasts. Here, the moisture-vapor proof film actually "babysits" with your house plants keeping soil moist while you're away.

Flatware

Zingy Designs Appeal to Young Moderns

Today's young individualist often finds herself caught between opposite poles in her choice of tableware.

Should she make the "safe" choice of, for instance, gold-banded china — the kind her mother used, and many of her friends choose when they marry—or can she trust her own sense of taste and style enough to try something a little different? And what about glassware? Traditional crystal is elegant — but the fashion excitement of the new designs is tempting indeed. Most importantly, what choice shall be made in flatware?

It's no wonder the bride-to-be is often in a quandary when it comes to selecting tableware especially when well-meaning friends and relatives are quick to offer their own opinions. At this time, it's a wise girl who considers not only her choice of the moment, but the possible change in both her attitudes and style of living in the future.

By far the one most important selection she'll make is that of flatware, which is the most lasting of the three table accessories. The great majority of brides still prefer sterling silver, according to statistics. There are good reasons for this choice, and they have little to do with the excuse that "That's what mother has." In fact, many brides buying sterling this year are the first in the family to have it. They want sterling, first of all, because of its beauty — and no other metal can approach the rich, lustrous look or the luxurious weight of solid silver. Its great intrinsic value as a precious metal is certainly another plus factor, especially in these days of fluctuating prices. Sterling's durability, too, is well-known, along with the fact that it actually increases in beauty over the years as it develops the tiny "use" lines that gradually form a soft, lovely patina.

Probably one of the best reasons for making sterling the first choice in flatware is a purely psychological one. Of all metals, it's the one that's "right" for every occasion — as much at home on a casually appointed table for two as at a formal dinner party. This is an important consideration, indeed, for there'll be any number of occasions coming up in the future when the bride will want the security which comes with knowing that her table is set with the best in flatware.

As far as pattern choice is concerned, no other flatware can offer the number and variety of designs found in solid silver. And at this point, it should be considered in relation to the second most important choice — china. Because the bride of today is so young, her taste in china is inclined to be timid. As a result, the most popular patterns, especially in fine china are very plain. The gold or platinum band and the scroll border designs are far and away the number one choices.

But isn't it quite possible to make not one but two choices in china? To have the traditional, elegant pattern for formal entertaining, and the contemporary, even far-out designs featured in much of today's earthenware, for a more playful mood?

Home Duty Has Hidden Virtues

— When you reach up to dust a high shelf or wash the woodwork, stand on toes and stretch body upwards. This is good for ankles, legs, posture.

Scrubbing floors with gusto helps firm up arms, shoulders, back, stomach, waistline.

Washing dishes firms arms and upper back.

— When sweeping, pull your stomach in, hold your shoulders back. Swing broom with long, free movements so you can feel the pull at your waistline.

Grab handle of broom at each end, stand with feet apart, raise broom high and stretch up. Then lower broom and repeat this over and over. Add a few stretches each day. When you can do it 15 times, you'll be in the winner's circle.

If you are an aspiring singer, vocalize while you are vacuuming under the bed, or leaning over in some other "awkward" position. Not easy, but wonderful exercise: builds those important diaphragm muscles. Then when you have to take a G over high C you will have trained for it.

So many "hidden virtues" in home improving!

Try These Ideas

Lunch Box, Planter Have Common Item

What do your husband's lunch box, your freezer and your garden have in common? Answer: Success in all three can depend on the use of a moisture-vapor proof plastic film.

In the lunch box and the freezer of course; but in the garden — you ask? Why not? Try some of these ideas from a new booklet for gardeners prepared with special consultation from C. G. Milne, garden editor of the Indianapolis Star.

This plastic film can "babysit" for your house plants while you are on vacation or away from home for any period of time.

To keep pot soil from drying out while you're away, wrap a clay pot, or other types of containers, in a large sheet of plastic film.

Smooth wrap to pot sides and gather up excess wrap at top. Clinch loosely around plant base. Do not seal off soil surface completely as plant roots need some air.

If you water the soil thoroughly before you use the wrap and then place the wrapped pot in a semi-shaded and cool spot, soil moisture should be optimum for several weeks.

Propagation techniques vary among gardeners. However, one popular method is "Chinese air-layering." This novel method of rooting extra-large stem cuttings while they are still attached to the "Mother" plant is an ancient Chinese practice. Practically any type of woody shrub, tree or house plant can be propagated by this method.

Essential to successful Chinese air-layering is a stout, see-through bandage to hold moist sphagnum moss in place and this plastic film works beautifully.

More detailed instructions are available in the booklet.

These ideas and dozens more such as how to deal with slow roses that bloom too early and how to make a mini™ green house, are available in this new booklet.

Porch Is 'Somethin Else'

A porch needn't be a cramped, "tacked-on" hideaway for old furniture. This porch features panelled walls, exposed beams, wall-to-wall carpeting, central vacuum cleaner system and even air conditioning for muggy days. The key, however, is the series of casement windows on three sides of the porch — to catch the breezes and expand the view. The windows are units with maintenance-free, vinyl-clad sash and insulating glass.

Porch Can Be Asset

A porch needn't be a poor relation. It can be one of the richest assets of your home.

The facilities which a year-round porch can provide are limited only by your family needs. It can serve as: a sun-room, a reading, writing or TV room, a work or hobby room, a room for informal dining and entertaining, a study or play room for youngsters.

But, this type of many-purposed porch for all seasons does require certain features. It should be roomy, appropriately furnished and easy to maintain. Most important, it should combine indoor comfort and weather protection with the "feeling" of an outdoor room.

Windows are the key to a successful indoor - outdoor room. A leading window manufacturer recommends awning or casement-type windows for porches because they permit maximum ventilation. Used in bays, gliding or casement windows also give an expansive outdoor view and admit an abundance of natural light.

Another hint is to use welded insulating glass in the windows, which eliminates the need for storm sash. Insulating glass assures year-round comfort and reduces maintenance chores.

Painting of sash can also be eliminated by sound advance planning. One line of windows, for example, has a rigid vinyl sheathing over the preservative-treated wood core. The combination of vinyl-clad wood sash and insulating glass results in a maintenance—free window.

The low - maintenance approach should also include flooring, wall coverings, table tops, upholstery and fabrics.

Use of Hand Creams Advised for Housewives

The wear and tear that cleaning and fix-it chores inflict on skin are perhaps the most common complaint of men as well as the ladies. Fortunately, the skin on hands responds very quickly to treatment. Dry skin soaks up moisture like a sponge! Hangnails and cuticles also react fast to the lubrication of oils and creams.

Did you know that the water content of your skin normally is 56 to 72 per cent? Chapping may occur any time the relative humidity of the environment drops below 60 per cent.

Research specialists explain that the emollients in a good hand cream will restore skin to suppleness and smoothness because the oils lubricate inflexible dry tissue. In addition, they advise that constant use of nourishing hand creams and hand lotions will hinder the evaporation of moisture and oils, and help protect your skin against parching and aging.

So when wear and tear from housework and home improvement jobs make the skin burn and toughen, remember that your skin is thirsty for moisture and usually needs softening with oils. Burning is a stage of the chapping process, one chemist explains. He suggests that medicated hand cream, as well as hand cream made especially for extra dry skin, will bring helpful relief.

An important idea for men as well as women is to apply hand cream thickly, as if it were a glove.

PROVIDE PROTECTION

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The Norton Co. says it has developed a boron carbide composite which can be used as armor plate to protect aircraft from .50-calibre bullets, the company said. Armor previously used provided protection only from .32-calibre bullets, the company said.

"You Don't Pay Extra For Quality, Because Quality Pays For Itself"

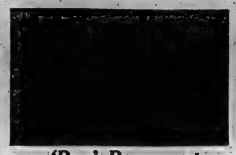
257 FRONT ST. BELLEVILLE DIAL 968-5706-7

Recreation: First 'Extra'

If your house doesn't have a recreation room, chances are you're planning one soon.

Surveys show that recreation rooms are among the first additions to be made in a house. The extra facilities are generally necessitated by a growing family. Both parents and children soon see the need for a room where youngsters can play and entertain their friends without interrupting the rest of the family. After children's hours, the rec room is also an ideal place for informal adult entertainment.

Setting up a recreation room is not difficult. The basement, if you have one, is a logical place. With a good clean-up, organization of storage facilities, and the right materials, you can transform the drab best basement into an attractive play - and - party room.



Almost by definition, a recreation room has certain requirements. It should be attractive, large enough for sizable gatherings, and easy to maintain. Fabrics and wall and floor coverings should be sturdy and washable. Facilities for food preparation and serving are also a good idea.

Here are some suggestions:

1. Take advantage of the attractive, low-maintenance building materials now on the market. For example, hardboard wall panelling is available in a wide range of beautiful finishes including rich-looking woodgrains, decorator colors, varied patterns, and unusual textures such as cane, burlap, basket weave and leather. The panels are easily applied with nails or easy-to-use adhesive to wood furring strips attached to the existing wall. They resist dents, mars and scuffs and can be sponged clean. Resilient floor tiles or even carpet tiles are ideal for "rec" room use. Some of these floorings also provide a measure of sound control.

2. Use easy - to - clean draperies and furniture slip covers — preferably the kind you can throw in the washing.

3. Provide adequate storage space for games, hobby equipment, and the like. One idea is to install some perforated hardboard wall panels. These have perforations for hooks from which to hang a variety of items, and beneath on which to mount shelves.

'Rec' Basement

Transformed from a cluttered basement, this spacious and attractive recreation room serves as an attractive play-room for youngsters, and a "clubroom" for teen-agers. It's also ideal for informal adult entertainment. Careful choice of building materials — like hardboard wall panelling in a handsome woodgrain finish — gives the room a warm, inviting look.

Instead of the Sun

Electric heat panels on ceilings make home living fresher, cleaner, safer; offers greater convenience, with controlled precision, according to designers.

Solar Heat: New Development

Thanks to newer and better ideas being developed to improve heating comfort, solar-inspired radiant heat is making our home living fresher, cleaner, safer, and more convenient, with controlled precision.

New electric heat panels have lifted the heat source from the floor to the ceiling. Panels are positioned above the eye level on the ceiling so inconspicuously as to be unnoticeable. But the controlled environmental comfort the panels provide is the paramount advantage of this new improved method of home heating.

The key to this new development is radiation. Loss of body heat in cold weather is often due to the radiation of our warmth to chillier objects. Colder objects around us gradually absorb our body warmth.

Taking a tip from the sun, new electric panels operate on the principle of solar radiation. Simply put, the sun shines down on people and the earth without warming the intervening air: objects are warmed first — then they warm the air. In the same manner, ceiling mounted panels, operating noiselessly, radiate from above. Everything in the room is warmed by the rays: chairs, tables, the floor, the walls, and the people in the room. Then the air warms. Installed near doors and windows where heat loss is greatest, the panels consequently reduce body heat loss.

The panels, measuring two feet by four, six or eight feet, depending on individual room heating requirements, may be positioned on or in the ceiling

Winter-weary Urbanite? Try A Flower Show!

Numerous flower shows have been scheduled around the country this season giving winter-weary urbanites a chance to indulge themselves in an early dose of spring fever.

If they are fore-sighted enough to carry a camera, they can take home on film not only new varities of rare and exotic blooms, but ideas for floral arrangements and landscaping too.

Cameras have become one of the gardener's most useful "tools."

All it takes besides your camera is color film, flashcubes, a close-up lens and a creative imagination to help you compose in the viewfinder just what you want to show.

As you're photographing plants, one of the points to remember is to check backgrounds. Are there distracting elements? Use your own background of colored art paper or use the sky as background if you're outdoors.

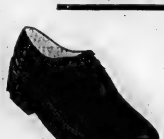
Try photographing the same scene from different angles and distances, starting with a long shot of the whole garden, followed by a medium shot and close-ups of especially interesting specimens. For this there are simple lenses that fit over your camera lens like filters and make it possible to get very close to the plant. The lenses come in different strengths, indicated by numbers such as 1, 2, or 3. The bigger the number the stronger the lens and closer you can get.

With close-up lenses, the subject must be at a given distance from the lens as indicated in the instructions with the lens. A tape measure or knotted cord is helpful. Tape it to the camera so that when extended it reaches the specified distance to put the subject in proper focus.

Exposure for close-ups is no problem. It's the same with close-up lenses as for any other subject of the same brightness in the same light.

At a flower show, an exhibit attending catering flowers provides a good opportunity to get the sparkle of "dew" on the petals, an effect that can be achieved at home with garden hose or sprinkling can.

Another device that adds interest is to vary your shots by including people in some . . . a child sniffing a rose, a pretty girl in a garden or a close up of a face and a flower.



At most flower shows, as well as other scenes indoors, you will want to use flash for most pictures. To avoid reflections, shoot at an angle to shiny surfaces, such as a mirror on which a floral arrangement rests.

Your camera dealer will have answers to specific questions.

Parlors, Music Rooms Are Out

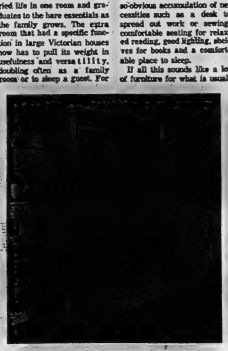
Rooms: Multi-purposes Now the Key to Using Living Space

Rooms can no longer afford just to sit there — and do only one thing. Neither can furniture. As our personal share of the world's square footage dwindles, we have arrived at the age of multiple - function and dual - purpose.

Libraries, music rooms, sewing rooms, day nurseries and parlors sound like relics of a long forgotten age to a generation who so often starts married life in one room and graduates to the bare essentials as the family grows. The extra room that had a specific function in large Victorian houses now has to pull its weight in usefulness and versatility, doubling often as a family room or to sleep a guest. For the family, make it a retreat where each member of the family can go for some relative peace, where a good book can be enjoyed without the distraction of television, where letters can be written, or housework done without interruption.

The multiplicity of today's "spare" room, furnished half for the family, half for the guest, is revealed in its decoration which should be a not-so-obvious accumulation of necessities such as a desk to spread out work or sewing, comfortable seating for relaxed reading, good lighting, shelves for books and a comfortable place to sleep.

If all this sounds like a lot of furniture for what is usually one of the smaller rooms in the house, remember that the walls can be put to work as well as the floor. Wall-hung furniture provide shelves, storage cabinets, drawers and working surfaces all within the framework of the vertical space in the room. An amazing number of books, records, papers and clothes can be stored without taking up any floor space at all. That leaves plenty of room for the space-taking pieces needed for seating and sleeping, such as the new day beds that are really comfortable for both functions, as well as the streamlined new sleep sofas.



If the "spare" room is sometimes used as a place where the adults can entertain another couple or two, there are low tables which nestle ottomans to roll out for extra seating, or cubes with tops for seating which reverse to a checkerboard and have loads of storage space inside. A beautiful weathered mahogany card table which slims to a 16-inch size when not in play is great.

Manufacturers have performed wonders in providing products for our physically reduced circumstances. It only remains for us to use them with imagination to suit each individual situation as the space - squeeze throws down the challenge.

Multiple Uses

Small spare room becomes guest room, sewing room, library and study all rolled into one with the use of double - duty furniture and wall - hung shelves and cabinets to make up for lack of floor space. Here Danish-designed bookshelves, storage cabinets, and drawer units provide a lot of storage and work space in a small area. Table folds down to make way for opening the convertible sofa when room is used by guests.

A Beautiful Sight

A beautiful sight. Everything in its place! The tiniest saucepot to the biggest aluminum roaster and Dutch oven are visible and handy on pull-out cabinet shelves. A remodeled kitchen could also boast a pan file for flat cookware and cutting boards.

No Kitchen Problem

Lucky you! Your kitchen is being remodelled and soon you'll be the proud possessor of the most elegant kitchen on the block.

But elegance doesn't happen in a day, and meanwhile the area that used to be your kitchen is a large shambles. No refrigerator, no stove, not even a kitchen sink. How do you get your family fed for a week without going broke at the local restaurant?

Here's the answer: a supply of canned foods, stacks of disposable paper tableware, an electric coffee pot and an electric aluminum skillet. Now you can turn out tasty, nutritious meals for the whole family even if you're cooking on top of the ping-pong table.

One dish meals are the simplest to prepare and the easiest to clean up after. A lively frankfurter and vegetable dish is just heated in the skillet and neatly served in plastic-coated paper bowls, one of the newest additions to the line of disposable paper tableware which have lightened the work load for so many.

Cardboard Carpentry: Do-it-yourself Plan

Cardboard Carpentry, a new concept originally developed for schools, now has turned into a full-fledged do-it-yourself project for home-owners.

The Design Laboratory of the Educational Development successfully tested Cardboard Carpentry in its experimental workshops for the past two years.

For schools, Cardboard Carpentry provides an easy way for children to make classroom equipment. For the home, the same advantages make it simple to construct furniture of all kinds. Desks, tables, cabinets are being built right in the home by even the unhandiest do-it-yourselfers.

Tri-Wall Pak, the patented, corrugated product, is light, strong, inexpensive, non-splintering and workable with the simplest wood-working tools.

The "cardboard" in Cardboard Carpentry Tri-Wall Pak actually is much stronger than cardboard and, because of its patented triple-wall construction, provides virtually the same strength as light wood. Furthermore, it can be painted and turned into attractive conversation pieces for any home.

Children as young as first-graders have worked successfully with Cardboard Carpentry. For that reason, it has become one of those rare projects on which the whole family really can work together.

Closet Dressing Rooms Are Becoming Popular Adjunct in New Housing

Closet-dressing rooms are becoming popular adjuncts in the newer houses and apartments. They can be most expressive of your individual tastes if you try decorating them with some of the new wallcoverings which are prepasted for ease of installation; washable (which is important in an area where there are grooming aids and cosmetics) and in some cases, strippable (removable in full width strips in seconds should you want to change the decorating scheme, which may be especially true in an apartment!)

Houndstooth checks, lowkey stripes, mural-like large scale animal patterns, OP arts, simulated wood grains and animal pelts are some of the masculine type patterns available in new collections. We blended as many as six different patterns to decorate a striking closet-dressing room for he-men. Various color combinations are available. Copper, orange, gold, brown and black are a mellow group which might appeal more to the average male. If tastes are on the flamboyant side, there are blue-green combinations, tiger stripes and wild OP art patterns to brighten the scene.

For feminine tastes, brilliant and bold florals abound in the new collections — poppies, miniprints, daisies and anemones — many co-ordinated with stripes or checks for unusual effects.

Prepasted wallcoverings by fashion-wise manufacturers make experimentation fun. Hatboxes, shoe boxes, shelves, frames, window shades and shadow boxes are among the items that can be covered with the bright, washable patterns. Storage pieces that have seen better days take on new life with an exterior and interior (don't forget the inside of drawers) application of wallcovering.

As one interior designer so aptly put it: "Probably the biggest decorating bargain today is in wallcoverings."

And certainly the closet-dressing room affords an excellent opportunity to try one's hand at decorating with wallcoverings. The large number of designs to choose from the relatively modest cost of quality wallcoverings, and their ease of installation, do make wallcoverings the logical choice for dramatizing these areas.

Antique Displayed

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — Three years of scrounging parts from across North America paid off for Vic Barber when he entered his 1915-model Ford in this community's 1968 Christmas parade. Originally owned by a man at Winnipegosis whose father bought it from the United States about 1918, the car was "one of the last brass cars," Barber said. Among the restored parts is a brass radiator which came from Milwaukee and front fenders which were obtained in Moose Jaw.

Decor for A Duo

Decorating in tandem instead of at random makes all the difference, when a teen-aged girl must share a room with her younger sister. Smoothing the way harmoniously is a plushy wall-to-wall carpet of acrylic fibre to tie the two areas of the room together. The bright color and ease of care of the carpet set the tone for colorful wipe-clean upholstered pieces; gaily painted storage space. The generation gap is closed by a divider panel, painted in hot colors to match furniture. Each girl has a feeling of privacy; yet the room is decorated as a coherent whole.

Dark Wood, General Hues Today's Trend in Decorating

The revival of old colors for both formal and informal traditional settings in today's news in home decorating, a national color authority asserts.

Margaret Hutchison, color stylist for a leading paint manufacturer, points out, "Dark, accented woodwork in informal rooms, and general hues from the elegant French Empire for formal areas, are two major trends."

Dark painted, accent woodwork in traditional colors such as deep gold, copper, russet, bronze olive and deep shades of blue and turquoise are authentic choices for today's informal Colonial, French Country or Mediterranean decor.

The accent woodwork — including trim, doors, beams, builtins, bookshelves, dados, cornices, even fireplaces —is set off by walls painted in light, natural colors such as antique white, bone or linen, Miss Hutchison illustrates.

To close your woodwork accent color you can take a cue from a dominant color in your carpeting or drapery pattern.

For formal settings, exemplified by French Provincial, the authority prescribes the newly - revived flowery plaette of the French Empire for walls.

Subtle, pale and toned down with gray, the best of these newly-returned colors are French Violet, Dresden Pink, China Blue (a cool, true blue), Sistine Blue (a cool, bluish green) Quaker Blue (lighter than Wedgwood), pale gold and celery.

These subtle wall colors not only dress up French Provincial," the color stylist emphasizes, "but they echo the classic grace of all formal styles, including 'City Mix' or eclectic combinations of traditional styles with modern."

And because these formal color choices are soft and muted, often several are used together in a room or throughout the house for a look of gentle iridescence. They may include painted furniture and antique finishes in soft tints.

In these formal rooms, white woodwork and white accessories add a crisp sparkle in combinations with the elegant flowery colors, Miss Hutchison concludes.

Be Smart

Carpets and Floors Now Can Be Cleaned the Modern Way

When Grandma was young, getting carpets and floors ready for spring was a monumental job. She had to haul the rugs out to the back yard and beat them, sometimes for hours. Then she had to scrub the floors, literally on her hands and knees, scrape off the old wax and put down a new coat by hand.

Now, thank goodness, those days are gone. New equipment and cleaning products have practically eliminated all that heavy work. And, best of all, you don't have to make a big investment in floor care equipment, either. All those big-job workservers can be rented from a rental centre for just a day or two. You avoid making a big investment in equipment you use only a few times a year, saving storage space and maintenance.

Wall-to-wall carpeting can be cleaned automatically with a rug shampooer that can be rented for approximately $5 a day. Whether you should use a dry or wet shampoo depends on how soiled the carpet is. If it is fairly new and only lightly soiled, a dry shampoo, available at the rental centre, will do an excellent job. When using the shampoo, apply only a one-half inch layer of foam, which will disappear quickly as it does its work. You can vacuum the carpet an hour or two later.

For cleaning older carpets that are deeply soiled, use wet shampoo. This will get down deep into the pile and remove all of the old oils and stains.

Floors, too, can be made to look like new in practically no time with rented floor care equipment. If your problem is wax build-up on vinyl floors, remove it quickly with a commercial-quality wax stripper that removes wax without a lot of scrubbing and scraping. After using the stripper, apply a new coat of wax and buff it to a high sheen with a floor polisher. Similar equipment can be used to clean and wax hardwood floors.

Perhaps you have an unsightly porch floor that needs a new finish. For about $6 a day you can rent a floor sander that will remove all the old finish right down to the wood. After sanding, apply a sealer and two coats of polyurethane finish, either satin or high gloss. These finishes cost about the same as conventional varnish, but are twice as hard. After a polyurethane finish has cured — about seven days — it is impervious to almost everything, including paint and varnish remover.

So, if you're looking for ways to give your floors a spring-time look without a lot of hard work, visit your local rental centre. You'll be amazed at the variety of equipment and supplies they have. Tell the owner what kind of jobs you want to accomplish. He'll not only recommend the proper equipment, but will give you full instructions on how to use it.

Camera Records Homes Values

In planning interior and exterior home improvements, do you — first of all and last of all — reach for your camera?

Probably not.

However, few of us see our homes exactly as they are. We are so used to them that we scarcely see them at all — except when major improvements become necessary. One roll of color film can correct this built-in blindness and today's instant load cameras, with flash cubes for interior shots, make the process painless.

The camera sees your home as a stranger, coming in for the first time, sees it. It can point out that the living room is too busy, that the draperies really do not go well with the rug. A photograph forces you to see. It goes further and actually makes suggestions: showing that a little table pushed back in a corner is actually a graceful antique and deserves more importance . . . pointing out that you need a blind for the kitchen doorway . . . hinting that a small bedroom would look better if the walls were painted in a lighter shade . . . voicing against a room divider which is chopping up space unnecessarily.

Nothing a decorator couldn't tell you, but helpful to the family which is too close to the home to see the furnishings.

Outside, the camera expert may say your camera can help you again. They advocate all-season photos of your home. When you look at your garden in winter, your mind's eye sees it in full summer bloom. The camera may show a mass of mud and slush. Perhaps you should add a few evergreen shrubs for year-round charm? The camera may spot a dead branch dangerously near house or walk. Or point out that the walk has a break which you skirt automatically but which could break a stranger's ankle. (Strangers sue.)

Even if it only convinces family culprits that the place looks better if bicycles are put away and the garage door is closed, your camera makes a contribution to home improvement.

Once the redecoration is complete, photograph your improvements. Such records can be very important if insurance claims become necessary. (Just be sure to store the negatives away from the house, in case of fire or theft.)

Besides — and much more likely — you will have the joy of before-and-after proof of your planning and prowess!

2 Bedroom Apartments Popular

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, two - bedroom apartments have become more popular than one - bedroom units. Last year 51 per cent of the apartments built had two bedrooms, compared with 37 per cent with one bedroom. In 1964 one-bedroom units accounted for 45 per cent of the new dwellings and two-bedroom units for 43 per cent.

INCREASES SALARY

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Andre Strydom's salary is to be increased because of recent surgery. A series of sex change operations switched him from Sylvia to Andre and he has been medically certified as a male. Andre, 41, is employed as a clerk by the Public Service Commission, which has a higher pay scale for males than females.

Sterling Set With Stainless To Match Enhances Table

To give a new look for both parties and family pleasures, rely on the quick-change artist, the dining room table. No other piece of furniture dominates a room as well, while being versatile enough to lend itself to many different decorating treatments . . . and for relatively little cost.

One tablesetting celebrates the return of elegant but relaxed sitdown dinners. Best secret on the table is the flatware, a new light traditional pattern called "Dover." It is one of the new Matchmakers patterns.

As a revolutionary hostess help, the Matchmakers are offered in both sterling and in quality-crafted stainless. One great advantage of the system is that the pieces that many not fit the budget in sterling are usually well within reach in stainless. Having individual cocktail forks for each place setting spells elegance personified . . . and with the identical crafting in stainless, who can tell where the sterling ends?

Another hostess hint is to use as many pieces of silver or silverplated holloware as possible, by giving them unusual jobs to do. In one setting, silverplated place platters are used for bread and butters and an ice bucket on the sideboard holds a flower arrangement.

An elegant formal cloth can be a budget-breaker, or, as in one case, it can be the result of a little time and a knack with a needle and thread. Upholsterer's damask in warm gold and white is the cloth, trimmed and bordered with upholsterer's trim. White damask napkins give the finishing touch and are placed on each place plate as an open invitation to relax, and enjoy a gracious meal.

Stainless Silver?

An opulent tablesetting makes use of a new flatware in sterling with stainless to match, to lower the cost of living with elegance. A revolutionary entertaining help for hostess.

Before and After

Which twin was subjected to the typical home water supply, which twin was groomed in conditioned water? Easy to see! Cathy, left, had to put up with water loaded with calcium, magnesium, iron and other minerals as well as chlorine; twin, Carolyn, right, is a smiling example of grooming in water free from these factors. Note her soft hair, crisp white dress; conditioned water leaves no residue from the minerals. Units for "cleaning" home water supply are simple to install, almost maintenance-free.

Gardening in Early Spring Is Hardest Time on Hands

Now is the time of year that the hardest work of gardening starts — the kind that really wrecks your hands and nails.

Cleaning, raking, pulling, cutting, all help gardens but they can cause chapped, rough skin and ragged cuticles, and stained and broken nails. Gloves help but no one can wear gloves all of the time. There are many back-yard jobs that require bare-handed action.

How to protect skin and fingernails despite gardening chores? It can be done. For formation, send for a free booklet, "First Aid for Gardener's Hands." Dept. FB, 235 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017. Basic tips on hand care for men as well as for women gardeners are included.

Salt is abrasive to skin and acts like sandpaper. To make matters worse, dryness tends to occur most quickly wherever the skin is thin and has fewest oil-glands such as the hands, elbows and heels.

But dry skin is very absorbent, even if it looks tough. Your hands will soften up quickly if you apply a good hand cream or lotion regularly — especially before retiring. Dry skin soaks up the oils and moisture provided by a rich hand cream or lotion, especially those labelled for extra-dry skin.

Faces and hands get covergrime if you're working outdoors. To get skin wonderfully clean and soft, without dryness, there's rinse-off cold cream that lubricates while it deep - cleans. You apply and just wash it off with water.

If the skin on hands as well as the face has been in contact with irritants and abrasives, the cold cream is particularly beneficial. And it removes many kinds of stains from hands, as well as imbedded dirt.

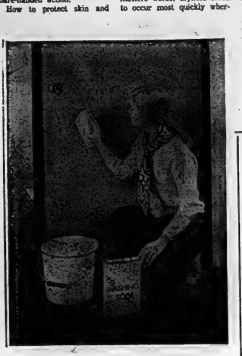
Men appreciate it for softening and cleaning their hands as much as women do for faces!

Since most of us have the kind of cuticle that snags, or clings to the nail, the tendency is to keep cutting in order to get rid of the "scarf skin" that hides moons. But a clearget cuticle remover loosens excess cuticle so that it can be quickly washed away with water.

For gardeners, the cuticle remover is an amazing first-aid. It will help whiten nails and remove stubborn gardening stains.

If you go barefoot or wear sandals often, try it for toenails, too! Those rough cuticles soften and come clean with ease, any time of year.

Hand Care



The average woman's hands get rough and dry faster than the average man's, because her skin is a little thinner. Therefore the gals have to work harder at keeping skin attractive. A free booklet, "First Aid for Gardener's Hands," offers practical ways to care for hands, nails. Yours for the asking; write the Pfizer Pacquin Division, Dept. FB, 235 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y., 10017.

Fingerprints Tell Tales

Among the most blatant threats to your housekeeping reputation are fingerprint smudges. They settle in all the most obvious places such as around doorknobs and light switches, the side panels of doors and screens. And the grubby smudges multiply at an unbelievable rate when there are children.

To keep these reminders of constant comings and goings under control, rely on washing soda, an inexpensive and versatile cleaner. A solution of three tablespoons of the washing soda to the basin of warm water sponged over the soiled surface eliminates the evidence in record time. No need to keep repeating the process before you conquer the grime, for soda is particularly effective at dissolving grease-based soil, and your skin, even at the fingertips, secretes oil.

Another smudge-prone area is the TV screen. While doing yeoman duty keeping small fry amused, it gets thoroughly finger - printed across the screen and around the dials.

Constructive Exercise

Whisk away fingerprints that ring around the doorknob. Sponge them off quickly with a washing soda solution - - - which also works beautifully on television-glass smears, windows, dozens of vulnerable household areas.

Young Canadians Group Promotes Social Change

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

"Social change must happen. It has to happen — and we must be the men to make sure it does — and we have to do it now."

This was the assertion that Company of Young Canadians representative Mrs. Sharon Cunningham put forward to a gathering of senior students at Moira Secondary School this week.

Mrs. Cunningham, who also works as an information officer for the youth-oriented organization explained the way it really is with the company.

"It is not as often pictured on TV — the young, idealistic CYC worker being followed adoringly by troops of children or adults, being told how great it is that they are there."

"It just isn't like that. Nothing could be further from reality," Mrs. Cunningham emphasized.

"Very rarely, if ever, is glory given to the company or the individual representing it."

"Our aim," she reasserted, "is that of social change, that the individual become involved in it — becoming an activist and a catalyst for the good of the community."

The Company, which was established in 1965 has more than 700 volunteers actively involved in communities, and a total of 38 projects.

These projects are located in areas where economic and social depression and other related problems get in the way of community progress and harmony.

"The Company doesn't all of a sudden pick out an area, and decide it would be a great idea to send in a field worker. The Company's presence must be requested by the community concerned. This request is usually made through one or more community organizations," Mrs. Cunningham informed her audience.

The presence of the Company is usually a last resort, because all other methods to attempt to solve the problem have been tried and have failed," she added.

Once a request for assistance is made, the area's problem is researched. After this has been completed, a decision must be made as to what particular part of the problem to deal with.

Mrs. Cunningham also explained how the field worker approaches his problem. "To pretend any problem, you have to know what it is all about, in the case of a community, you have to live there."

"Once the field worker makes his home in the community, he must begin to get to know the area, go to the people. It isn't a case of setting up an office and waiting for them to come to him."

"After getting to know the individuals in the community, the worker must help them to form a clearer awareness of their problem. get them to articulate their problems, so they can solve them together," summarized the representative.

She described the necessary qualifications for becoming a volunteer worker for the CYC.

"The only outstanding qualification is that the individual must be over 18 years of age," she told a surprised audience.

"The pay varies according to the standard of living in the particular area. Normally, the worker is paid about $85 monthly, plus room and board. During his two year term, he is also paid a $50 honorarium, which is put aside for him upon completion of his two-year contract.

After she finished her talk, Mrs. Cunningham invited questions from the audience.

And questions she got, too. Was the long hair hippie-type image that David Depoe projected the true one?

"Well, picture yourself trying to help out in Yorkville with short hair, dressed in a shirt and tie. Nobody would talk to you. It's as simple as that," she answered.

"David is now with the Drug and Alcohol Research Foundation, trying to do more about the Yorkville kind of problem," she added.

"What about these tremendous salaries paid the various consultants of the CYC," queried another.

Mrs. Cunningham explained that this was because the Company was just beginning, and many people, particularly administrators, tried to manage their budgets as best they could. But often, because of their experience, they paid out more money than they should have."

All in all, it was a satisfying conference for both students and teachers alike. Maybe there will be more recruits for the CYC maybe even some from Moira.

Have They Found an Answer?

Mrs. Sharon Cunningham, information officer with the Company of Young Canadians, answers several questions by interested students. Mrs. Cunningham was speaking to a group of senior students at Moira Secondary School, at an informal talk session about the Company.

Catholics Organize

Tax Support Sought

By JUDY SCHRIEDER

Last weekend three Nicholson students attended a meeting of the Ontario Catholic Student Federation in London.

Stan Muldoon, Tren Shannon and Dennis Walsh represented NCC at the conference, in which 63 Catholic high schools across Ontario participated.

The organization, whose primary aim is to help win tax support for all Catholic schools from kindergarten to grade 13, is now beginning to deal with all aspects of education.

Tom Shannon, who attended a workshop concerning general education interests, said that a group of OCSF delegates discussed the Hall-Dennis report, as well as the controversial MacKay report, which advocates a policy of no religious education or discussion in the public secondary schools.

However, according to Stan Muldoon, the main topic of discussion was poor communication within the federation. In an effort to overcome this situation, the OCSF plans to publish a newspaper every six weeks, which will be supplemented by a newsletter every three weeks.

Within Nicholson, a group of five students will be conducting a panel discussion in each structure and future aims of the OCSF.

The grade 11 English students, along with the grade 12 geography students, viewed a poverty film entitled One World — Two Villages. A couple representing a private group known as the Catholic Organization for Development and Peace, spoke on the causes of world poverty and the efforts of more affluent countries to alleviate this social condition. The slides tied in with Sister Margaret's study of conditions in India, as well as with the poverty theme which Sister Anna is pursuing in her English classes.

At Centennial

Kindergarten Entertained

By ALEX DUNN

Of all the interesting visitors who have come to Centennial, perhaps the most interesting group was the one which arrived on foot April 15.

The kindergarten class from Sir John A. Macdonald public school visited the grade 11 English class during fourth period. The children presented the students with original paintings created as decorations for the classroom. Each child proudly expressed his explanation of his masterpiece.

In return, the young children were presented with a book of stories and poetry written for them by the English classes of Mrs. H. Harvie.

A letter of thanks was received later by the high school students in addition to drawings of the children's impressions of the secondary school. These included a view of the cafeteria, the classroom, and some class members.

This visit was enjoyed immensely by the senior students and all concerned hope that more visits of a similar nature will take place in the future.

Student Government Studied

By GARY BOULTON

Spring fever is in the air and it has been another quiet week at B.C.I.

The Students' Council has passed out a questionnaire to all students asking for their opinions on student government. The problem with the present Students' Council is a lack of participation. The question being asked is whether or not B.C.I. should have a two - party government system as the Canadian federal system. This has been the one suggestion for renewing student interest.

Last Friday the entire student body was dismissed to see the movie Romeo and Juliet. The majority of the 960 students who attended the show enjoyed the fine performance. It is hoped that a trend has been set toward further student matinees.

B.C.I.'s spring formal is only a week away! The theme this year is Tip Toe Through the Tulips (with no connection whatsoever to Tiny Tim's recent hit), and the band will be Jimmy Dybold and Prevertebral Hit from Kitchener. May 2 promises to be the day of another unparalleled B.C.I. formal!

IS NOW OFFERING
EVENING COURSES IN

IMPROVEMENT

PDI's memory improvement program gives the popularity to the combination of personal, social, and professional benefits enjoyed by graduates. Objectives in the program's initial stages is to show the individual how to improve his skill in practical memory (e.g. memory of names, faces, numbers, etc.) and to overcome forgetting. Other additional benefits will include improved concentration and observation efficiency, enhanced self-confidence, and sharper powers of observation and conversation. TWICE IN CANADA, the course uses refined and updated approaches to long-proven memory concepts and techniques, such as the "phonetic numeric alphabet".

EFFECTIVE

AND LISTENING

PDI's effective speaking and listening program specifically covers the areas of overcoming the fear of speaking, developing self confidence — organizing and preparing talks — developing strategy and objectives for what you say — how to use words effectively and build your "WORD POWER" — How to get action — How to use gestures to help you speak — How to improve your voice — How to listen — How to harness your use of voice and delivery techniques (using the learning by doing participative group method) — How to recognize poor listening habits and do something about them — and many, many more practical, down-to-earth techniques and skills for effective speaking. The course is an especially refined and updated version of Dale Carnegie & W. Wright's effective speaking program, Canada's most practical and proven course in speaking and listening skills. Over 1,000,000 graduates around the world have found that PDI's courses have helped them to a better platform speaker but (for all men and women) who wish to improve their ability to speak and listen effectively — whether they're talking to individuals or groups.

Actress Deanna Lund utilizes a yardstick as an exercise aid as she shapes up a bikini figure for summer. Her plan-ahead program of exercises include torso bends, leg lifts and body twists.

Swimsuit Figure-shapers

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

Be A Beauty Shaper!

With over 40 million women participating in swimming and water sports, the beauty challenge (and competition) depends action. After all, most of those bikini figures don't just happen! They're the result of special effort which includes a plan-ahead program of torso bends, leg lifts and body twists. A favorite routine, illustrated by actress Deanna Lund, utilizes a yardstick as an exercise aid. Place ruler on floor, then stand behind it with feet 12 inches apart. Raise right arm overhead, as you bend to the left. Slide left arm down left leg. To increase lateral stretch, really reach with right arm. Alternate sides; rehearse 10 times.

Another slim-down, skinny-up workout begins by kneeling. Lean forward and place hands on yardstick, spacing them about 14 inches apart. Now that you're on "fit fours," bring left knee forward and try to touch it to chin. Hold for the count of four, then push it to the rear, straightening and lifting it as high as possible. Tilt head upward, so that chin, chest, abdomen, and limbs receive equal attention. Maintain position for a count of two before returning to original pose. Alternate limbs and try three more times.

A cinch to compliment those nipped - in swimsuit styles is this twist 'n' turn tune-up. Kneel on left leg, with right one extended, so foot rests flat on floor. Now, grasp ruler and swing it from side-to-side. Reverse, who co-stars in the 20th TV series. Land of the Giants, repeated exercise 10 times. For maximum benefits, keep shoulders erect, yardstick at best level, and knees stationary. Practice expanding the arc of your reach, so that midsection receives the streamlining action.

TEST MATERIALS

MEDFORD, Mass. (CP) — In an effort to determine the best shock-resistant material for a linear module craft landing on the moon, 16 Tufts University engineering students were assigned to an egg-dropping project. Four of them flunked. The students were asked to package an egg in a container packed with any shock-resistant material, then drop the container 43 feet from the top of a campus building without breaking the egg. Some of the winners included an egg suspended in heavy motor oil, one packed in popcorn and a third the centrepiece in a canister of gelatin.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Bags under the eyes plague many people. Their emotional discomfort is intensified when they plead innocent: wonder why they should look like caricatures and dissolute libertines. They are like people who have red noses yet never touch a drop of alcohol.

Recently one woman, still in her early 30s wrote: "I suffer from bags under my eyes. I can't understand it. I have been to a few doctors who have been unable to find the reason. No medicine. One advised plastic surgery. May I have a few words of advice to an innocent victim of baggy eyes?" — Miss L.

Comment: This stubborn condition is more common in those past 40, but as in your case, Miss L., may occur in younger people. As the underlying muscles and connective tissues weaken, the fatty tissue pushes through the weakened muscles. The result is a ballooning out of the lids which cause the unhappy disfigurement.

Undeniably, it becomes a business and social handicap. I agree with the doctor who recommended plastic surgery. In most cases, this is the only cure.

The operation is called a "blepharoplasty." It is performed on the upper and lower lids. Each eye takes about an hour and a half. For each operation the patient needs to stay in the hospital only about a day. However, it takes at least 10 days for the discoloration and swelling to disappear after surgery.

Carousing Not Only Cause Of Ugly Bags Under Eyes

But, after it is all over, it is worth all trouble and expense. Postoperatvie scars are scarcely visible. What is important is the choice of the plastic surgeon.

As I keep repeating, be sure he comes well recommended by your physician. Don't just pick a name out of the phone book, or on the advice of a friend. "Bags" deserve the best of care.

* * *

In a previous column I mentioned the finding of one physician who believed that footprinting of infants is valueless. A recent release by Hospitals (Journal of American Hospital Association) gives a contrary opinion.

The AHA's position remains the same as in 1957 when it made the following statement, giving the FBI as authority for it that "Properly made footprints for fingerprint of any human being from about the age of the fourth fetal month onward will serve to positively identify that person until the time of his death and to identify him after death until the ridge characteristics are destroyed."

Footprints are used in children rather than fingerprints because they are easier to obtain and the legible impressions are easier to read. But it is important that good technique be used in obtaining footprints.

It is also important that other usual methods (fingerprints) be used by hospital in labeling infants correctly. Footprints should supplement these procedures.

It's reassuring to know that it's really "your" baby that you take home from the hospital.

For Mrs. J.: What do I consider the 10 most common bad habits? Here they are. Undoubtedly, we could add to the list.

1. Smoking 2. Overdrinking 3. Overeating 4. Underexercising 5. Undervaccinating 6. Overworking 7. Simmering in resentment 8. Overworrying (nobody can stop entirely) 9. Living in unnecessary and protracted tension. 10. Procrastination and self-treatment when ill (disease feeds ravenously on people who "keep putting off" examination and treatment).

SOLUNAR TABLES
WHEN TO FISH OR HUNT

The schedule of Solunar periods, as printed below, has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory and hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

(April 26 - May 4.)

EARNED QUICKLY

The film Goldfinger, the third in the series of films based on stories of James Bond by Ian Fleming, grossed $10,300,000 in its first 14 weeks in the United States.

New Venture In Local Theatre

Belleville is the next stop for a new Quinte district theatre venture.

"Please Don't Sneeze," a production of Quinte Island Players in co-operation with Belleville Winter Fair and the Quinte Arts Council will be presented at Centennial Secondary School on Saturday afternoon.

The project is part of a continuing program sponsored by Arts Festival '69.

A rousing musical comedy, it was written by producer, playwright Chris Wiggins. Although it was written for a high school group, since it has been adapted for the theatre it has developed broader appeal.

It recounts the dilemma of a child-loving Baron with a secret staff, distracted by a mean widow who seems to have set designs for the paternal aristocrat.

Artistic director of the Quinte Isle Theatre is Tom Crothers, head of the Theatre arts course at Prince Edward Collegiate.

The production will be part of a summer lineup of plays for Prince Edward County this summer.

Betty Taylor is producer for "Sneeze", included in the cast are Paul Hobbs who won the best actor award for his performance in Hello! Out There! in the Eastern Ontario Drama League.

COSTLY MOVIE

The film Cleopatra, staring Elizabeth Taylor, cost $42,000,000 to make.

THE FALL OF ROME ALMOST KILLED IT !

Boxing was quite popular with the ancient Greeks, and Romans but died out after the fall of Rome in 476 A.D. The sport was revived by European kings who enjoyed watching it as millions do today.

Boxing has lost popularity since World War II and there may be some unused equipment around your house. Sell it fast with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Dialing 962-2171 will get the job done!

EVEN AT ($998.00) IT'S NOT CHEAP.

There's no question we could make it cheap. We could cut our 1,000 inspectors to 4,000. And get rid of our 560 inspector inspectors. We could use a lighter gauge steel. And cut the amount of paint in half.

But if we did, we'd be breaking the first rule. Of economy car making. And its the one that we made up.

The only way to make a car inexpensive, is to make it expensively.

OFF THE RECORD By Ed Reed MR. TWEEDY by Ned Riddle

Five-year Review of Interest On NHA Mortgages Is Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Private investors may be encouraged to put more money into housing loans under a shift in rules for government-insured mortgages announced Wednesday.

The change, which would permit adjustment of the interest rate every five years on new mortgages, will have little immediate impact on Canadians borrowing money to buy a new home. Existing mortgages will not be affected.

In theory, the long-run impact of attracting more funds into the mortgage market could help to reduce the cost of borrowing — the interest rate — because competition among lenders would increase.

For the person seeking a new mortgage on a newly-built house under the National Housing Act from now on, it would mean the lender could offer a mortgage, renewable every five years.

Present NHA mortgages carry the same interest rate throughout the repayment period, usually 25 years.

In practice, a five-year-term mortgage signed today at an interest rate of nine per cent would come due five years from today.

If interest rates then were higher than nine per cent, the lender would offer the customer a new five-year agreement at the higher rate. If the customer declined, the lender could ask for repayment of the full balance owed on the loan. The customer then would have to shop around and see if he could get a mortgage loan on better terms.

If interest rates were lower five years from now, the debtor would be in the driver's seat. He could ask the lender for a renewed mortgage at the lower interest.

Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, who has cabinet responsibility for housing policy, announced the new arrangement — the first implementation of housing-policy changes he recommended in January after leading a four-month inquiry across the country.

Many of the other proposed changes — about 50 in all — would require changes in legislation. Some, such as a proposal to remove the federal sales tax on building materials, have been rejected by the cabinet.

The five-year-term system, already applied by some lenders on conventional mortgages not insured under the NHA, is an option to the 20 or 25-year term.

The private lenders who usually offer both conventional and NHA mortgages—trust and mortgage companies, banks and other financial institutions—could offer either term.

The five-year-term offer on NHA mortgages would be applicable only to newly built homes for sale or rent, not existing homes.

Mr. Hellyer said the aim of the change is to provide greater flexibility in the mortgage market for both borrowers and lenders.

In the January report of his inquiry, Mr. Hellyer said trust and loan companies often obtain their funds from savers and investors on a short-term basis and then hesitate to lend money at a fixed interest rate for a long term.

"Mortgages with a five-year term would seem to offer a more attractive investment" so such companies.

The report also observed that fixing interest rates for the life of the mortgage fails to take account of the borrower's ability to pay more as he earns more.

Initial reaction from the real estate and building markets agrees that Wednesday's change could help assure a constant supply of mortgage funds for housing.

Donald Kirkup, information officer for the Toronto Real Estate Board, said the effect would be that mortgages probably would be easier to obtain initially, but more expensive to keep up as time goes on. He said he expected interest rates to continue going up.

Mr. Kirkup also said he expected the government would implement other recommendations of Mr. Hellyer, including increasing the maximum size of individual NHA loans.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For April 25

Your birthday today: It is not so much what you do this year, but how, and for whom you do it. Enlightened self-interest will be served better by discarding that by talking on more. Investments should be reviewed and perhaps switched into securities related to services reaching all. Today's natives frequently show a tendency toward self-denial. Many work in technical fields.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Continue the search for arrangements for a working environment which offers the chance for fulfillment of emotional needs, a shelter for going relationships.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): A break with the old is promised. Your choice is now critical and difficult to make, and it revolves on very subtle points. Trust your intuition.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Family and community conditions improve with just a little cheerful effort on your part. Impatience, the urge for instant results, is the most bothersome thorn. Keep busy to wind up chores of the week's campaigning; get all the details settled early.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your friends can be very helpful and put you next to very good deals. Take the chance while it is open; go for the higher rewards. Anything to sign should be thoroughly checked.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Continue your search for the maximum way of living; charm is your greatest, but least used, asset. Try not to let momentary criticism wound your pride. Seek diversion tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Detailed work . . . on a confidential basis can be helpful. Consult specialists for any problem beyond your immediate skills. Conserve energy by taking the most direct path or by keeping your wants few and simple.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Spend a little more on yourself — it's an investment today. Joint affairs will prosper with just a bit more attention. Give your work a fair shot; drive your world a cheerful greeting, and get rewards back on all levels. It can be a good life!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your sense of duty comes alive and puts you into the front lines coping with neglected or hardship cases, discrepancies that hinder people unfairly. There is great personal satisfaction for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): When you've done your proper stint today, tidy up your personal life and have a party this evening. Improvise something to fit the mood. Invite younger and active people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): A little search may uncover something of value that comes into immediate application. Neglected treasures are all around you, camouflaged by misunderstanding of what they are and how they should be used.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Travel can be very useful today, but your resources should be conserved carefully. Retire early as fatigue may put you into a humor susceptible to squabbling later.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Discipline yourself to pursue your regular routine regardless of distractions and invitations to abandon your duties. Some unexpected turn will provoke partners to show true feelings — the surprise may be very pleasant.

Leslie's Makes A Fetish Of Comfortable Feet

Since the first day Leslie's Shoe Store opened in June of 1919, the establishment has been known for specialization in the business of aiding the shoe wearer in having permanently comfortable feet.

The modern version of the shoe store has kept this tradition and experience as its main aim in the footwear business.

Children are one of the first concerns of the proprietors, Bryson and Donald Leslie and their staff.

"We enter the fitting of babies' feet when they are about six months old," said Bryson Leslie. "The staff is particularly trained to be extra careful in fitting children's feet."

According to Mr. Leslie the feet of an infant can be permanently damaged if proper care is not taken to check the child's limbs, abnormalities and peculiarities and have something done about it.

Leslie's keep a file on each child customer and this file has recorded entries telling of the foot peculiarities, time of

Staff Training Given Firm's Top Priority

In the quest for perfection in footwear style and comfort, Leslie's Shoe Store has found it successful to offer a training course for the store's employees.

Bryson and Donald Leslie, proprietors of the establishment, see to it that the staff takes the store course and the shoe-fitting course offered by the Canadian Footwear Institute.

In addition to that, the staff and the Leslies attend seminars, shoe shows and other courses and conferences pertaining to the perfection of foot comfort.

In this way, the staff at Leslie's is right up to date on not only style and color, but the technology of the shoe business.

"We have our own planned course where we pass on our own basic information to the staff," said Bryson Leslie.

Records are used to train the employee to work up to the standards of Leslie's Shoe Store. Part of the training is working with the Leslies themselves.

"It's a long drawn out procedure to be a shoe-fitter," said Mr. Leslie. "It's a constant program that never ends."

GOOD EYE MEASUREMENT

If you think a half a size larger shoe looks much longer, you possess a good eye for measurement because the overall difference from heel to toe is approximately three-sixteenths inch. In other words a size eight is only three quarters inch longer than size six. The approximate difference in one width is about three sixteenth inch.

The Canadian Footwear Course is the study of the last (shape) of the shoe and the materials that go into the making of shoes.

The long training of staff members at Leslie's has paid dividends in the form of personal service for the shoe customer.

There is almost a clientele situation developing at the store where customers will come in and ask for a certain staff member.

And the ill and the handicapped who cannot make it to the store for a special shoe fitting are not ignored.

Employees at Leslie's have made hospital calls and some house calls to customers who are disabled and completely unable to make it to the store.

Shoe Strength

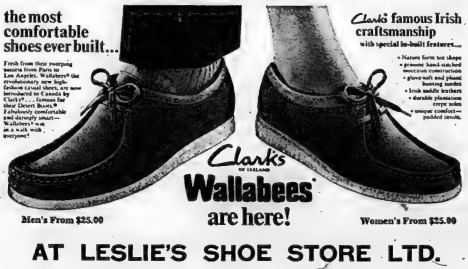
Fibres Do Job'

If you were to view under a microscope the corium or second layer of a hide or skin from which leather is made, you would see a multitude of strong strands of fine thread-like fibres arranged in little groups or bundles.

These fibre bundles, the basic architectural foundation of a piece of finished leather, are interwoven to provide great tensile strength. At this same time, the entire mass remains flexible and pliable even under many extreme conditions.

This grouping of little fibrils in the fibre bundles literally holds a piece of leather together.

Display Typical Of Stock



This display in Leslie's Shoe Store offers an example of the assortment of shoe and purse combinations that can be found at the store. And in the modern era, shoes are an important part of fashion, rather than the last item that it is bought. Leslie's prides itself by having a tremendous assortment of shoe styles and colors and, more important, a shoe that is comfortable and of a quality that will last.

New Finishes Add to Appeal

Among the many advances made recently by the tanning industry in producing stronger, more attractive and versatile leathers, one of the more important in terms of increased sales appeal has been the development of improved finishes.

For practical purposes, the shoe retailer can best identify the finishes on the shoes he sells according to several commonly applied finish classifications.

- Matte or suede finish is not easily recognized because it often serves as the base for color effects. It is a dull finish applied to the leather, producing a flat or eggshell look and is found mostly on casuals or sport shoes, and children's shoes.

Heightened by seasonal color, it is also popular on women's dress and semi-dress shoes.

- Aniline finish produces a transparent, almost three-dimensional effect, revealing the grain pattern of beautiful leathers. New developments in aniline dyes have made them color-fast and non-fading, and the range of colors has been extended.

Aniline finish is used on men's dress shoes and on sport shoes for both men and women.

- Antiqued finish is actually the blackened look applied to many semi-dress shoes such as spectator types with stacked or mid-heels.

NEW FINISHES (continued on Page 15)

Store Size Has Stayed The Same

Leslie's interior has undergone some renovations since its beginning in 1919. During the years from 1959 to 1962 there were some changes made. However, the actual size of the store has not increased since 1919. It was that year that this store area was advertised, largely by word-of-mouth, as a meeting-place as well as a place of business.

Feats of Foot

Today's Hikers Are Mere Pikers

A few years ago there was much publicity about 50-mile hikes. Today the popular fad is jogging a few miles a day.

When someone takes a really long hike, say 1,000 miles, it makes the front pages of the newspapers.

But today's hikers are really pikers compared to some of the recorded feats of foot of the past.

There was Gertrude Richards, a British seamstress of 70. One day she left her sewing and returned 198 days later. She had trekked 1,644 miles throughout England and Scotland.

A lot of people have done the coast-to-coast hike in the United States.

But one of the more remarkable was Giovanni Sauna of Hoboken, New Jersey. At the age of 71 he had his lifetime savings of $5,000 that he could do the coast-to-coast hike.

He did. When he returned, he applied for a job as a mail carrier — but was turned down because of his age.

Then there was Dudley Kinnell, a 51-year-old county judge of the California Superior Court. After a frustrating day in court he said he needed some fresh air.

What started as a short jaunt expanded into a hike from San Francisco to Florida and back.

Another Californian, John F. Stahl, was advised by his doctor to take an ocean cruise for his health. He embarked on a ship to Panama.

He became so seasick, he vowed he would walk back. And he did — 4,000 miles through Mexico, Texas, up to San Francisco.

A trans America hike is considered quite a feat. But it's really petty stuff.

For example, Giovanni Vergani, an Argentinian, walked some 10,000 miles from Buenos Aires to New York.

Karl Mader, an Austrian printer, walked from Vienna to Japan. Rudolph Hanke, former AAU walking champ, took a walk to "limber up" — around the United States east coast, south coast, Mexican coast and west coast — 18,000 miles in all.

A woman, Nell A. Walker, refusing to give the walking honors to the male sex, walked around the entire world in four years.

When she returned, her feet were four sizes longer and two widths wider.

Perhaps the long-distance record goes to Yoshitaro Okeda, a Japanese journalist of 52, who in 16 years, completed a 180,000 mile walking tour, visiting every country on the globe.

But there were even hardier individuals. Jean de Vaudreuil, a 68-year-old Belgian, took a 16-year walking tour of 50,000 miles. One of his legs was wooden, lost in World War One.

Joseph de Virgilio walked the 44 miles from Providence to Boston — remarkable considering that he did it on stilts.

Careful Fitting Important

Donald Stewart displays the type of care that is offered by Leslie's Shoe Store as part of the proper shoe-fitting technique common at the store.

Quality Pays Off

Flexibility Key to Quality

In the tanning process, leather is stretched and shrunk alternately. In the shoemaking process — molding, tempering and lasting — leather is treated, pulled and stretched.

Yet, throughout these many operations, a quality leather retains its flexibility, and, if properly lasted, its memory.

In other words, the arrangement of the fibre bundles retains enough elasticity to assure a desirable amount of give or stretch.

Generally speaking, the finer the grain of the leather, the less its stretch tendencies.

Kid has somewhat less stretch than the other side leathers. Sheep is spongy and stretchy.

Calf, while of finer grain, is stronger and pliable, yet less stretchy than side leather.

Under normal conditions most upper leathers retain a maximum average 10 per cent moisture which helps them retain their natural flexibility.

Today's

(From Page 9)

An Austrian cab driver walked the 30 miles from Graz to Vienna on his hands.

Plennie Wingo of Abilene, Texas, started out to walk around the world backwards. He covered nearly 4,000 miles before the police in one country stopped him.

North Americans aren't really walking people, but others are. It's a national sport in some countries.

The world's biggest sporting match was held in 1941 between Sweden and Finland, with 1,500,000 Finns (40 per cent of the population) competing against 900,000 Swedes.

The individuals walked in relays, seeking to cover the most ground, non-stop walking 24 hours a day over a three-week period.

Finland won.

Five Pair A Year Footwear Total

A billion pairs of footwear a year — that's what the American public consumes.

That's an average of five pairs for every man, woman and child. It includes all types of footwear — shoes, boots, canvas, slippers, both domestic and imported.

It's by far the highest average per capita consumption of any nation in the world.

It differs, of course, by types of customers. Women, for example, wear out annually about six pairs; children about seven; men about three pairs.

Not just shoes alone, but all kinds of footwear combined are consumed.

However, "active" people are even higher footwear consumers. If we eliminate some 20 million persons 65 years of age and over (most are very small shoe consumers), plus millions of others who are otherwise inactive, the per capita footwear consumption goes much higher.

For active women, for instance, it might be eight or nine pairs a year average, instead of six pairs.

SHOE TREES GOOD INVESTMENT

Shoe trees are a good investment. They are as necessary to shoes as a coat hanger to clothes and they do precisely the same thing — keep the shoes and clothes in shape.

Nearly 200 Operations Needed to Make Shoe

It takes from 125 to 200 operations to make a shoe, depending upon the type of construction.

Shoes aren't manufactured, they're assembled. Shoe manufacturers don't manufacture the many parts or components that go into a shoe. These are made by scores of different classifications of suppliers who sell them to shoe manufacturers.

The manufacturers assemble these parts in a series of operations.

A shoe factory is a carefully planned layout of eight major departments. Each department plays its own specialized part in assembling the shoe.

It all starts in the cutting room. This is where the upper materials are cut out in predetermined shapes with special dies and machines.

There are several pieces to the shoe's upper (vamp, quarter, plug, tongue and lining). They must be cut precisely to measure, and matched in color and texture for rights and lefts.

In the fitting room the precut parts of the upper are sewn or joined together with up to 60 different operations. Fancy or decorative stitching may also be applied to the upper.

The stock fitting room is where the shoe's component parts — insole, box toe, outsole and counter — are prepared and matched in the size of the shoes. Some of these parts are now attached to the last.

The shoe's components and the joined parts of the upper are temporarily and loosely attached to the last as the whole preliminary unit comes to the lasting room.

Now sophisticated machines and skilled operators bring all these parts together firmly over the last.

In the bottoming room, a shoe's outsole is attached by sewing or cementing. The making room is where the heels are attached and trimmed.

The final touches are applied in the finishing room. It is here that the stains and waxes are applied to the shoe bottoms and the buffing or burnishing of sole edges and the upper materials are given the final finishing touches.

The final details are handled in the packing room. These details include the insertion of laces or tags, the trimming of loose threads and other details.

Then the shoes are placed in size-marked boxes, ready for in-stock bins or shipping.

All of these operations and departments are precisely synchronized for timing so that everything comes together on schedule. Inspections are maintained throughout.

MRS. DOROTHY THOMPSON

Having worked for seven years as a grocery cashier, Dorothy joined Leslie's staff in 1957 and has successfully completed the shoe fitting course and other courses in staff training. Her responsibilities are the leather goods, handbag and luggage departments. Her husband, Lyle, is a linotype operator and they have two sons, Jimmy and Bobby. Dorothy is an ardent sports fan, particularly where ball and hockey are concerned.

Leslie Firm Planning Gala 50th Birthday

Bryson and Donald Leslie, proprietors of Leslie's Shoe Store Ltd., are planning a gala event to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the beginning of their Front Street store.

Thursday night, Apr. 24, is kick-off night for the events at the store.

And to musically announce the beginning of the anniversary celebration, the store has gained the services of a Dixieland band which will be playing outside the doors of the establishment.

The musicians, four of them from this area and two from out of town, will offer instrumental selections from the heart of Dixieland and the big band era.

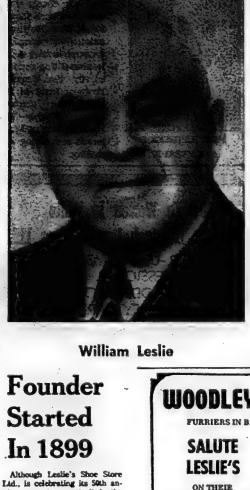
The Thursday night kick - off will begin at seven, p.m. and wind up at 9:30. The store will have business as usual until 5:30 p.m. that afternoon.

The unique facet of Thursday night's celebrations will be the absence of buying and selling. Absolutely nothing will be sold.

According to Bryson Leslie, the night will be more of an "open house", offering coffee, doughnuts and other forms of refreshment.

For the representatives of the very young generation in attendance at the store there will be balloons. Door prizes will also be in order.

There will be a drawing on Saturday by Ben Corke, president of the Downtown Businessmen's Association and prizes will be handed out.



On top of that, there will be a new innovation for Leslie's Shoe Store. Friday and Saturday will see the proprietors offering a ten per cent discount sale on their merchandise.

William Leslie

Founder Started In 1899

Although Leslie's Shoe Store Ltd., is celebrating its 50th anniversary at present, it is the 70th year that the Leslie name has been linked with the shoe business in the Belleville area.

It is 70 years since the late William Leslie started working in the shoe business that has resulted in the shoe store on Front Street.

One day in June, 1919, Mr. Leslie took a pair of shoes to John McKeown, who operated a business across the street from Vermilyea and Son Shoe Store and did shoe alterations for that shop to have the leather heels changed to rubber. er heels changed to rubber.

When he went back for the shoes, he found the job not done, and Mr. McKeown sitting beside his bench not feeling well. The men were great friends.

Mr. Leslie put one shoe on the last and began to change the heel himself.

The shoemaker said, "Will, how about buying me out?"

The two men made the deal in almost as short a time as it takes to read this account. It should be mentioned here that throughout his life, all of Mr. Leslie's major decisions have been snap decisions.

He and Mr. McKeown took stock, recording every pair of shoes in the store in a five cent scribbler which Mr. Leslie always kept in his possession years afterwards.

They closed the deal and the checks and when fittings are necessary.

The parents of infant and child customers receive a "protect-o-foot" chart about two months after having a fitting.

This chart allows the parents to compare the child's foot and to see when a new fitting will be needed.

"We also recommend, if it's convenient, that they bring the child in to let us check his feet," he said.

The shoe itself is checked after wearing by the child to see if there are any peculiarities and abnormalities.

Children are treated as the best customers at Leslie's. Each time the child is in the store the staff has a give-away or him or her. Young customers also receive a birthday card on each birthday from the people at the shoe store.

The styles o children's shoes are also well chosen. The people at Leslie's make sure the shape of the shoe is suitable for the child's foot.

But, adults are not neglected either.

"Many have foot discomforts of one sort or another. Our job is to try to give relief and foot comfort."

In order to do this Leslie's carries a large variety of styles and types — "as large a span in width and sizes as we can possibly buy."

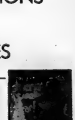
"Then we often have to add a pad here and there or maybe make some adjustments to foot comfort."

"Like children, if any adults are having problems they are invited back often for a check-up."

In many cases people go to their doctors with a foot problem and the doctors may write out a prescription calling for specific types of shoes or an addition to a shoe.

Leslie's staff are qualified to handle this sort of situation. "These we try to carry out explicitly."

"We're very proud of our staff. They're the ones that do the job."



DAVID LUCAS

David is the junior salesman on the staff. He is undergoing training to be a shoe-fitter. He joined Leslie's in 1967 after leaving secondary school. On his day off David is either hunting or fishing.

ROBERT SULLIVAN

A native of Belleville, Bob has had 31 years' experience with several shoe stores in Ontario. He returned to Belleville last year to join Leslie's staff where he is in charge of tennis shoes and sport footwear. Bob and his wife, Luella, have a daughter Jacqueline, a student nurse in Toronto. Bob's favorite recreation is golf.

MRS. BETTY REID

After 13 years with the T. Eaton Company in Belleville, Betty joined Leslie's staff three years ago. Like most of her associates at Leslie's Mrs. Reid has completed the Canadian Footwear Institute Shoe Fitting Course. Her husband, Carm, is an office supplies salesman and they have two daughters, Janice and Karen.

WILLIAM GILBERT

The dean of Leslie's staff is Bill Gilbert, who started as an after-school assistant and later joined the full time staff. Bill has been employed at Leslie's for 25 years and is in charge of the Men's Shoe Department. Bill and his wife, Jacqueline, have three children, Kim, Judi Lynn, and Scott.

MRS. KATHLEEN MOLYNEAUX

Kay, as she is known, was born in Belleville. She has had four years' experience at Leslie's and is in charge of the children's shoe Department. Mrs. Molyneaux successfully completed a comprehensive course in shoe-fitting conducted by the Canadian Footwear Institute. She has three children, Penny, Gladys and Michael. Her main interests are sewing and reading.

young shoe store proprietor took over without engaging the services of a legal advisor.

Each man had great faith and confidence in the other's word and they made the deal which certainly is a model business transaction — rarely in business is such honesty and confidence displayed.

When he opened his own business the whole store consisted of no more than two thirds of the present main store alone and his stock less than one twentieth of the present stock.

But upon commencement of the running of his own store, Mr. Leslie had already been in the shoe business 20 years.

And it was a mishap in a barber shop that got him started in the business itself.

Upon completion of a course at Ontario Business College Mr. Leslie could not find suitable employment. One day he asked his good friend, Jim Skinner, the barber, if he knew of anyone who wanted a young salesman or bookkeeper.

Mr. Skinner suggested he try the barber business and if he wished to learn it he could do so for $30 — and in six weeks. Mr. Skinner agreed to pay him $1 a day.

One day when the young barber had not served long in his apprenticeship, Sidney Vermilyea came in for his morning shave and it was Mr. Leslie's job to get him lathered up ready for Mr. Skinner.

Mr. Leslie had difficulty in lowering the back of the chair and his superior, noticing it, being anxious to help his young apprentice and being anxious to give good service to his good customer, gave Mr. Leslie a glance meaning "What's the matter — having trouble?"

Mr. Leslie gave the chair a pull which lowered the back perfectly, but nearly threw Mr. Vermilyea from the chair.

Mr. Skinner told Mr. Leslie one day that Mr. Vermilyea would like to hire him and the young apprentice was pleased.

And so it happened that on Mar. 17, 1899, William Leslie started as a full time junior shoe salesman at $2 per week.

Corrective Shoes May Ease Pain

If you are not enjoying the utmost in shoe comfort, you may not necessarily need corrective shoes or foot appliances. It is quite probable that the insertion of the proper metatarsal pad or other orthopedic supplies in the correct place will remedy your discomfort. Leslie's staff are highly trained in this science and they will be pleased to render this service at any time without charge. Please remember this service is free whether your shoes come from Leslie's or another store.

New Finishes

It stimulates a weathered effect and was once applied to expensive leathers only. Now it can be found on all grades of leather and on a variety of colored leathers, including white.

Lustre finish is a polished or burnished look. Lustre finish has a translucent effect, providing sparkling beauty and high gloss.

Burnished leathers, generally used on men's dress shoes, provide a semi-gloss and somewhat lustred effect for browns. Better grade dress shoes of calf are often glazed or plated to look like glaze. This is a very high polished look.

ARTHUR L. HILL

After 47 years with Leslie's in Belleville and Lindsay, Art Hill retired last August as manager of the Lindsay store. Art and his wife, Margaret are enjoying retirement in Belleville. Art started working for the owner and founder, the late William M. Leslie, in 1921 and was the right arm of the business for many, many years.

Ease Hospital Problem

Doctor Suggests Pay Patients to Stay Home

By ROY PEACOCK
(Staff Reporter)

A Belleville surgeon, Dr. Bruce Morgan, has told the standing health committee in Toronto that Ontario could relieve pressure on its overcrowded hospitals by subsidizing less-ill patients to stay at home.

In a presentation yesterday, Dr. Morgan suggested that Ontario Hospital Services could pay patients $5 a day and provide nursing care, drugs, dressings and even homemaker services if they stay at home.

The submission by Dr. Morgan to the standing committee on health was made at the suggestion of the committee chairman, Dr. R. T. Potter of Belleville, M.P.P. for Quinte riding.

He argued that many doctors now prolong stays in hospital because they know their patients cannot afford, or get, proper home care. He claimed it would be cheaper for Ontario to provide such home care, or even pay to have certain patients in nursing homes.

The Belleville doctor said Dr. Matthew Dymond, provincial health minister, sounds both "naive and uninformed" when he blames hospital overcrowding on doctors who retain patients in hospital beyond their direct medical needs.

"... I suggest that he face up to the problem which obviously exists between the status of the in-patient and the out-patient under the Ontario Hospital scheme."

He said patients occupying hospital beds — at a cost to the OHSC of $40 per day — have all their care paid for, while out-patients must underwrite their own care.

He said doctors are often unwilling to discharge a patient from the hospital who could be treated in out-patient facilities because of the drain it would be on their financial resources.

Similarly, convalescent patients who could be cared for in nursing homes are kept in hospital since nursing home care is not covered under hospital insurance benefits.

What was needed, he said, was a program to improve the status of out-patient care "so that in-patient status will not seem so comparatively attractive and so that the natural instinct of the patient to return to the bosom of his family may become effective without the patient suffering severe economic loss."

"The break is too great between care for people in hospital and those who are out," he told committee members.

Dr. Morgan referred indirectly to how the present Ontario Hospital Services Commission policy was working to fill the new Belleville General Hospital addition.

"In Belleville, in order to attain slightly more than 300 new hospital beds it was necessary for the people of Ontario to pay out $18,000,000, which by my calculations is "something in the area of $30,000 per bed."

"To maintain these beds costs $40 per day paid for in a large part by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

Dr. Morgan said the number of beds was based on a 1963 requirement and with a waiting list already extended into August. It would indicate that needs have not nearly been met.

The submission of the Belleville doctor was that with a budget of $20,000 per bed plus $40 per day maintenance, services could be provided to out-patients at no expense to a patient who left the hospital at the earliest possible time, thereby saving on construction of new beds and with no financial hardship to the patient.

He suggested that the O.H.S.C. provide, without a means test, the following:

- Nursing care by the V.O.N. and out-patient department.
- Drugs and dressings (now provided in the out-patient department but not in the home.
- Transportation by taxi if necessary for the therapy or to the doctor's office.
- Cost of homemakers where provided without a means test.
- An incidental living expense allowance of $5. per day.

Dr. Morgan said there was nothing rigid in his suggestions, but simply the intention that if the status of an out-patient is improved by direct contribution from the OHSC, the demand for more beds and shorter hospital stay of patients would be accomplished.

Picton Police Ask Pay Arbitration

By ROBERT DUNNETT
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Picton town police 'ran out of patience' yesterday and a-rved notice of arbitration on t h e Picton Police Commission.

Police started negotiating with the commission early in January, but after three months of negotiations no agreement could be reached. The arbitration document was given to county Judge W. S. Lane, commission chairman.

Policemen do not strike, but when salary negotiations collapse they have the right of arbitration. Const. George Wright, negotiator for the seven-man police force, expressed regret that the two groups could not have settled their differences other than by arbitration.

Mr. Wright admitted that at one point policemen here hoped to reach agreement. In January the negotiator a n d the acting commission chairman, Judge Lane, announced they had reached tentative agreement.

However, time, a new appointment, holidays and illness of Mayor H. J. McFarland all contributed to delays in the commissioners getting together to ratify the agreement. When they did meet last month, there was no agreement among them.

Earlier this month, Const. Wright informed the commission would be given 15 days before the police sought arbitration.

Police are reported to be seeking $7,000 a year for a first class constable. Neither side in the dispute will c o n firm this figure, but Const. Wright said that no contract with the police which expired Dec. 31, 1968, paid a first class policeman $5,400.

Regiment Readies For Busy Weekend

This weekend is shaping up as an active time for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Saturday afternoon the regiment will have an officers' meeting in the Armory. Retired Brig.-gen. D. C. Cameron will direct the meeting.

In attendance will be officers and ex-officers of the regiment.

A main topic will be a proposed regimental journey to Italy to retrace the footsteps taken by the Hasty Pees in World War II.

The journey would be taken in 1970, the 25th anniversary of the war's end.

Saturday will end with a mess dinner in the evening.

Guest speaker will be Maj. Gen. George Kitching who will speak on the humanitarian aspects of the military pertaining to youth.

Sunday sees the annual Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment inspection.

Inspecting officer will be Brig. Gen. G. R. A. Odlin, commander of the Army's Ontario region with headquarters in Oakville. The inspection will begin at two p.m. and guests and friends have been requested to be at the Armory at 1.45 p.m.

The inspection includes a march past and demonstrations of military training.

It will be followed by a reception in the officers' and sergeants' messes.

Trenton PUC May Face Cuts

TRENTON — The Trenton Public Utilities may have to cut capital spending $45,000 this year.

The commission yesterday met May 5 as the date to meet with Hydro auditors at the eastern region office in Belleville in an attempt to iron out differences in projected revenues.

The commission seeks a total of $177,554 to go ahead with a number of projects aimed at meeting an increasing demand for power and service.

A communication from hydro's Belleville office stipulated the additional revenue the commission expected would not materialize in accordance with the projection.

Chairman Clifford Baker said Ontario Hydro would authorize the commission to issue debentures for the extra capital needed to implement the spending program as planned. The town utilities however, preferred to use current revenue, he said.

Belleville Manpower Centre Manager H. W. Karn and manpower counsellor D. A. MacDonald check Dundas Street East premises where student employment office will be opened May 5.

New Manpower Project

Centre to Aid Students Find Jobs for Summer

By ROY PEACOCK
(Staff Reporter)

The Belleville office of the Canada Manpower Centre this year will embark on a concentrated program in an effort to find summer jobs for many university undergraduates and high school students.

In a new approach to the annual problem, the city Manpower Centre is opening a special "students summer employment centre." It is seeking co-operation from area employers and summer-vacationers in discovering needed jobs.

Manpower centre manager H. W. Karn feels the campaign should be a joint effort, — involving local manpower centres and the communities at large.

All major employers in the district already have been sent letters seeking co-operation in providing temporary summer employment.

The special student summer employment office will be located at 163 Dundas St. East. Space has been made available by the courtesy of Quinte Emergency Measures co-ordinator Col. Angus Duffy and co-operation from the city and Hastings county.

The Dundas street office will be open from May 5 through to the end of August. It will operate under the supervision of D. A. MacDonald, manpower centre counsellor.

Assisting Mr. MacDonald will be two students — a university graduate and a grade 13 high school student. The university student will be at the office commencing May 5. The high school student will take over during July and August.

Already, 104 university undergraduates and 350 high school students have registered with the Belleville office for temporary summer employment. It is anticipated that within the next two weeks another 100 or more university students will be returning home here seeking summer work.

Mr. Karn notes that, in practically every case, all those students will require a paying summer time job to help continue their education.

Manpower counsellor James Stanley feels that, with an expected boom in construction this year, most of the male university students will find summer jobs.

But, he admits, finding employment for female students may pose a greater problem.

The student summer employment centre will be open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. until noon and from 1:00 p.m. until 5:00 p.m.

The "off premise" employment office being set up for students will accomplish two things:

(1) It will allow full attention to be given to the student summer employment problem;

(2) It will give Manpower counsellors, operating at the regular Main Manpower Centre, more time to counsel everyday job seekers.

Suggest Stocking Quinte Waters

Salmon: Bait for More Tourist Dollars?

By ROBERT AVERY
(Staff Reporter)

The Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association has proposed a plan which, if successful, could see salmon-fishing a reality in the Quinte area within two years.

The plan, announced yesterday, proposes stocking the eastern end of Lake Ontario with salmon.

A six-page brief outlines U.S. areas which have implemented the salmon-stocking plan. The state of Michigan has gained some $60,000,000 in tourist revenue in the past three years as a result of the game fish in their area, it claims.

The Quinte area also could benefit, says the brief.

Of prime importance is the tourist dollar attracted by game fish. Availability of salmon, coupled with the non-polluted water here, would have sportsmen flocking to this area, believe association officials.

"If we can supply coho salmon-fishing that is safe from contamination, these sportsmen will come up from the United States in the thousands," states the brief.

William Menzies, association member responsible for the document did not say how much of an increase the plan would bring to the tourist income here.

There would be other benefits, he said.

Numerous area canning factories could adapt to process the salmon. Once stocking is fully underway, fish could be canned for sale in Ontario, and, perhaps, exported.

Introduction of salmon could solve the problem of the dead shad which pollute area beaches. These shad provide natural food for the salmon as both fish inhabit shallow water, says the brief.

Fishing equipment sales and other smaller businesses could be side developments.

But, the brief emphasizes the importance of the attraction the salmon would have for U.S. tourists.

"The Federal government is spending $100,000,000 to improve the Trent canal system, and we are still only getting 150 boats per year from the United States," states the brief.

Salmon-fishing, from May to November, could increase this traffic, says Mr. Menzies by extending the tourist season from 10 weeks up to seven months.

The brief will be circulated to local municipal councils, chambers of commerce, and sportsmen's clubs for support. Meanwhile, a copy will be sent to Queen's Park for, what Liberal officials hope, will be immediate action.

"If the plan is accepted without any holdups the operation can begin by this fall and we can be fishing for salmon in two years," said Mr. Menzies.

Donald Joss, president of the association, stated that "action couldn't be taken too soon."

"With a plan like this you can't start too soon," he said, "this whole area will benefit but we need immediate action."

The brief also points out that CFB Trenton could be used for charter flights to bring game fishermen to the area.

Meteorologists are on 24-hour duty to warn fishermen of weather changes along with coast guard boats at the base, says the brief.

Trenton's place for a marina, under study for some time would become a chief attraction to the visiting sportsmen.

Most important part of the project is the 18-month maturing period of the fish. During this time the fish must be held in calm ponds.

Mr. Menzies suggests that the public utilities pond west of Trenton be one of the area's chief breeding ground's grounds.

"This pond was constructed at a cost of $450,000 and we could now put it to good use and get some return for the investment on the taxpayers' money," says Mr. Menzies.

Time For Tags

It's tag-time again — and city hall is making a last-minute appeal for all owners to acquire dog licences — before the first day of May.

Otherwise, owners who neglects to purchase tags could face a fine of up to $50.

To make certain all owners comply with the regulations, a city-wide door-to-door check will be made to enforce the by-law.

Animal control responsibilities in the city are being carried out by the Quinte Humane Society, which also has the responsibility of enforcing the dog bylaw.

Dog licences may be purchased either at city hall or at the Quinte Area Humane Society.

Kvarda Will Seek Liberal Presidency

Zdenek Kvarda, Belleville businessman, active in local general, will seek the presidency of the Hastings Liberal Association.

The federal riding association annual convention is expected to be held in late May.

Mr. Kvarda, is a member of the Belleville and District Planning Board and a past president of Ontario Jaycees.

Announcing his candidacy for the position, Mr. Kvarda said he would campaign on a platform of association reform and re-organization.

"The trend has been set by the National Liberal Federation in encouraging participation in the political process. I am a firm believer in this policy," he said. "I feel that the local organization has the responsibility to provide the atmosphere for this type of participation."

The Liberal organization is must be active every month of the year, so opinions and wishes of local people may be expressed to the government at Ottawa, he emphasized.

Mr. Kvarda also called for a fusion of youth and experienced people in the riding to stimulate fresh ideas and positive action.

"I am convinced this riding is capable of electing a Liberal MP and thus give us an effective voice in our government. But, to achieve this, open politics is essential."

Mr. Kvarda is superintendent of Aluminum Star Products in Belleville.

Charles Bates, Shannonville area farmer, is currently president of the association.

Livestock Neglect Charged

Livestock of four Eastern Ontario farmers is still being housed at the Quinte Humane Society Shelter pending court hearings on neglect charges.

The Quinte shelter is the only one of its kind in the region large enough to house a large quantity of animals.

The four eastern Ontario farmers were charged with neglect yesterday by the Ontario Humane Society.

Charged are Lorne Wannamaker, 46, of Bath; Victor Schroeder, 37, and Harold Schroeder, 42, both of Egansville; and Robert Lay, 40, of Barrie.

Democracy and Poverty

Canada's Indian and Eskimo population, and its "working poor", (which includes members of the indigenous population as well as whites) have been in the spotlight again of late.

Since Indian students attend high schools along with others it follows that they should have due representation by their own people on school boards. However, according to Tim Reid, Liberal education critic in Ontario, "discretionary" legislation is in force that he says allows attempts by Indian welfare this week to get trustee appointments on two school boards. He claims school boards in Lambton and Kent counties in southwestern Ontario, will not appoint Indian trustees.

Mr. Reid indicated he planned to raise the matter in the Legislature. The issue is a valid one. Indians are still far from achieving their full rights, and until they do Canada can neither consider itself a true democracy nor look askance at the denial of similar rights in other countries.

What about "the working poor?" Such a title is relative, of course. What with taxation inequities and the cost of living, Canadians at large may well claim to be members of this group. But some are worse off than others. Here in Belleville, areas like Foster ward and Hillcrest house large numbers of people in this category. The Economic Council, of Canada, in a brief presented recently to the new Senate committee on poverty, says the working poor are in many ways a forgotten group in efforts to combat poverty.

The Council says that in addition to government programs to help the disadvantaged regions of Canada and needy groups like the native peoples, an attack must be made on the problem of raising the incomes of the working poor, those who have jobs for at least a part of the year but do not earn enough to lift their families over the poverty line.

One in every five Canadians lives in poverty, according to the council. Who in the main constitute this body of disadvantaged people — and where do they live for the most part? The council gives the answer: "It is readily apparent that the incidence of poverty in Canada — the likelihood of a given person being poor — is notably higher in the Atlantic provinces and Eastern Quebec; in rural areas; in Indian, Eskimo and Metis communities; in families headed by widows, divorcees and deserted wives; and in families headed by men who are not in the labor force on account of old age or other reasons."

The latter groups are not usually looked upon as badly off, in the sense the native peoples, these little fault of their own, are; but the fact is many are struggling along on low incomes and trying to support families on them.

Here then are two aspects of Canadian life that require further study — and action to alleviate injustices where they exist. The democratic processes must embrace all the peoples of this country. And the means must be found — including the extension of educational services and self-help — to aid those living, to one degree or another, in poverty.

Old Soldiers

The Beatles may never sing again in public as a group, but there is always Crosby, "the old groaner" (he is 65) to fill the vacuum and show he can still compete. And sure, what's wrong with stealing a Beatles number like Hey Jude while you are at it?

And there is Elvis, an aging 34 but still at it and hitting the charts in the polls with haunting pieces like Memories. And there are those tuneful and compelling Negroes of The Fifth Dimension, also tops in popularity with Aquarius and Let the Sun Shine In.

And how about Glen Campbell, the young man from Arkansas, from obscurity to fame in a comparatively short space, new and fresh on the pop and country music scene. And the melodies . . . they have something too these days. Evidently they are there and everyone is humming them.

But through it all the old soldiers of the entertainment world soldier on. You forgot who? Ah yes, Sinatra . . . another stripping at 54 and still doing his thing!

Guys and Dolls

In the battle of the sexes teenage-style, it makes it all the more difficult to distinguish between boys and girls when each, by conversation and mode of dress, effects the attributes of the other. An example is the habit girls have of saying among themselves: "Hey you guys . . ." Girls should be themselves — feminine — but pretending they are boys hardly qualifies.

PEI Consumers Win the Day

Public Becoming More Involved in Community Decisions

". . . people whose patience is not unlimited and whose power is greater than sometimes supposed." The following article affords a number of examples of "People's Democracy" in action. Not in the Soviet or communist world, where the term is a misnomer, but rather decision-making at the voter level. The parallel with the contemporary scene in Belleville is obvious and needs no further comment.

* * *

By Fraser Robertson in the Globe and Mail

It is the fashion these days for governments to express the deepest concern for the welfare of consumers, both by speeches and by legislation giving ministers and civil servants ample power to protect the people from being cheated, conned, gilled, mialed, confused, overcharged, disappointed, injured or otherwise inconvenienced, deliberately or inadvertently, by principals or agents or even by their own actions.

The trend was clearly defined recently by one official who said the old precept, let the buyer beware, was being changed to: let the merchant beware.

In view of what happened recently in Canada's smallest province, it would seem that merchants would do well to harken to that revised precept. But it also would seem that they should be wary of it is not simply the protective, restrictive and punitive powers of governments but the wrath of the people themselves. In Prince Edward Island, even the Government ran for cover when the mice roared.

We are pretty much accustomed nowadays to minority groups rising up and attacking vested interests and the authorities who presume to know what is best, while the most of us look on timidly. But in Prince Edward Island, it was the other way around. It was the majority of the people in that placid community that rose up and dictated to both the vested interests and to the authorities what the consumers would accept.

The vested interests in this test of strength were represented by the provincial retail merchants' association. Alarmed apparently by the prospect of more licensed gaming halls from a proposed new retail shopping plaza in Charlottetown built around a large chain department and food store, some retailers first attempted to have the City Council restrict night shopping. To do that, it was necessary to obtain enabling legislation from the province, and a member of the Legislature undertook to introduce a private bill, the Commercial Establishment Business Hours Act.

Restrictions upon the hours during which retailers are permitted to serve customers are common enough all across Canada, that the PEI Legislature may not have thought the public had strong feelings, one way or another, about when it did its shopping. If so, it soon found out it was wrong.

Although the bill was passed on second reading last week by a vote of 17-12, such a storm of public protest had broken out that amendments were proposed. Petitions against the bill were circulated, several village councils in the province passed resolutions condemning it, groups representing consumers, women, farmers, labor, war veterans and fraternals denounced it. This week, the bill was in effect killed.

The issue of all these protests made it reasonably plain that a very large number of the people in the province were concerned not merely about shopping hours but about the whole structure of competition in the retail market and with what they believed to be the invigorating effect on the local economy of new enterprise. Those people were not interested in protecting any vested interest, it seemed, nor did it seem they were much interested in being protected.

This rejection of interference in the retail market is not unique. Last January, the Fredericton City Council tossed out a proposal for restrictive legislation, last November, a vote in Edmonton was in favor of night store openings. Before that, the people of North Bay vigorously protested after city council passed an ordinance limiting night shopping. But in Prince Edward Island, a relatively unsophisticated community, one viewed as old-fashioned ideas perhaps still prevail, it was interesting to see the democratic process being brought spontaneously into action when the parliamentary process seemed about to fail the people.

There is a moral here, of course, for governmental bodies that presume to say what is good for the community, province or nation. But it also contains a warning to businessmen that in future they will have to do more than be wary of governments attempting to do what is best for the people. They may have to deal with the people whose patience is not unlimited and whose power is greater than sometimes supposed.

"I did my spring cleaning over the weekend and had the junk man pick up everything that was useless, cluttered up space or didn't work — I kind of miss Ralph already!"

Education Costs Reach Alarming Peak

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

At a recent panel discussion regarding discipline in schools, one question sparked considerable comment: "Who is in control of our schools?" Some felt the students were responsible to the teachers, who are responsible to the principals, who are responsible to the board of trustees, who in turn are responsible to the Department of Education, who are responsible to no one. They set the policy, decide the curriculum, tell us which school our children will attend and whether they will ride a bus or walk, what qualifications and salary their teachers will have and the only part we play is that of the magic pitcher of endless taxation dollars to keep the department supplied with funds.

Education costs have spiralled to the point where people are alarmed — the single voices of protest are joining and the murmuring is steadily increasing in volume. Many people in the "average" Quinte area with a low income bracket can barely make ends meet now and find it difficult, if not impossible to set any money aside for saving. Most find it necessary to budget for such things as housing, food and clothing. And we're being taxed more and more heavily at every level of government.

It has to stop somewhere — and 100 percent-plus increases in education taxation is as good a place as any to call a halt. MPPs receiving five figure salaries perhaps cannot understand the difficulties experienced by people earning less than $5,000 a year who are trying to maintain a home and raise a family, or pensioners on fixed incomes who are in danger of losing their homes due to heavy taxation. This proposed increase could, very well be the straw that will break the taxpayer's back — those of us who are not already "broke" most of the time, that is.

It may be that teachers with higher degrees are better equipped to teach our children, and that they deserve higher salaries for having such degrees; perhaps our children do need more up-to-date educational facilities—but they also need a home and food and clothing and medical care. And there is a very real threat to their security when every earned family dollar must be accounted for on a tight budget. We can't afford any more tax increase — we can scarcely afford the old tax rate.

Bravo, district Reeves who have united in refusing to levy increased school taxes.

Department of Education officials can disabuse [illegible] these protests from voters and representatives whose patience, as well as purses, are being overtaxed. Government officials were elected to represent us — the voters — they should listen to heed our wishes and to speak out in favor of the people who elected them to office.

Representatives from 46 countries met in San Francisco to prepare the charter of the United Nations 24 years ago today—in 1945. The conference took place at a time when the Second World War was drawing to a close in Europe and the gathering represented the hopes of war-weary nations for permanent peace. The ranks of the world body now have swelled to more than 100 countries, including many of the newly independent countries of Africa and Asia.

Civil Strife Feared

Narrow Victory for One-man One-vote Principle in Ulster

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Besieged by both friend and foe Prime Minister Terence O'Neill may have purchased a little more time with his narrow party victory on the one man-one vote principle. But he still faces a major struggle before the festering wounds of Northern Ireland are healed.

Bernadette Devlin, the fiery, fledgling member of Parliament, says hope for a compromise has come too late.

This youthful, capable leader of the Mid-Ulster poor and underprivileged is convinced that the six counties are bound for the turmoil and destruction of civil war.

But while her outlook is too gloomy, the struggle in the streets of Londonderry and elsewhere will leave their scars.

Hatred between Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists is deep. Equal voting privileges for the minority Catholics is likely to leave only a small impression on those struggling for better housing and jobs.

O'Neill has, therefore, a long way to go. There is little doubt that if he had his own way, this moderate Unionist leader would push hard for full democracy, equal rights and privileges for all Ulstermen.

But he is hemmed in by powerful factions within his own Unionist party. Protestants outnumber Catholics in Northern Ireland two to one and the last election demonstrated that O'Neill's popularity among the Protestants has declined.

Even amid the present turmoil and warnings of the British government that the Ulster government must remove discrimination, O'Neill managed to win only a 28-27 parliamentary party victory to revise laws so that all taxpayers, not just landlords—may vote in local council elections.

Those in his own party who oppose him maintain his action will merely encourage the restless demonstrators.

More threatening perhaps, is that the Protestant extremists are likely to increase their violent counter-action if they decide that the Catholics are winning too many victories.

Thus, O'Neill, as much as Bernadette Devlin, represents the torture of a fragmented people. Perhaps only the presence of an outside force, such as British troops, may prevent the threat of civil war.

Manitoba's Beginnings

Winnipeg Tribune

From an archaeological standpoint, the flooding of Southern Indian Lake may be a tragedy as Dr. J. V. Wright, president of the Canadian Archaeological Association has warned.

None will dispute the value of archaeological surveys and discoveries nor underestimate the painstaking work involved in finding missing links in Manitoba's geographic and ethnologic birth.

But it would be naive to assume that only on the shores of Southern Indian Lake can it be proved who was there first — the Cree Indian bands or the Chippewyans.

It should be noted that archaeologists and conversationlists abide by the doctrine of man learning to live within his natural environment and doing nothing to change it.

When power sites were developed with the course of the Winnipeg River, similar objections were heard.

It now appears that 58 historic and prehistoric sites have been found in the Metro area with artifacts indicating man lived here perhaps 3,000 years ago.

Surely none would suggest a halt to all urban growth until all these sites have been excavated and the findings properly recorded.

Directors Air Views On Chamber of Commerce

Chamber of Commerce Week ends on Monday but for the past week, business, industry and government, have all been recognizing the services that Chambers perform across Canada.

Here, in Belleville directors of the local chamber express their views on their organization and state the various projects they believe could improve its performance.

"Promote free enterprise", no more and no less is a priority project for Frank Murray, a 15 - year member of the Chamber of Commerce.

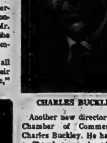
Mr. Murray is a director this year and is active on a committee dealing with Chamber activities. He is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Week program.

Although he feels free enterprise should be the main concern of the Chamber, Mr. Murray also feels that the chamber's role in the community is significant.

Still "it is necessary for all organizations to review their objectives from time to time," he stated.

CHARLES BUCKLEY

Another new director of the Chamber of Commerce is Charles Buckley. He has been a Chamber member for the past four years.



"Within the framework of available dollars," Mr. Buckley feels, a sincere community effort is being made by the Chamber.

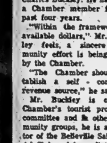
"The Chamber should establish a self - controlled revenue source," he said.

Mr. Buckley is on the Chamber's tourist promotion committee and is other community groups, he is a director of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club and immediate past-president of St. Joseph's Parent - Teachers Association.

Mr. Buckley feels a review of Chamber aims is "an excellent opportunity to take an objective look at the state of the Chamber and determine its future course."

* * *

FRANK MURRAY



Besides his chamber activities Mr. Murray is a director of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, chairman of the Radio Sales Bureau in Toronto, chairman of the National Affiliates Committee of the CBC and an honorary life member of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

* * *

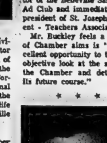
Three years as a Chamber member, two as a director, Robert (Bob) Ioely feels that the organization should involve itself in projects reflecting needs of the members, as well as other economic and other regulatory bodies.

And "projects where the special knowledge and expertise of the members can contribute" should also be a concern he said.

He is chairman of a committee set up to recommend improvements on the dock facilities for tourists.

JOHN (JACK) MOSLEY

John (Jack) Mosley, a Chamber director for four months, said he would like to point he agrees with Chamber activities so far.



As a new director, though, Mr. Mosley stated that he does not feel he has sufficient knowledge of Chamber activities to comment in depth.

Mr. Mosley hopes that Chamber activities will increase.

Possibly "some activity run by the Chamber" could be found to "enable it to fund itself without appealing to city council.

Besides his new director-ship at the Chamber Mr. Mosley is treasurer of the YMCA, a member of the Rotary Club, 1968 chairman of the Easter Seals campaign, chairman of the United Community financial division and member of the Quinte Curling Club.

* * *

ROBERT F. U. ICELY

Mr. Icely feels that the Chamber is meeting needs of the members, but agrees that a periodic review of aims and objectives a good thing.

"The proposed study will help keep the chamber activities in step with the changing needs of our membership and of the Belleville community," he said.

Mr. Icely is also a director of the city's industrial commission and the YMCA, for which organization he is also chairman of the building and property committee.

He is working on a plan to provide an increased range of athletic activities for YMCA members.

with the industrial commission, summer student employment and involvement with national issues to safeguard the free enterprise system.

Mr. Bullard feels the Chamber is "doing well for Belleville, now" and "the scope of ideas now under study augur well for an even more ambitious program."

"We have a strong committee which is likely to come up with good ideas, although their realization may depend on financial resources of the Chamber," he says.

Besides membership in the Chamber Mr. Bellstedt is director and past - president of the Kiwanis club, a former member of the advisory vocational committee, city of Quinte High School board, warden of St. Thomas Anglican church and chairman of the Kiwanis sheltered workshop project.

Automation Increases The Cost

Automation is a wonderful thing!

It can make for speedy, controlled, mass - production — but it can also result in slightly higher costs.

That is the thinking of Armind Quickert, manager of Reid's Dairy in Belleville where recently an automatic milk bagging machine — the first in Belleville — has been installed.

The automated machine produces the new three - quart plan milk pack containers which recently were introduced in the city.

The "three-quart packages were evolved to convenience housewives. They no longer have to bother with washing and returning bottles or jugs. But they pay for the convenience through an increase of just over one cent per quart.

The bagging machines automatically cut sections from a continuous roll of transparent film, forms the bags, fills them with milk and seals them at a rate of 27 units a minute.

But the film costs one and one-third cents per bag — and it takes three workers to man the machine and place them in single unit sacks into the three quart sacks for delivery or retail sale, says Mr. Quickert.

And that's the reason for the extra milk cost as compared with the conventional three-quart jugs, he said.

Lebanese Premier Quits

BEIRUT (AP) — Premier Rashid Karami of Lebanon met today with President Charles Helou and told reporters afterward Helou had accepted his resignation. He hedged when asked whether the president would ask him to form a new cabinet but he urged that a coalition government be formed.

Karami resigned Thursday night after four months in office, saying the country was split over whether Lebanon should become a base for Arab guerrilla action against Israel.

Quinte Municipalities To Get Special Grants

"We have no idea how the adjustment will affect us until we re-run the grant calculations on the new formula," Mr. Merserau said.

In Picton, Prince Edward board of education officials refused to rejoice over the subsidy. Two weeks ago the Prince Edward board announced that the tax levy would rise by 190 per cent unless the provincial grant structure were revised.

"It's hard to say yet, but it looks as though we are in line with the 13 per cent per pupil limit on increases," said A. E. Sherit, business administrator.

"It will be next week before the formulas for working out the costs are known," he said. "We are awaiting the provincial grant form so we can make our calculations."

* * *

Formula Is Outlined

and make the necessary reductions.

This is how the formula would work:

A municipal school board with costs in 1968 averaged $400 per pupil would be permitted an increase to $460 this year.

The additional $60 would be calculated against money that can be raised through the equalized assessment. The amount above the sum that could be raised by a one mill increase in assessment will be assumed by the province.

Assistance will be available also on a different basis to each of the territorial districts of Northern Ontario.

Mr. Davis said that in those districts the province used to meet the full cost of educating secondary school students in districts too small to build their own high schools.

These students now are included in the larger board units, so there is "an increased liability for the boards and their municipalities."

"The full cost of education or former non-resident pupils outside the home board's area now will be included in the new board's grants."

He said the new measures "will eliminate the extreme mill rate increases that might otherwise have occurred and . . . any problems along these lines will be alleviated."

Mr. Davis said financial problems of the boards will also be eased by a government move to speed up the instalment payment of provincial grants in 1969.

Payments for May and June will both be paid in May, and those scheduled for July and August will be paid in June.

Because the former boards disappeared on Dec. 31 and the new boards began work Jan. 1, it had been difficult for the new boards to know actual costs for last year.

Budgets were complicated by the boards which spent all surpluses in 1968 and "came into the new set-up either without any balance, or in quite a number of cases, with considerable deficit."

Other factors which affected the 1969 budgets included integration of employment practices, salaries, fringe benefits and bus routes.

For the majority of boards, difficulties arose "because of the necessity to apportion the amount to be raised . . . among a number of municipalities having differences in the basis of assessment. . . ."

"Even with these disparities there are many municipalities in almost every jurisdiction where the increase in local mill rates is modest and quite manageable as they stand at present. But for the others, the impact of apportionment among the municipalities and the assumption of a share of the increased normal costs would create too sharp a rise in 1969."

Must Keep Good Teachers

Bonuses for Excellence

TRENTON — Eric Runesares, Board of Education director had a capacity crowd at the annual inter-service club dinner last night bonuses should be paid to good teachers as a way to keep them in the classroom.

Mr. Runesares said if the bonus system is not adopted the good teachers will continue to seek administrative positions for higher salaries.

"Keep the money where the action is," he said.

"A teacher's worth should be evaluated by his or her strength in a particular field, rather that demanding they show signs of excellence in everything."

Teachers should be offered encouragement, then, if they can't make the grade be asked to leave the staff said Mr. Runesares.

The board director also touched on student involvement in education activities. He labelled student participation as a "good thing."

"For years people have been pleading for youngsters to show interest. Now that they are reacting there are complaints," he said.

Mr. Runesares added that he is all for dialogue with students.

"They have a lot to tell us and I feel if you ignore them they will find another way."

Education Needs Are Examined

Task forces of teachers and laymen are now investigating the educational needs of Hastings county's students.

Organized two weeks ago at the suggestion of education director Eric Runesares, the groups are preparing recommendations on the educational needs of the county's four areas.

The goals and order of priority they suggest will form the basis of future planning by the board and its officials.

Eventually, Mr. Runesares hopes the task forces will involve all citizens in discussions of county education. This includes evaluation of the work of services and courses of study.

The 15-member Belleville task force has already held two meetings, and will attend an April 28 county board meeting as a group.

Presentation of recommendations to the director of education are expected from all task forces by mid-May. So far, topics discussed by the Belleville group have included community use of schools, continuing education for teachers and parents, use of volunteers as school aids, and continuity in elementary and secondary education.

Co-chairman of the Belleville group are Donald G. Lockyer principal of Queen Victoria School and W. R. MacKay, principal of BCI and VS.

Representing students on the task force are Miss Elaine Sickle of Loyalist College and Douglas Wannacott of BCI.

Other members are Russell Bedrick, Ken Daley, Dr. E. L. Dixon, Mrs. Miriam Graham, Mrs. Lee Jourard, Rev. William Lamb, Mrs. G. Least, R. C. Moorman, K. Oliveto.

Regional Advisor Speaks at Club Meet

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Belleville were privileged to hear the Regional Advisor of District No. 11, at their dinner meeting at the Sun Valley Inn recently. The speaker, Miss Leesla Rogers, is a member of the Kingston Club of the Business and Professional Women's and has served that club in a great number of capacities.

Miss Rogers stated that the federation is the only national group that has as its first concern the conditions under which women work. At the local level, the prime task then of the Belleville club is to work to educate the local authorities of business people in the importance of career and vocational training for girls in the community to look beyond the stereotyped occupations for women.

It follows that the clubs should work for the abolishment of discrimination against women, which women continually working to expose, oppose and eliminate unfair and unrealistic classification in local wages, career opportunities, job levels and employment benefits that discriminate women from taking employment and penalizing them when they do.

Miss Rogers quoted Dr. Bascom Kessets of the University of British Columbia, Religious Studies Department, "Women in North America are the most emancipated as compared to women in the middle east. There is little training of women as counsellors, lawyers or doctors. All the way down in history women played an important role in administration and justice. There was no talk of one role for male and one for female".

The Regional Advisor suggested all should help to improve the status and promote the interest of working women. Emphasis was given to young girls to help them complete their education; some work has been done to help the older women in a new career. There have been some successful "Careers' Preview" programs.

Miss Rogers was thanked by Miss Joane Stephenson on behalf of the club members and presented with a token of appreciation.

All business reports were read especially concerning the Ontario Provincial Convention for May 23 at Club Cedars.

RUNNING FOR THEIR LIFE — Group of housewives jog around park in six-month experiment to improve physical condition. Organized by the leader, physical education specialist Mike Yuhasz, women claim they can run more than half a mile without stopping. At first, many of them couldn't complete one circuit of track. (CP Photo)

Jogging for Housewives Part of Fitness Course

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Marg Johnston has lost seven inches off her hips—all in the name of science.

She's one of 21 housewives who forsake early-morning domestic chores to help physical education specialist Mike Yuhasz perfect a program for body fitness.

She jogs, bends, stretches, jogs, bends, stretches and feels great about it.

"It's amazing what this course has done for us," agrees Ruth Cameron.

"When I started I couldn't even run around the track. Now I can run a half-mile without stopping. You feel so much better."

Dr. Yuhasz, a fitness researcher at the University of Western Ontario, recruited the housewives last October to determine if his self-styled jogging program could be applied to females, and to gauge fitness changes.

From a jogging start of three 100-yard laps daily, the women have worked their distance up to a mile and a half, interspersed with calisthenics.

There are a couple here who can run three or four miles without stopping," Dr. Yuhasz says.

He rates the 35- to 45-year-old women about as fit as many college girls half their age.

The women themselves have nothing but praise for the six-month exercise. It put the into winter, cut incidence of colds, increased housework ability and buoyed up their attitude toward life, they say.

The women attend the campus-based sessions at least three mornings a week, and only one has dropped out of the class since it began.

Legion Activities

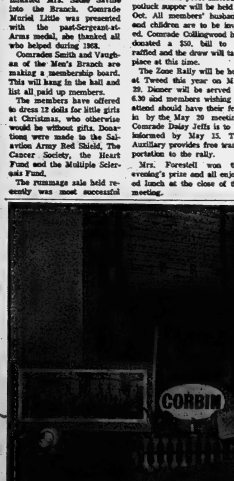
LADIES' AUXILARY BRANCH 99

Tuesday evening saw a good attendance for the regular April meeting of the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies' Auxiliary, Branch 99.

After the usual opening ceremonies president Chomick initiated Mrs. Sadie Saville into the Branch. Comrade Muriel Little was presented with the past-Sergeant-at-Arms medal, she thanked all who helped during 1968.

Comrades Smith and Vaughan of the Men's Branch are making a membership board. This will hang in the hall and list all paid up members.

The members have offered to dress 12 dolls for little girls at Christmas, who otherwise would be without gifts. Donations were made to the Salvation Army Red Shield, The Cancer Society, the Heart Fund and the Multiple Sclerosis Fund.



The rummage sale held recently was most successful and Thursday afternoon euchres are still popular.

President Edna Semark listed several banquets to be catered to in April and May. She would welcome any help from members who can spare a little time.

It was decided not to hold a bazaar this year. Instead a potluck supper will be held in Oct. All members' husbands and children are to be invited. Comrade Collingwood has donated a $50, ball to be raffled and the draw will take place at this time.

The Zone Rally will be held at Tweed this year on May 29. Dinner will be served at 6.30 and members wishing to attend should have their fees in by the May 9 meeting. Comrade Daisy Jeffs is to be informed by May 15. The Auxiliary provides free transportation to the rally.

Mrs. Foresell won the evening's prize and all enjoyed lunch at the close of the meeting.

After working at International Hardware Ltd. for the past 40 years Mrs. Helen Partridge, who isn't even retiring yet, was honored at an employee supper for her. Here, she stands with the gifts she received in recognition of her service.

40-year Employee Honored

An auspicious event took place recently at the Sun Lock Gardens Belleville when fellow employees in the general offices at International Hardware Company gathered to honor Mrs. Helen Partridge on completion of 40 years of service in the hardware business on April 22.

Mrs. Partridge commenced her long and distinguished career back in 1929 when she was an order and invoice clerk with the Springer Lock Company. When the company was acquired by the American Hardware Company in 1931, Mrs. Partridge carried on in the same capacity along with the chief of exporting. Five years later in 1936, she was promoted to the Corbin Lock Sales Division and in 1945 was appointed assistant to General Sales Manager at the plant and has continued in this role which she capably fills today.

At the dinner party in her honor she was presented with an interesting trophy by the company which was embellished with company products of which she is so familiar.

Mrs. Partridge was also presented with many individual gifts from her fellow workers to show the high esteem in which she is held.

RAWDON WI-C VARIETY NIGHT

A large number of people attended the variety concert in Mount Pleasant United Church Hall sponsored by the Rawdon Charge Wi-C Group.

President Lloyd Dunham welcomed the audience and Rev. W. C. Cox was master of ceremonies.

Mrs. W. C. Cox led the sing song with Mrs. Gerald Clancy as piano accompanist. Brian Cosbey contributed accordion music, after which Janice and Valerie Clancy sang duets. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lang contributed piano and violin music.

Beverly and Carolyn Lewis, Foxboro gave vocal and musical selections. Steven and Denise Jackson gave a tap dance number, and later, Judith McAdam sang with Jill McAdam as accompanist.

Rendering piano music was Gerald Taylor and daughter Beth of Burnbrae. Randel Scott gave a humorous reading. Mrs. J. Pollock and Mrs. Fred Beckett sang and Bill McArton of Stirling, contributed piano music.

The evening closed with the serving of refreshments.

The Experts Say

Symptoms of Food Poisoning Like Indigestion

OTTAWA (CP) — Food-borne illness, popularly referred to as food poisoning, may be caused by eating food contaminated by harmful bacteria, the consumer division of the federal health department's food and drug directorate says.

The symptoms are usually an upset stomach with severe pains, diarrhea, nausea and a general upset feeling. It can be mistaken for acute indigestion.

A food may look, taste and smell all right and yet cause an unpleasant illness if it has been exposed to contamination by harmful bacteria.

These bacteria come from such sources as a dirty kitchen or factory; food handlers with unwashed hands, bad coughs, or infected cuts; flies, insects and rats which may carry contamination and transfer it to food.

Officers from the food and drug directorate inspection service make regular inspections of factories, bakeries, retail stores and storage places to ensure that regulations are followed.

However the consumer is advised to follow these precautions:

—Look for branded meat with a government-approved stamp.

—Keep vacuum-packaged meat refrigerated.

—When choosing hot barbecue meats, it is best to buy meat hot right off the spit or to reheat it completely at home.

—Select frozen and perishable food last during shopping, especially in the hot summer months.

—Follow storage directions on the labels of perishable or frozen foods.

—Promptly refrigerate leftovers from prepared dishes.

—For safe storage, keep cold food at less than 40 degrees and keep hot food at 140 degrees at least.

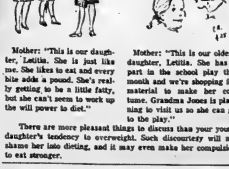
—Refrigerate all dairy and whipped vegetable-oil products such as toppings.

—On a picnic or a trip, take extra care of foods which spoil easily in warm temperatures.

—Food hygiene is always necessary when handling food.

—Serve prepared food containing eggs, milk or gravy within two hours or refrigerate.

—Refrigerate dishes like potato salad, chicken pies or chicken salad as soon as they are made in order to avoid bacteria growth.



—Always follow the time and temperature given on the labels for cooking frozen foods.

—Thoroughly cook all poultry and promptly refrigerate leftovers.

—Thoroughly clean cutting boards after every use. Cracked or scarred boards are a health hazard.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "This is our daughter, Letitia. She is just like me. She likes to eat and every bite adds a pound. She's really getting to be a little fatty, but she can't seem to work up the will power to diet."

There are more pleasant things to discuss than your young daughter's tendency to overweight. Such discourtesy will not shame her into dieting, and it may even make her compulsion to eat stronger.

Mother: "This is our oldest daughter, Letitia. She has a part in the school play this month and we're shopping for material to make her costume. Grandma Jones is planning to visit us so she can go to the play."

Club Activities

ACW CONTACT CLUB

The regular meeting of Contact Club was held recently and a good number of members were present. During the business agenda, the reports from the various committees were made and correspondence was read by the club secretary, Laura Stafford. Edith Pringle and Pam Park, conveners for the confirmation reception, spoke briefly regarding the reception and expressed thanks to all for their efforts.

Tentative dates for upcoming events are: "Family Life Dept." picnic, June 8, and a travelling supper on May 3. Joan Miller and Laura Stafford will be responsible for the next meeting on May 5. It is hoped all members will try to get out for this as a tour of the Hastings County Museum has been arranged.

A social hour including games concluded the evening and hostesses for the evening Kathy Drouillard and Lillian Middleton served coffee.

Successful Living

Mom Blames Herself for Daughters' Weight Problem

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I noticed the letter concerning Libby Henderson and her weight problem. How she lost a great many pounds and I can imagine the lift to her morale.

I have two daughters ages 23 and 25 years, both married, with two children. They both weigh well over 200 pounds and I am worried about what this is doing to their families, to say nothing of their own state of mind.

I feel very responsible for what is happening to my daughters. They had a very unhappy, insecure childhood. I had seven children, now they are grown up and my heart is heavy. I see the folly of the way we brought them up. Every one of them had several hang-ups.

When I see how unable they are to cope with life, I am guilt-stricken. I read somewhere that a child who does not get the love and security of two loving parents up until five or six years old will never be able to handle success or failure.

Now I see the truth of these words. My children are all quite bright and nice looking but just can't seem to be happy. I didn't mean to write all this. My main concern is how to get the weight off my two daughters. Food to them seems to be like alcohol to an alcoholic. — Hung Up.

Dear Hung Up: All kids need happy loving parents real early in life. But since it seems yours didn't get just that, better take note of where it's at now, as the hippies say.

Time comes when a grown child can no longer afford to grieve over an unhappy past — and neither can you. The human spirit has tremendous resilience. Your girls must face their own plight, understand how they got there, and have some desire themselves to get out of it.

Today we have counsellors, clubs, nutrition knowledge, movie builders galore. Even alcoholics can extricate themselves from slavery to the bottle.

Forget your guilt feelings; talk to your girls. Then don't nag. It is their battle now.

Dear Doris: We have been assigned a Social Studies unit on Australia. I thought my students might find it interesting to write to a class their own age in Australia.

Could you give me some idea of where to write to arrange such a project? — Student Teacher.

Dear Teacher: Fine idea. Broadening and imaginative. Write in departments of education at one or more of the state capitals there.

Stress the need for speed. Send your letter air mail (25 cents per half ounce) and request air mail reply. Or better still, send off a trial balloon in the way of a class letter, asking a state department of education to forward it to a class at same age and stage as yours.

* * *

Dear Doris: Could you please tell me a solution of how to get about telling a person he has a very bad breath problem. It is very difficult to work with this person every day. He also works in a public place. — Sick.

Dear Sick: It isn't easy. One tactful dentist friend handed a lady a sample of a tasty mouth spray. She had brought him a paperback he wanted.

So he was able to say, "You brought me a present. How here's one for you." When she smiled and took it, she asked, "So that my breath will smell better?"

His answer: "We all need it, sometimes." Didn't really point the finger, did he? Yet she was wise and took the hint.

Could you find a breath spray and leave it on his desk with a clipping of this column?

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.)

Women's Institutes

(CARMEL W.I.)

The April meeting of the Carmel Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Pound.

The president, Mrs. Russell Ritz took charge of the business for the annual meeting. Reports for the year were given by the secrcary-treasurer and the standing committee conveners.

Mrs. J. Lucas, district president took charge of the installation of the following officers for 1969-70: past president, Mrs. J. Lucas; president, Mrs. R. Ritz; first vice-president, Mrs. G. Graham; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. E. Ross; district director, Mrs. C. Sullivan; assistant district director, Mrs. H. Elliott; institute directors, Mrs. R. Love, Mrs. D. Martin, Mrs. H. Pound.

Several committee conveners were also named.

Mrs. Harold Pound took charge of the program. Mrs. Pound read a poem after which a vocal duet was given by Helen Treverton and Janet Ross.

Mrs. J. Lucas, district president was guest speaker, and gave a detailed outline of the band book. She stressed the motto "For Home and Country," and that the work of the branch of the Women's Institute shall be non partisan, non sectarian and non-racial. She concluded her talk on the band book with a brief questionnaire and a true and false contest.

She followed by two readings taken from the Free Press Weekly magazine on women's institutes.

Mrs. Pound thanked Mrs. Lucas and presented her with a small gift on behalf of the Carmel Women's Institute. Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants featuring salads and a social period followed.

Popular Meat Recipe Using Blade Steak

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I would like to have a copy of a blade steak and onion dish which I believe was published in your column a couple of years ago. I would be grateful if you could forward it to me or tell me where, I might find a copy. — Margaret F.

ANSWER: You will find a copy in this very column! This has been one of our most popular meat recipes.

ELEANOR'S SWISS BARBECUED BLADE STEAK

(Repeated from July '65 and Aug. '67)

Two 1½-lb. blade or chuck steaks
Flour
¼ cup bacon drippings
½ lemon, sliced thinly

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Salmon (or Lobster) Tulips (see Wed.); Cauliflower; Harvard Beets; Sliced Tomatoes with Herb French Dressing; Pumpkin Pie; Tea.

1 large onion, sliced
2 tbsps. brown sugar
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
½ tsp. barbecue seasoning
1 tbsp. parsley flakes
1¼ cups tomato juice
2 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce

Sprinkle the blade steaks on both sides with flour. Brown them in the hot bacon drippings on both sides. Transfer steaks and fat to roasting pan large enough to fit them in one layer. Arrange lemon slices, then onion slices over steaks. Sprinkle with brown sugar. Then sprinkle over the salt, pepper, barbecue seasoning and parsley flakes. Carefully pour tomato juice and Worcestershire sauce evenly over all. Cover and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hrs. Then reduce heat to 250 deg. Fahr. and bake one hour longer. (This was cookbook lady Eleanor's automatically controlled oven most of the afternoon. At 5:00 p.m. when she returned home from work she found the meat was quite tender so she reduced the heat to retard the cooking until dinner time at 6:00 p.m.)

Ann Landers

Problem Arises From Gramp's Driving

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several days ago I bumped into my 86-year-old grandfather who was driving around the business section. He was lost, confused and unable to identify himself by name. He did not recognize me.

ANN LANDERS

I finally persuaded him to let me get in his car and direct him to his home. I almost had a heart attack as I sat beside him. Twice he began to turn into a one-way street. He nearly hit a pedestrian and did not see a stop sign. All this within 15 minutes.

When we reached the house, I went in, took Grandma aside and explained the situation. She listened with tears in her eyes and admitted that Grandpa should not be driving — that he was endangering not only his life but the lives of others. Grandmas assured me that even though he has occasional lapses of memory, his mind is sharp as a tack.

After much soul searching I sat down and wrote a letter to the Chief of Police Safety. Five days later Grandpa received a letter saying he could no longer drive. The family asked me if I had tipped off the officials and I said yes. Now they are all mad at me. I'm a "traitor" and a "no good louse."

Will you please tell me if, in your opinion, I did the right thing? — DRUMMED OUT OF THE TRIBE.

DEAR DRUMMED: What you did took enormous courage and I salute you. It's too bad the state in which you live does not have mandatory periodic re-examinations for all drivers over 65. Get on the backs of your state legislators. The number of senile, half-blind, half-deaf drivers in this country would give you the screamin' meemies.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope it isn't too late for a man to get in his nickle's worth on the "dead battery" couples who, after ten years of marriage, go completely dead.

If Myrtle and I wanted an excuse to cut back on our sex life we would have some dandies. I work two jobs, a total of 16 hours a day — living proof that physical exhaustion is mostly mental. If a person wants to have enough energy after a hard day's work to make love, he'll manage it.

Myrtle runs after our five kids, takes care of a big house, does the washing, ironing and cooking, plus running errands for the in-laws. She has no outside help and doesn't want any.

But are we too tired for romance? Not on your tintype, Annie. Our batteries are equipped with booster cables called love and respect. Our love life, like wine, gets better with age.

I know I've rambled a lot so please cut this letter down but don't kill the message. — A HAPPY MAN.

DEAR MAN: Here's your letter — and the message is very much alive. Thanks for writing.

"Messiah" Rehearsal at Bridge Street Church

Messiah Is Spirit of Living

"There can be no doubt that man's finest musical achievement in sacred praise is embodied in Handel's magnificent oratorio, 'the Messiah'."

This is the way that Robert Reid has described the music to be performed by Bridge Street United Church augmented choir Monday night.

Mr. Reid, choir director, feels that "set in the incomparable poetry of the King James Bible, the music captures the majesty, tenderness, compassionate humility and tragedy of our Lord's life upon earth."

"The Messiah" will be performed by an ensemble of 70 choristers and instrumentalists.

The performance will feature professional soloists, experienced CBC radio and television performers. Soloists will be Hazelanne Reid and Toronto soloists Larry Marshall, Doris Brown and William Perry.

Members of the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra will provide a string accompaniment. The violinists include Stephen Choma, Marion Streiton, William Grant and Joachim Reimann.

Trumpeter will be Dewyne Ellis. Church organist E. Alec Gordon will provide the organ accompaniment for the performance.

The augmented choir has been working on the major performance since mid-Jan.

Other augmented Bridge Street choir performances have been heard before but this is not the first time for "the Messiah".

Haydn's "Creation" has also been performed in past years.

But this year, the choir is larger. "We're using a bigger group" said Mr. Reid.

The augmented choir performances have more of a purpose than just entertainment.

"For one thing, I think that the church should make a contribution to cultural life in Belleville," said Mr. Reid.

Also, special performances are attractive to church choirs.

"The Messiah' has a total spiritual value. This work spans the entire life of Christ," says the director.

"A performance of 'The Messiah' is more than just a musical event. Rather, if thoughtfully approached, it embraces the spirit of listener and performer alike."

"The work cannot be fully appreciated in one hearing. Instead, each exposure brings a new understanding and a deeper personal involvement."

"To perform this oratorio with the dignity it demands, the Bridge Street United Choir has doubled its ranks with singers from Belleville churches of many denominations.

"Our purpose in presenting this work is our conviction that it will offer our members, their friends and people of all faiths, a truly uplifting experience — one which we honestly believe should not be missed."

Financial proceeds will go to a hospital fund in Nigeria.

Troops Move Camp Equipment

Camp Picton Verdict Delayed

OTTAWA — Any cabinet decision on the disposal of Camp Picton may depend for some time.

That's the indication from Georges Hees, MP Prince Edward - Hastings.

Earlier, Picton Mayor Harvey McFarland said a decision involving negotiations for camp assets to an unnamed aircraft company would come before yesterday's regular cabinet meeting.

But, said Mr. Hees, the bombshell of Transport Minister Hellyer's resignation, took precedence over all other issues at yesterday's session.

Later, said the MP, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons another cabinet meeting would not be held until next week.

"It's my understanding no other matters were dealt with (by the cabinet) other than the Hellyer resignation," said Mr. Hees.

"I sincerely hope it (the camp negotiation) will be acted on in the very near future," he added.

Meantime, at the camp, guardsmen now are clearing out equipment in readiness for a September shutdown.

Outer Space Party Theme

Ballet Guild In Orbit

Blast off is at eight o'clock Saturday evening and splashdown will be three and one half hours later.

That's the way the National Ballet Guild Belleville association views its upcoming wine and cheese party.

For the unprepared, entering the Bleecker Hall at the fairgrounds might make them think they had strolled into the set of some elaborate science-fiction production.

Suspended are rocket satellites—made from aluminum light reflectors — hovering over lunar landscapes resembling metal shavings.

Waiter thanks will simulate splash-down capsules with weather balloons as celestial spheres.

As a final touch, all guests are being asked to wear space suits. Past successes and the unique theme of this year's event have sold out tickets for the event.

Quinte Area MPs Claim Cabinet Split Deeper Than Outlined

OTTAWA (Special) — Paul Hellyer's resignation indicates a split in the Liberal party and shows truly the condition of the Liberal government in Ottawa, according to Leo Grills, MP for Hastings, and George Hees, MP for Prince Edward - Hastings.

Both men spoke from Ottawa today.

"According to Mr. Hellyer," said Mr. Hees, "the men who was elected to give the country new direction is providing leadership in reverse and making it impossible for the government to carry out new constructive programs."

An additional reason cited by Mr. Hees for the deputy prime ministers resignation is the Liberal government's stand on defence.

"Mr. Hellyer is a firm believer in the principal of providing Canada security by means of collective action through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization," said Mr. Hees.

"As a former defence minister he could not stomach the government's position to systematically weaken our NATO participation."

Prime Minister Trudeau's "double talk, different talk in different locations" is another reason for his resignation, according to Mr. Grills.

"Mr. Hellyer and others in the party do not agree with Trudeau's idea of federalism and in my opinion Mr. Trudeau's philosophy of a united Canada is dividing, not only the country, but also his own Liberal party."

"There's a greater split in the Liberal party than the public imagine, said Mr. Grills. "In the cabinet it is the French influence versus the English influence and there's evidence to support this."

Mr. Grills also pointed out that there was a million dollars spent on Mr. Hellyer's task force on housing which brought in a report.

"There's been no action on that report, not even the removal of the 11 per cent tax on building materials," said Mr. Grills.

"Mr. Hellyer, while going across the country, learned of the disappointment of millions of Canadians in Mr. Trudeau's contradictory comments.

George Hees points out how sorely "a man of Mr. Hellyer's calibre" will be missed in the government.

"But," said Mr. Hees, "he has followed the only course open to a man of honor who believes in the principle of cabinet responsibility."

"Having disagreed with the government's stand on matters of great national importance he has taken the only alternative— that of resigning his portfolio."

Academics Need Time to Adjust to Politics Says Hellyer

and pollution impossible.

He will remain in the Commons as the MP for Toronto Trinity, a riding he first represented here in 1949. With the exception of an 18-month break in 1957-58, he has been that riding's MP ever since.

It is "a working man's riding," he said, and he knew his constituents could not understand politicians who pass responsibility from one government to another. People lacking decent housing were impatient with arguments over the division of powers.

Mr. Hellyer said he entered politics back in 1949 because he wanted to do something about two major problems—unemployment and housing.

He finally got the chance to tackle the housing problem last year when Mr. Trudeau appointed him minister of transport with responsibility for housing.

Mr. Hellyer quickly formed a task force, which he headed himself, and made a cross-Canada study. It was from the recommendations of this task force that he prepared his housing program for cabinet.

This is not the first time that the no-nonsense minister has become involved in controversial moves. He was the centre of a severe military storm after he became defence minister in 1963 and began unifying the armed forces.

Unification became a fact in 1968, but not before a series of admirals had resigned in protest and—it was reported—Mr. Hellyer had threatened to resign unless the government pushed through his program.

When the Commons met Thursday, about three hours after Mr. Hellyer's announcement, the transport minister was not in his seat—aides said he had a luncheon appointment—and he did not hear Speaker Lucien Lamoureux rule that a special debate could be held on his resignation and housing problems today.

r. Hellyer told his news conference that as a private member of the House he will "go around barking, cajoling, urging people at all levels to get on with the job."

This was in reference to the development of a housing policy.

"I want to encourage them not to let down. There is a momentum building up."

He would remain a member of the party because "I have no alternative except to be a member of the Liberal party."

He would help a new minister in any way he could.

Despite complimentary references to Mr. Trudeau on several occasions Mr. Hellyer also implied on several other occasions that he disagreed with some basic approaches by the prime minister.

"I found in my experience that it takes a while for people, you know, after they leave the academic world, to become thoroughly familiar with the other side of life which is the nuts and bolts of what makes the world go round."

Although he said he was not referring to any individual, he made the remark while replying to a question about Mr. Trudeau.

Indicating impatience to cut through constitutional red tape to get at the housing shortage, he said "people who are desperately in need of housing want to know whether we're going to get on with the job and complete it."

"And they really don't care which level of government has the primary responsibility, or whether the initiative should come from the federal level or the provincial level.

"They're interested in housing, they're interested in decent accommodation for their families, and they don't really appreciate buck-passing back and forth between politicians and governments."

The most practical, short-run method of helping the situation, he said, is through federal loans to municipalities to buy serviced land.

"I think the cost of housing could be reduced by, say $1,000 to $2,000 per unit for all houses built in Canada in perpetuity, by aggressively pursuing this policy. When you talk about potential savings of that kind, I think you have to take them seriously and I don't think you can postpone them for long periods of time if there is any chance of taking action."

Mr. Trudeau said that housing legislation would be brought before Parliament "in the next few weeks" and "the opposition and Parliament can then see whether we've gone far enough."

There were 200,000 housing starts in Canada this year, he said, a figure never before equalled. Perhaps Mr. Hellyer felt that the government was not moving as fast as it could, "and I respect his judgment."

Scotty Bowman said he wished they would play all night, and the feeling was mutual.

But the St. Louis Blues' coach was hoping to see Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins wear each other out. The rest of us just hated to see one of the best hockey bouts in history come to an end.

The fact that Jean Beliveau's first overtime goal in 16 NHL games put the Bruins end of their misery in six games belies the quality of the classic encounter.

Four games were decided by the narrowest of margins as the Habs had a monopoly on extra-inning bouts.

We pointed out once before that only four of the Bruins — Messrs. Shack, Bucyk, Murphy, and McKenzie had ever seen overtime in the big time before this series began.

The 27-year-old (average) Bruins didn't look inexperienced last night, however, as they came out tooled for bear in the first overtime session. It was quite a contrast from their sweaty-defensive stances when they lost two quick overtime decisions in the series' opening games at Montreal.

We were glad to see last night's 91 minute-wonder settled on a clean goal — none of this pinball ricochet stuff.

Beliveau threw the puck into a spot carefully enough selected to dispel any rumors that Le Gros Jean is myopic.

It's hard to believe that not one of the slick centre's 72 playoff connections before last night had come in overtime. Boston supporters are sorry they had to be witnesses to the premiere.

Beliveau's total, incidentally, leaves him only nine back of The Rocket's playoff mark that looked for a while as safe as Babe Ruth's 714 lifetime swats.

It was, for the most part, a wide open, end-to-end series, with both teams forging excellent scoring opportunities, many times to be thwarted by unbelievable goaltending.

Diminutive Rogie Vachon had his lucky moments, admittedly, during the last two Montreal successes. But he needed more than horseshoes to come up with all but three of 93 pucks tossed his way.

One disturbing aspect of the play was Phil Esposito's inability to navigate the puck into the 4x6 hole behind Vachon on a number of occasions when daylight was tending set.

Aside from his pair of goals in the Bruins' 5-4 third-game win, Espo couldn't beg, borrow, or pilfer a score against Vachon and Worsley in the series, although he set up six.

And don't let anyone tell you it was a superb shadow job by any member of the Canadiens' lineup!

Esposito was free and clear on a fistful of instances Tuesday and last night, only to flip the puck high, wide, and handsome

With last night's loss — only the fourth for the Bruins in 46 home games this season — Stanley Cup interest is definitely on the wane. The Boston-Montreal act is a tough one to follow.

All the Players in Kirkland Lake won't be able to put the Blues together again after the Habs finish with them, "tired or not. Scotty Bowman's band are carrying expansion sized colors into the final against a team that they have yet to beat in 16 outings.

That's a jarring word on the Hab-Bruin shindig.

Personally — which may dispeade you from reading further — I feel the six-game semi-final provided the most blatant example I have ever seen to refute "the best team always wins" theory.

I don't mean to dwell on statistics like the fact the Bruins outscored the Habs 16-15 and had four games, or that they outshot Montreal in the majority of the meetings.

Put it this way. Look at the six games as if they represented an 18-round fight (each five of the knock-dependent overtimers). I'd give the Bruins the decision 4-3, with five rounds even.

Nats Turn Attention to Habs

OTTAWA (CP) — Health minister John Munro made it clear Thursday he expects Montreal Canadiens to be as generous as Toronto Maple Leafs in supplying players for Canada's national hockey team.

Leafs president Stafford Smythe said Wednesday the national team could have any three of his National Hockey League players for next year's world hockey championships.

"I was very impressed with Mr. Smythe's offer," Mr. Munro said as he left the Commons.

"He obviously places the interest of his country above everything else."

He said David Molson, president of the Canadiens, is preoccupied with the Stanley Cup semi-finals "but I expect he will follow a similar course."

Earlier in the Commons, a Liberal MP asked Mr. Munro to use his offices to ask the Canadiens to match the Toronto offer.

Ct. Terrence Murphy (Sault Ste. Marie) noted in a Commons question that the Leafs are said to be ready to lend the national team three players. He wanted the minister to seek similar help from the Canadiens.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux refused to allow the question to be answered — although Mr. Munro rose — but suggested it might be the subject for a later debate.

BOSTON (CP) — David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens and a member of Hockey Canada, Thursday said he will consider what help his club will give Canada's national team after the National Hockey League playoffs are over.

He was unable to attend the Hockey Canada meeting in Toronto Wednesday because of gastric flu.

"Officially I haven't even heard of it," Molson said referring to Maple Leaf Gardens' offer of any three Toronto Maple Leafs to bolster the national team.

"I'll have to consult with general manager Sam Pollock before I can say anything about it."

Third Overtime Loss Sends Bruins to Showers

By MICHAEL BENNETT

BOSTON (CP) — That old overtime jinx hit the Bruins Thursday night, but it was a veteran all-star and a young goaltender who killed Boston's bid for their first berth in the Stanley Cup final since 1940-41.

Jean Beliveau, Montreal Canadiens' 36-year-old captain, rapped in a pass from right winger Claude Provost at 11:28 of the second overtime period for a 2-1 Montreal victory and the National Hockey League semi-final playoff series four games to two.

Rogatien Vachon, 23, who became starting goalie when Gump Worsley dislocated the little finger on his left hand in the third game, blocked 35 shots, 22 in the scoreless second period. He was unbeatable after giving up a goal to Ron Murphy at 2:29 of the first period.

Beliveau's goal, his second of the series, marked the first time in his 16-year NHL career that he has scored in overtime. The Montreal captain scored the tying goal in the first game of the series which Montreal won 3-2 in overtime.

The Canadiens, winners of the NHL's Eastern Division, now meet St. Louis Blues in a best-of-seven final series which opens in Montreal Sunday.

St. Louis, Western Division champions, defeated Philadelphia Flyers in their quarter-final in four games and then knocked off Los Angeles Kings in the semi-final, also in four games.

The Blues and the Canadiens met in last year's final with Montreal—minus Beliveau—taking the series in four games. However, this year the Blues are well rested while Canadiens have had a rugged series against Boston.

It was the third time in this series that Canadiens beat the Bruins in overtime.

Serge Savard tied the game at 1:18 of the third period Thursday night, five seconds after Awrey had gone off for cross-checking.

Gerry Cheevers, who played outstanding goal for the Bruins throughout the playoffs, was screened by Bobby Orr on the shot.

Meanwhile, Boston coach Harry Sinden was convinced he had the better team.

"It's rough," Sinden said. "At no time during the night did I think we were going to lose that game.

"We were getting stronger all the time, but. . . ."

Rogatien Vachon, who stopped 50 of 51 shots the Bruins fired at him, said he was tired and "just happy it's all over."

"I was so tired I just lay down between periods and tried to relax," Vachon said. "And I did relax."

However, Vachon did admit a bit of luck followed him as he got in front of several shots "that just hit me, ones I didn't really see."

Defenceman Serge Savard scored Montreal's other goal and said Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers was screened on the play by defenceman Bobby Orr.

"All I know is that I shot it from near the blue line and it could have bounced off their player. I just don't know," Savard said.

He said Montreal will have to be up for the series with the Blues.

"They should be easier, but they fool you, those guys. We might have a little problem."

Canadiens coach Claude Ruel was almost in tears as he toured the room congratulating each team member.

"Boy, that Boston is a great hockey team, but we're not too bad ourselves," Ruel shouted to no one in particular and everyone in general.

Ruel, in his first year in the National Hockey League, refused to predict the outcome of the final.

He said he did not know the status of veteran netminder Lorne (Gump) Worsley for the final. Worsley sat out the last two games with a dislocated finger on his lefthand.

"I'll find out about Worsley Friday, but what's wrong with Vachon?"

Ruel said his only instructions in the overtime were for his lines to "go their best and try to catch them (the Bruins) up ice."

"I had lots of confidence in this team and they never let me down," he added, with high praise for defencemen Jacques Laperriere and Ted Harris.

PITCHER PITCHED — Minnesota Twins' pitcher Dick Woodson (18) upended by Oakland Athletics' Reggie Jackson (hidden by Woodson) as Twins' Craig Nettles grabs Jackson from behind in fifth inning of American League game in the Twin Cities Thursday. The count was two balls and no strikes on Jackson when he rushed the mound after Woodson. The plate umpire had reportedly not warned Woodson for any close throws at Jackson. (AP Wirephoto)

Espo's Points No Consolation

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Phil Esposito increased his scoring lead among Stanley Cup players Thursday night, but he's reached the end of the line.

Esposito got an assist on Ron Murphy's goal and now has playoff scorers with 13 points. However, Boston Bruins lost to Montreal Canadiens 2-1 and were eliminated from Stanley Cup play.

Jean Beliveau scored the winner for Montreal in the second overtime period and now has five goals and five assists, good for fifth place among scorers.

Esposito's points were made up of eight goals and 10 assists.

No Time to Be Fancy On Winner: Beliveau

BOSTON (CP) — It was a perfect pass from that old guy sitting right over there."

That was Jean Beliveau describing his goal at 11:28 of the second overtime period that eliminated Boston Bruins from Stanley Cup competition and sent Montreal Canadiens into the final against St. Louis Blues. Montreal won the game 2-1 and the series 4-2.

The object of Beliveau's attention was veteran right winger Claude Provost who told how he came into possession of the puck to set up Beliveau's goal.

"I thought we'd lost possession of the puck to (Don) Awrey," Beliveau said. "I turned back ready to head for our own end and then I saw Joe (Provost) come up with the puck.

"I gave a little yell and the puck was there. I had no time to think or make a fancy shot. I just let it go and it went in.

It was Beliveau's fifth goal in this season's playoffs and his third against the Bruins. However, he still wasn't satisfied with his over-all playoff production.

"I was satisfied with my first two games but in the others I couldn't seem to skate," the tall centre said.

"But you have to give the Bruins credit. They're a great hockey club."

First Day Out Golf's Acid Test

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Taking one's golf clubs out of winter hibernation is like firing a rusty cannon. The results can be a booming success - - - or disaster.

In the first place, I don't think anyone really enjoys playing golf. It's a form of self-punishment.

But when you're a duffer — as 99 per cent of us are — the game represents an extreme form of mental anguish at the best of times.

At the worst of times — such as those first spring afternoons of bulldozing — golf indeed becomes a four-letter word.

If April showers bring May flowers, they also bring out to the Bay of Quinte's lush 6,640 yards those deluded souls who think a few weeks head start will bring them down to a 23 handicap.

And, as Elvis Presley was once wont to croon, "Now and then, there's a fool such as I."

For openers, I was reluctant to clean my trusty seven sticks — my handicaps, as I foolingly, if somewhat truthfully, tell friends.

From first appearances, I felt it would be unwise to touch them until I could acquire an estimate of the value of the real estate that lay on the faces of my 3, 5, 7 and 9 irons.

Next thing was to decide what would be the most likely time I could have the entire course to myself, so as to enjoy my first round of the year in relative privacy.

This proved impractical, since a few dozen others were slinking around the clubhouse with apparently the same thought in mind.

I decided against walking to the second hole to hit my first tee shot of the year. There were also a number of individuals slinking around the second tee.

With a quick furtive glance about, I planted my lucky tee, topped it with my lucky Jack Nicklaus Super Dynamo-Anti-Hook ball, and unleashed a 150-yard drive onto the first fairway.

Fortunately, the designer of the Bay of Quinte layout had people like me in mind. The first hole is a merciful 281 yards, shortest four-par on the course. This enables one to keep his score in single figures while still in sight of the gang at the clubhouse.

I rolled in a three-footer on number one to preserve my seven.

A 20-footer on the max-eating 450-yard par-four second enabled me to card a six, now safely out of sight of witnesses.

Another six on the 370-yard 3rd and I was lying seven over par with only 15 holes to go.

At this juncture, I took a sharp right at the 155-yard par-three 12th, reasoning that I could break the course's par of 71 by playing the last six holes.

The gamble paid off. I carded a bogey four here, which was such a treat I played the hole three more times.

In the confusion of slight setbacks on the quarter of a mile over the par-five 14th and 15th fairways I somehow misplaced my scorecard.

I decided to walk in, have a drink, and sell my clubs.

But passing the 18th tee, the temptation was too great to resist. Grabbing my three-iron, I lashed out in anger at the 220 yards of grass that taunted me.

Hmmm! A trifle to the right of the green, but not bad. . .

A chip shot with my autographed Sam Snead wedge.

Hmmmmm! Make that 15-footer and you've got your first par of the year.

After giving the green a cursory glance with my sextant, I started the ball on its way.

CLUNK!

An Arnold Palmer one-legged stoop to retrieve my ball, and I stride off the green feeling only disdain for a course that plays so easy.

Now, what did I do with that scorecard?

Golfers Get Jump With Indoor Course

STAFF — A group of local golfers has found an ideal way to improve its game and get a jump on area golfers before the local links are in playable condition.

Totalling 66 golfers, the group has just completed their sixth year of an eight-week golf instructional course at the Belleville Collegiate gymnasium.

The YMCA sponsored course, which is in its tenth year under the direction of Fred Purcell, the golf pro at the Picton Golf and Country Club, consists of eight one hour lessons each Tuesday night.

"We've got a large number of beginners here and I think this course gives them a good grounding in the game. They don't start with faults and they learn the proper grips and stances and pick up beneficial tips," said instructor Fred Purcell.

"We spend a week each on the one and three woods, then the three, five, seven and nine irons and the putter. The final lesson is a summation of the course and extra tips and advice which are likely to benefit the golfer," Purcell added.

Ron Boudreau of Belleville, a four-year golfer who is taking the course, said "I think it's a great course. Everyone should take it. You can't beat experience, and Fred Purcell certainly has it."

Landscapers Defend Title

STAFF — If things go as coach Bob Cook of the Mel Barriage Landscapers, the defending Canadian Women's Class "C" titlists, expects the Class "C" championship. Yet this weekend's Canadian Women's hockey championships could well develop into a duel between two area teams, Belleville's Landscapers and the Picton MacFarlands.

Belleville, which earlier this season added the Ontario Class "C" crown to their laurels, takes on Richmond Hill Saturday at 12.15 p.m. in their first game of the tournament. Belleville stopped Richmond Hill in overtime in the opening game of last season's tournament, and coach Cook feels his squad is much stronger this season.

"We're hoping to make a good showing in this tournament, and the calibre of play will be higher than last season; but I feel that Picton will probably be our toughest opposition."

Cook's feelings are well founded for Belleville, playing in the Quinte Women's Hockey League, could finish no higher than third at season's end while the Picton Rockettes, the club on which the MacFarlands are built, captured first place with an undefeated season.

Sixteen teams will vie for the Canadette Dominion Class "C" trophy is the tournament which will be played Saturday and Sunday at the Double Rink on North Jane Street, Toronto.

In all, 25 teams will compete for Canadian titles in the "A", "B" and "C" classes of the annual tournament, which is played at Toronto's Double Rink each year.

Departmental Loop Features New Setup

STAFF — The magic number of eight entries was reached last night by the Departmental Softball League with the entry into the league of a team representing the International Hardware Recreation Club.

Three teams have dropped out from last year's seven team setup, but the Departmental League has added four new teams to bring the total to eight and allow a two - divisional playoff system.

The top four teams in regular season play will vie for the "A" division playoff crown and the bottom four teams will play off for the "B" division title.

Bill Cooney, the league's secretary - treasurer, said that the two - divisional setup was adopted to maintain interest and enthusiasm among the bottom teams in the league.

"I think the new setup should make things a lot better this season and put us well on the road to a successful year," secretary - treasurer Cooney said this morning.

Purcell explains the purpose of the club which is the subject of that night's lesson. Next Purcell explains how to use the club and demonstrates this to the group. The golfers then practice by hitting golf balls into mats hung from the balcony of BCI's girls' gym.

While the golfers are practising Purcell goes around and offers tips and advice gained from his vast experience.

Mrs. Wilfred Hales of Belleville, who has never golfed before, said "I'm enjoying learning the game, and this course should certainly prove helpful. I struggled at first, but Mr. Purcell has given me some tips and things are coming easier now."

Emms Is Man Hoping to Muster Threat to Soviet Supremacy

TORONTO (CP) — Russia and other top European teams may find themselves facing a new threat in world hockey competition now that Hap Emms has taken over as head man of Canada's national hockey team.

Emms, the pipe-smoking, guitar-playing disciplinarian who for years has ridden herd on amateur and National Hockey League clubs, made no secret of the fact that he wanted guarantees of top players for the national team.

He got that backing Wednesday from Stafford Smythe, president of Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL, who said he could have three players from the Leafs' active roster.

"Any three I choose," said the 64-year-old Emms who once played in the NHL.

Now he's out to get similar backing from the talent-rich Montreal Canadiens for the most-to-succeed at Nationals.

If he does it's just possible that the Russians, Swedes and Czechs may find themselves opposing a team made up of such players as Norm Ullman, Tim Horton and Dave Keon of the Leafs and Jean Beliveau, Yvan Cournoyer and J. C. Tremblay of the Canadiens.

At Boston, David Molson, Canadiens president and a member, as is Smythe, of Hockey Canada which runs the Nationals, said Thursday he will give consideration to what help his club will give.

"I'll have to consult with general manager Sam Pollock before I can say anything about it," said Molson.

If Leighton Emms succeeds in getting Canada's team back on the winning rails in world championship competition, it will mark another milestone in a successful career that stretches back into Ontario junior hockey.

The former general manager of Boston Bruins of the NHL has run amateur teams in Barrie and Niagara Falls in the Ontario Hockey Association for more than 20 years. He still plans to direct Niagara Falls Flyers of the Junior A series.

It isn't the first time Smythe has helped the veteran hockey strategist. In 1953, when Smythe was in charge of Toronto Marlboros and Emms commanded the rival Barrie Flyers in the OHA Junior A, Emms borrowed the Marlboros' sweaters in the Memorial Cup finals.

He'd discovered the Barrie uniforms were the same color as their opponents in the final.

After winning the championship, Hap wired Staff: "This is the only way Marlboro uniforms will ever get into a Memorial Cup final."

Emms ("I was named Hap as a kid because I was a scrapper") is a master psychologist with an astute hockey mind. He plays the game to the hilt and expects his players to do the same.

Jackson Hits, Then Fights Twin Hurlers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Reggie Jackson wasn't doing much of anything until Dave Boswell fired two good pitches and Dick Woodson threw two close ones.

Boswell's two tosses resulted in a pair of homers by Jackson as Oakland Athletics' 6-4 victory over Minnesota Thursday. Woodson's pitches resulted in a black eye for the Twins' hurler, suffered during a brief bout with Jackson on the mound.

Jackson, who took only a .165 average into the game, charged to the mound after successive pitches by Woodson whizzed by his head in the fifth inning.

"There was a lot of velocity on those balls," said Jackson. "I was scared."

While Jackson was attempting to tackle Woodson, players from both benches streamed into the field in an attempt to separate the two fighters.

Jackson was ejected and Woodson was lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the inning.

In other American League action, Bobby Murcer hit two more homers as New York Yankees trounced Cleveland 11-3 for the Indians' 12th loss in 13 games and Baltimore Orioles checked De.roit Tigers 5-3 on Dave McNally's five-hitter. Washington's game at Boston was rained out.

Jackson said he "didn't want to fight" Woodson. "That's why I tackled him. I wanted to show him I meant business. I had to protect myself."

"I don't blame him," said Athletics manager Hank Bauer. "I would have done the same thing."

Asked if he thought Woodson was throwing at Jackson, Bauer replied: "Definitely."

Twins manager Billy Martin said Woodson "wasn't throwing at him. He was told to pitch him up and in. The first was behind and the second a foot over his head."

Hornets Aim for All the Marbles

GALT (CP) — Galt Hornets qualified for their second Allan Cup final berth in eight years with a 5-2 win Thursday over Victoriaville, Que., Tigers.

The victory gave the Ontario champions the Eastern Canada senior hockey title. Hornets eliminated the defending national champions 4-2 in a best-of-seven series.

The Hornets of 1961 downed Winnipeg Maroons to claim the Allan Cup, symbol of the Canadian senior amateur title.

Galt now moves against Calgary Stampeders, the Western Canada winners. The best-of-seven round, which will be played entirely in Galt, opens Sunday night.

Pete Panagabko, a former professional added to the Galt lineup from Ontario Hockey Association senior series runners-up Barrie Flyers, led the winners with two goals.

Howie Dietrich, Bob Ecstel and John Beecher each scored once for Hornets. Clement Boudreau and Jean-Claude Marcotte, both defencemen, replied for the Quebec champions. Both managed to beat Galt netminder Harold (Brad) Hurley with long, low shots from the blue line.

THURSDAY'S STARS

Pitching—Dave Giusti, St. Louis Cardinals, stopped Chicago on three hits retiring 13 batters in order in one stretch for a 3-2 victory over the Cubs.

First Homer Helps

Reject Haunts Houston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Last October, Houston Astros decided Nate Colbert couldn't help them. Six months later, they figured he couldn't hurt them either.

The rookie infielder, a former Houston prospect landed by San Diego Padres in the October expansion draft, beat the Astros 4-1 Thursday with his first major league homer, a three-run eighth inning wallop.

After Tony Gonzalez doubled with two out in the Padres' eighth, Houston reliever Jack Billingham walked Ollie Brown intentionally to get at Colbert—then flatted him with an inside pitch.

Colbert picked himself up and tagged the next pitch 420 feet into the left centre field bleachers, breaking a 1-1 deadlock. The homer was the first off Billingham in 58 games, including 50 with Los Angeles Dodgers last season.

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati Reds edged Los Angeles 8-7, San Francisco Giants topped Atlanta Braves 5-1, St. Louis Cardinals edged Chicago Cubs 3-2 and Philadelphia Phillies rapped Montreal Expos 7-1. Pittsburgh was rained out at New York.

Colbert's blast sent the Astros reeling to their eighth loss in the last nine games.

He appeared in 19 games with the Astros three years ago and in 20 last season, batting .133 overall.

Colbert, who started the night with one RBI in 13 games, also poked an infield single against his former mates, raising his batting average to .272.

Brown's second inning homer off Houston starter Jim Ray gave the Padres a 1-0 lead but the Astros tied in the fourth when Denis Menke homered against rookie Al Santorini.

Ray, absent from the right elbow by Gonzalez' first inning liner, left the game in the third and Santorini departed in the seventh with a blister on a finger on his right hand. Veteran Jack Baldschun was the winner in relief.

Lee May drove in three runs with a triple and his third homer as the Reds chased lefthander Claude Osteen and built an 8-4 lead before surviving a late Los Angeles comeback.

May's two-run triple and a two-run single by Johnny Bench were the big hits in a five-run third inning explosion that sent Cincinnati in front to stay. Bob Tolan also homered for the Reds.

THE PICK OF Punch

"A camel, a camel — my Kingdom for a camel!"

Trail Drains After Flood

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — A chorus of chugging pumps today sucked water from muddy basements in this flood-ravaged city, spilling it among machines working around the clock to clear debris.

The city moved to set priorities in the cleanup job, forced on it by a flash flood Wednesday which turned streets into rampaging rivers, chewing up pavement and damaging dozens of buildings.

Assured of provincial disaster funds, the city awaited word from Ottawa on requests from the city and Premier W. A. C. Bennett for federal money as well.

Meanwhile, Harry Edwards, Trail's civil defence co-ordinator, said municipalities in the area have sent in food "and cash has been offered from as far away as Edmonton."

There was no firm estimate of damage but the premier said it exceeds $1,500,000. Mayor Frank DeVito said: "The cost of this disaster is . . . beyond the ability of the city to pay."

Mayor DeVito said cleanup crews hope to have at least the downtown business area back in operation Saturday. A special seven-man committee was set up to handle aid to those hardest hit.

"It gets more serious every time you look at it," Mayor DeVito said of the mess. "You have to wait for the water to dry up. You have to get in and look at house foundations."

Until that's done, officials can't make decisions on returning to their homes 50 people who were ordered out officially. Many more left their homes voluntarily when waters from flooding creeks poured in.

The British Columbia government Thursday named two cabinet ministers and L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, to allocate money from the province's new $25,000,000 disaster fund.

There were no deaths but doctors warned residents of the danger of infection from human waste carried with the four-foot flood waters.

A fierce all-night storm Tuesday, combined with a slow thaw, unusually deep snow in the mountains and then a blast of 74-degree weather Wednesday, sent three creeks running wild.

Cars were overturned, buried in silt and even swept into the Columbia River. An empty 12-suite apartment block toppled; its foundations eaten away by the running water.

Cardinal Will Announce Bid for UN Leadership

QUEBEC (CP) — Political sources here say Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal will announce Sunday to residents of his home riding of Bagot that he will contest the Union Nationale leadership in June.

The convention, June 19-21, is to choose a permanent successor to the late premier Daniel Johnson, who died last September.

Bagot is Mr. Johnson's old riding, and Mr. Cardinal succeeded him as its representative when he won the riding in a byelection Dec. 4.

The 44-year-old minister joined the government in October, 1967, abandoning a university and business career. He became deputy premier in December, 1968.

Other candidates for the leadership are:

—Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, chosen party leader on an interim basis after Mr. Johnson's death;

—Aldre Leveille, a 35-year-old former union official and a backbencher in the national assembly.

Judge Maurice Johnson, 40, of Montreal municipal court, a brother of the late premier, says he is thinking of entering the race.

Premier Bertrand has the support of several senior cabinet ministers for the position of leader.

Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay, however, said two weeks ago he would support Mr. Cardinal if the former University of Montreal law dean became a candidate.

University Research Endorsed

OTTAWA (CP) — Creation of three agencies from existing bodies to pump ar expanded stream of federal dollars into university research is proposed in a report to the Science Council of Canada and the Canada Council made public today.

The major structural revamping of federal support to university research would go this way:

—The National Research Council would award all federal financial support to university research in engineering and the natural sciences.

—The Medical Research Council, now the main source of medical research support, would be expanded into a health sciences research council to do the same job in support of all the sciences in the health field.

—A social science and humanities research council would be created to foster research in three areas, assuming these responsibilities from the Canada Council, which would limit its help to the fine and performing arts.

The study was headed by Dr. John R. Macdonald, professor of higher education, University of Toronto.

Other major recommendations:

—An urgent federal-provincial conference to discuss means whereby the federal government could make direct contributions out of a proposed $130,000,000-a-year fund to university buildings or parts of them which can be clearly designated as research facilities.

—A massive program to build up national libraries, including development of machine-readable indexes that lend themselves to automated information retrieval.

—Federal support for the indirect costs of research work it sponsors, at a level of 25 per cent of the amounts it provides for direct costs.

None of the recommendations is binding on the federal government or on the two sponsoring councils which commissioned the Macdonald study.

Airway Hazard, Whistling Swans Carry Radios

WASHINGTON (CP) — The whistling swan has been wired for sound, dyed and banded in a Canada-United States project to determine the hazard it poses for aviation.

Results are awaited from the annual migration of the big birds to Canadian Arctic nesting grounds since the project began.

Dr. William J. L. Sladen of the Johns Hopkins University's pathobiology department, in nearby Baltimore, outlined the details in a paper prepared in conjunction with William W. Cochrane of the Illinois natural history survey. It was prepared for the 34th North American wildlife and natural resources conference in March.

"Since the loss of a Viscount airliner in Maryland in 1962 as a result of a collision with swans, there has been a growing awareness of the potential hazard of these swans and other large waterfowl to aircraft," it says.

There are about 100,000 whistling swans in North America, more than half of them wintering in Chesapeake Bay, 30 miles east of here. There are a few in British Columbia and more in Utah and California.

Protected by law for more than 70 years, the whistlers average 15 pounds in weight. The Chesapeake Bay flock in its thousands now is moving across Saskatchewan and Alberta in the final push to the Mackenzie River delta, Dr. Sladen reported Thursday by telephone.

In hot pursuit, at last report, he said, is Dr. William Gunn of Toronto, who is involved in a study of bird hazards to aircraft for the National Research Council of Canada.

Canada, Dr. Sladen says, has done more work in the field than the U.S. and issues special migrating-bird reports for pilots.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration reported recently that commercial pilots reported 2,196 collisions with birds—all kinds of birds—in a six-year period ended June 30, 1967.

About 85 per cent were during take-off or landing, the agency said, and half below 2,500 feet. Twice as many occurred during the Autumn migration period of September-November and 1,320 involved jet aircraft.

The Chesapeake Project began in the winter of 1967-68. A start was made on capturing birds and eventually 178 were distinctively dyed and banded for easy identification. Eight were "bugged" with telemetry or radio transmitters for tracking by car or plane.

The idea was to see how the swans performed in local flight patterns and on the long-range journeys to and from northern Canada.

Other birds were banded by U.S. and Canadian officials in the North.

The Chesapeake birds were dyed black, purple or yellow, which lets until the next moulting, to differentiate among local flocks as well as those marked in the North.

Distinctive color combinations were used to indicate the radio-equipped swans.

Davis Assails Parents

They Want Him to Raise Children

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis accused Ontario parents Thursday night of wanting him to raise their children for them and of failing to understand youngsters' needs.

Then he topped the lecture by noting today's children will probably do a much better job of running society than their parents have anyway.

Mr. Davis, who was participating in a question-and-answer session with 120 members of the Scarborough Centre Progressive Conservative Association, launched into his impromptu speech after businessman Shelly Lush accused his department of failing to give direction to school children.

"It's time our kids had some positive leadership," Mr. Lush, a father of five, told the minister. There was a "deplorable" lack of direction from the education department as to how kids should act and "have respect for the leaders of society."

"It's fine to say to me that I should get out the red," Mr. Davis shot back. "But that's not the way you're going to solve the problems of present society."

No Surprises at Red Congress

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese Communist party's ninth congress has ended in Peking with no surprises.

Mao Tse-tung continues to reign as party chairman, and his chosen successor, Defence Minister Lin Piao, is still vice-chairman with the added designation of Mao's heir.

Timmins To Get Smelter

TIMMINS (CP) — An announcement by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. of plans to build a $20,00,000 zinc smelter near this Northern Ontario community Thursday was hailed as a great boost to the area's economic development.

Ron Campbell, president of the Timmins-Porcupine Chamber of Commerce, said businessmen of this city of 30,000 "broke out in whoops of glee" on hearing the news of the announcement which was made earlier in the day in Toronto.

"For several years, people here have had backward thinking about the smelter issue," Mr. Campbell said. "Now I think this will change."

Jules Bergeron, city clerk and administrator, said the news was "terrific" and meant a "great boost . . . economically and also in morale".

Mr. Campbell said many residents of the area, had been "holding off buying new houses or investing money" because of economic reasons. He said this now is going to change.

Construction of the smelter 12 miles northeast of here is scheduled to start this year and is expected to be completed late 1971 or early 1972.

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence said in Toronto that the plant would employ about 300 persons when completed.

He said pressure by the Ontario government on the U.S.-owned company resulted in the decision by Texas' Gulf to build the smelter, but a company statement said it was "encouragement," given by both the federal and provincial governments.

The company announcement came only three weeks after the provincial government announced that mining companies will be required to process more ores mined in Ontario either in the province or in Canada instead of shipping them outside the country.

Texas Gulf was given several concessions to build the plant in Ontario, including allowance for pre-production expenses against the company's mining tax.

The province further promised low electric power rates for the company and will allow a mining tax write-off.

The federal government's Area Development Agency is also expected to provide a grant of $6,500,00 toward building the smelter.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Readers often ask me why I make the distinction between fear and anxiety. 'Are not they both the same?' they ask.

It's all a matter of degree. When you are walking through the bush and are confronted by a tiger ready to spring, that is fear — with four big letters.

But if you walk through the countryside, knowing that there is a man-eating tiger at large, you walk in anxiety. You remain anxious until the tiger is caught, or until you can get miles away from there.

I say it's fear when you are confronted with a danger you can recognize (seeing the tiger ready to jump), but it's anxiety, when you recognize the possibility of danger but don't actually see it, or don't know when it will come. Or, don't even know what the danger is. We call this "free-floating anxiety."

Many of us worry ourselves sick because of anxiety. We are scared and do not know why. Sometimes the doctor can get to the bottom of it; sometimes it requires the ministrations of a psychiatrist.

Here's an example of what I mean.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have about worried myself sick ever since a friend of mine, who studies palmistry, told me my husband's life line is short. I do know everyone has a different fingerprint; they say. Should God go to this trouble to keep our identity separate and not go further and give us other information to guide our lives?

I hope you don't think I'm a kook, but you have had the opportunity to see people both coming into and leaving this world. What do you think of life lines? I can't ask my own doctor because he'll surely send me to a psychiatrist. — Mrs. S.

Comment: Here you see an example of anxiety — no tiger in sight, ready to jump, but a vague fear without basis. And, as sometimes happens, a well-meaning friend is the one to light the fuse of anxiety. I never tell anyone to "stop worrying." Mrs. S. Nevertheless, I suggest that you worry less. Your husband's longevity will not depend upon his "life line."

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Recently I developed weird dreams. I am 78 years old. While dreaming, when somebody would do something wrong, I would punch him in the nose. Then I wind up punching either the pillow or the mattress.

I am afraid that some of these nights, with my wife lying right next to me in our double bed, I may punch her in the nose. I mentioned this to our family doctor and he just laughed. I don't think this is a laughing matter. Do you have any suggestions? — Mr. H.

Comment: My answer may seem to be facetious, but it is not meant to be: sleep in a single bed until this phobia disappears.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 16. About a year ago I noticed I couldn't see a thing out of my right eye. Everything was all blurry. When I told my parents they thought I was fabricating and ignored me. So for a year I've been getting screaming headaches and the board at school is getting hard to read. Still I forget about it! The idea of wearing glasses doesn't turn me on. — Miss H.

Comment: I hope your parents "turn on" and get you to an eye specialist as soon as they can. Chances are you will be told you will have to wait weeks or months before an appointment. But I think your history makes this an emergency case. Explain it to the nurse and maybe she can get you in earlier.

• • •

For Mrs. P.: The fact that you were operated last year for a perforated ulcer should in no way endanger your pregnancy. And it's not true that the labor pains may cause another perforation of the stomach.

Strictly Personal

Chosen People Misnomer

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Stepping off the plane in Chicago, we were assailed by a high, cold wind blowing off the lake. "I see now," said a fellow passenger, "why people go to called the Windy City."

But he didn't see at all. Chicago began being called the Windy City for a political, not a meteorological reason. It is only about 35th in wind velocity among U.S. cities — but the name alone convinces visitors of its windiness, a mild thus the myth perpetuates itself indefinitely.

Much the same happens to other misnomers that get stuck in the public mind — the most long-term and tragic, perhaps, being the epithet "The Chosen People," as applied to the Jews throughout history.

The ignorant and the prejudiced (who are so often the same) imagine that this is a name taken by the Jews themselves to signify their superiority and their favoritism in the eyes of God. But this is a blatant misreading of the Bible.

In the Old Testament, the Jews were "chosen" as an example by God, not as a specimen of superiority. They were not favored by Him, but were judged more harshly than other peoples, because they had been given His word and were expected to live up to it.

This was a dreadful burden, more than a mollyed honor. It was like a school principal picking one pupil out of a class and saying: "You understand the rules here. If you follow them, and behave yourself, and act as a good example for the others, I'll see that you get extra privileges. If you take care of. If not, then I'll punish you as an example to the others of what will happen to them."

And the Old Testament, of course, is full of such punishments. Rather than the Bible being a demonstration, or vindication, of the Hebrew reliance to God, it is a candid and humble recording of their transgressions, their follies, their failing away from the Covenant. Unlike most historical books, which show the nation in the best possible light, the Old Testament includes all the sins of the Hebrew Prophets, who castigated the Israelites for failing to live up to God's expectations.

"I will visit all your iniquities upon you." God is quoted as saying, by Amos — and it is this sense of being responsible to God that has shaped the Jewish character, even among those who no longer consciously believe it. Being "chosen," for whatever reason, can be a scarring and even deforming experience — just contemplate the reaction of the other children in the school toward the one who is specially selected to be the model! The day the Covenant was drawn up was the first day of anti-Semitism.

ARE YOU PLAYING THE "BOX AND COX" GAME?

Mr. Box, a day worker, and Mr. Cox, a night worker, rented the same apartment but never saw each other. Each gave rise to some comic situations like the farce by John Maddox. It was an inexpensive way to rent a room!

You may have a room to rent in one person or several. Do it the easy way . . . by dialling 962-9171 to place an Intelligencer Want Ad.

Cadieux and Sharp Defend Plan To Cut Canada's NATO Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers were intimately concerned with Canadian policy on NATO, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, have defended the government's plan to cut the Canadian military contingent in Europe.

They led a government counter-attack in the Commons Thursday against two opposition non-confidence motions tied to the country's new look approach toward the defence alliance.

Several speakers and several hours later, the government majority easily succeeded in turning back the non-confidence motions, one sponsored by the Conservatives and one by the New Democrats.

Then the House endorsed overwhelmingly a government decision, announced by Prime Minister Trudeau April 3, to keep Canada in NATO but reduce its military contribution by an unspecified amount.

The vote was 116 to 67, with only one opposition member, Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton), voting with the government.

It marked the end of a two-day foreign affairs debate.

Today, the Commons was scheduled to resume debate on the government's omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code, which, among other things, would legalize abortion under certain conditions and remove homosexuality between consenting adults from the list of criminal offences.

However, the debate may be suspended in favor of a special debate on housing. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux accepted in principle Wednesday the motion of NDP Leader T. C. Douglas that in an emergency debate be held in light of the resignation of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, the minister responsible for housing. But he said certain procedural difficulties would have to be removed first.

The opposition non-confidence motions defeated Thursday took the form of amendments to the government motion calling for concurrence in its newly - adopted NATO policy.

The Conservative motion sought to condemn the government for leading Canada from "internationalism to isolationism." It was defeated 127 to 67, with the other opposition parties backing the government.

The New Democratic one called for complete withdrawal of Canadian forces from Europe and a re-channelling of defence expenditures into foreign aid. It was rejected 185 to 15—the New Democrats standing alone in favor.

Mr. Sharp and Mr. Cadieux, both of whom spoke warmly in favor of Canada's NATO ties in the period of public debate leading up to the decision on troop cuts, rejected a charge that the new policy means isolationism for Canada.

Former defence minister Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) accused Mr. Trudeau of scuttling the Western alliance.

The prime minister, he said, was using French President Charles de Gaulle as his model.

"Perhaps he will go slower but the final effect will be the same," Mr. Harkness said.

Mr. Cadieux told the House that in future years roles, Canadian forces committed to NATO require different equipment and different training from the forces maintained in Canada.

To help prepare them for a role the government believes appropriate for the future, said Mr. Cadieux, two most start now to convert our forces from their present roles in Europe and to plan the reduction of the total number of Canadian forces which are stationed there."

Turning to continental defence, Mr. Cadieux said joint studies have already begun between Canada and the United States on a plan to modernize the North American bomber defence system.

Canada would seek early occasions to consult with the U.S. government on the best use of home-based maritime and land forces in defending the continent.

Mr. Latulippe, of the Creditiste, called for an end to Canadian involvement in NATO and suggested a two-year program of withdrawal during which time any money saved could be used to fight poverty, build homes and establish new industries.

Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) said Canadian membership in NATO is a hindrance to what should be Canada's foreign-policy goals.

It was illusory to think Canada could contribute to world disarmament while a NATO member. To leave the alliance would leave Canada free to criticize the nuclear powers and would enhance the likelihood of its voice being heeded by the developing nations.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For April 25

Your birthday today: Now is the time for a better image of yourself to take shape. First ask yourself briefly, "What am I?" Then go on to spend the year translating your ideas, based on the progress thus far made, of what you may become. Today's natives appreciate subtle, precise differences. Many have developed the healing touch, others occult or spiritual interests.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your personal expansiveness of mood is unbeatable — just channel it! The beginnings you make now can lead to big improvements!

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Search out experts, get their best opinions, but make your own decisions, and strike out for personal progress.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The odds are eight to five your main information is dead wrong. So spend the early part of the day checking. Older people may suggest delay — and they may be right.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Tackle more routine activities near at hand today rather than reaching for the flamboyant, get-rich quick schemes. Details need attention; as so much of the data afloat is outmoded or inaccurate.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Now that your emotional balance is intact you can go along with the humor of the situation while making more friends.

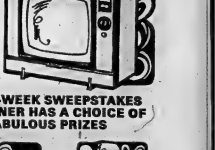
VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Make your decision quietly and simply without explanations of the context in which you made it. Your reasons are nobody's business but your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Use the weekend as a reason for taking on no business issues. Personal relations and the improvement of them are more important anyway.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your drive to clear things up continues; there's more to the confusion than you had thought, and the going may be rugged. Try not to hurt others while you cut through to the core. Declare a holiday-evening and enjoy yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The morning chores should be lighter than usual. Take the time to enjoy life today: indulge in your favorite sports or pastimes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Put aside money matters until the coming week; do nothing beyond routine shopping. Join just a little more hard work along previously decided lines.



AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): When you have to take sides of an issue so clearly and there's so much going for both sides, it's hard to hold to your original decision. Older people must be heard and their problems attended.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Stick to routine despite your restlessness. Friends will bring you plenty of diversions later in the day. The touch of anything spells the joys of living.

Opposition Tags Hellyer Move as Setback for Housing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Paul Hellyer's resignation as federal transport minister indicates deep division within the Liberal cabinet and also means a setback in solving Canada's housing crisis, several politicians said Thursday.

Mr. Hellyer, also in charge of housing, quit in a surprise move because he felt chances were slim of getting action on many recommendations by the federal housing inquiry he headed.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the resignation reflects a cleavage in Prime Minister Trudeau's administration about the federal role in Canada and Mr. Hellyer, the honorable course by quitting.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said in Prince Albert, Sask., that Mr. Hellyer's resignation was no surprise to him.

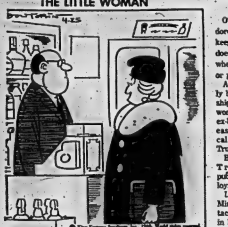
He said the government refused to remove the sales tax on building materials, one of the recommendations by the inquiry, and Mr. Hellyer had no choice but to resign.

Douglas Harkness, who resigned as defence minister from the Conservative government six years ago, setting in motion the events which led to Mr. Diefenbaker's defeat, said it is obvious that the differences within the Liberal cabinet are so irreconcilable that Mr. Hellyer's only choice was to quit.

T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Mr. Hellyer had to resign to maintain "his self-respect."

Mr. Douglas said it is "quite apparent" that the government has no intention of tackling the housing problem.

Edgar Gerhart, municipal affairs minister of Alberta, said in Edmonton that the resignation is cause for "regret."



"Mr. Hellyer had a good, fresh grasp of the housing problem in Canada," the Social Credit member said.

Dan Campbell, municipal affairs minister of British Columbia, said he is "very disappointed" because Mr. Hellyer was "very receptive and open-minded to ideas . . . in provision of low-cost housing."

James Harding, Nova Scotia fisheries minister and responsible for housing, said the resignation could have a detrimental effect on Canada's housing program because of Mr. Hellyer's "qualifications" in the field.

The National House Builders Association said the resignation is a severe setback to people's hopes for government action after the long and costly housing inquiry. The association said Mr. Hellyer showed experience and imagination in tackling his job.

Hellyer as A Politician Was Tough Opponent

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Theodore Hellyer is a tall man who keeps his shoulders back and doesn't bend easily to pressures, whether from admirals, press or politicians.

A year ago, when he was clean by beaten in the Liberal leadership race, there were many who wondered whether the tough ex-businessman would serve easily under a somewhat radical intellectual such as Pierre Trudeau.

But throughout his year in the Trudeau administration his public stance was a model of loyalty.

Last January, when Prime Minister Trudeau was under attack for his cloak with reporters in London, Acting Prime Minister Hellyer defended him staunchly in the Commons.

Mr. Trudeau, he said, "displayed that kind of courage which makes us on this side of the House proud to serve under his leadership."

There was a certain irony in the fact that Mr. Hellyer, considered by some to be conservative, finally resigned because the 'radical' prime minister was not moving fast enough.

Well-built, silver-haired Toronto-nian who carries more than 200 pounds on his six-foot, 3½-inch frame, Mr. Hellyer exudes determination and his resignation from the cabinet Thursday was far from being his first clash with authority.

Former cabinet colleague Judy LaMarsh disclosed in her memoirs that she and Mr. Hellyer discussed a joint resignation from the party in 1963 to protest Liberal policy—later reversed —against accepting U.S. nuclear warheads.

And later as defence minister, Miss LaMarsh said, Mr. Hellyer threatened to "resign at once and not quietly" if the Liberal government did not go ahead with armed forces integration.

It was on the armed forces issue that Mr. Hellyer best displayed what his friends called courage and his enemies called stubborn arrogance.

From the time his white paper on defence first unveiled government integration policy in 1964 until the final act unifying the three forces passed through Parliament in 1967, he was the storm centre of opposition from within the forces, from the Commons opposition and from some in his own party.

Admirals who challenged aspects of the policy quickly found themselves ex-admirals.

But when unification was an accomplished fact, Mr. Hellyer moved on to another area close to his heart, becoming transport minister with responsibility for housing.

In that portfolio he unfolded far-reaching ideas on new cities designed around mass rapid transit systems. The "uncontrolled fury of megalopolis" would be controlled by limiting existing cities to permit orderly redevelopment.

He also put together a personal organization to contest the Liberal leadership long before former prime minister Lester B. Pearson announced his resignation.

When Mr. Pearson did disclose retirement plans, Mr. Hellyer was the first candidate off the mark and ran perhaps the most intensive campaign of any of the contenders.

When the party voted last April 6, there were a few moments after the first ballot when it appeared opponents of Mr. Trudeau might rally around Mr. Hellyer and push him from second to first place.

But on the second ballot, former trade minister Robert Winters edged ahead of Mr. Hellyer and some colleagues urged the transport minister to drop out and back Mr. Winters against Mr. Trudeau.

"You can stop him, Paul, only you," Miss LaMarsh told him.

But Mr. Hellyer declined to withdraw and watched Mr. Trudeau go on to win.

As a member of the Trudeau cabinet, however, Mr. Hellyer again turned his attention energetically to problems of housing and urban development.

In last summer's election campaign, he promised the Liberals would "put Canada ahead of the world in urban development."

He said Mr. Trudeau had asked him to tour Canada right after the election to look into the housing crisis.

"He wants me to find the red tape, to find why there is a lack of co-operation between governments. When I go back I will write a new policy on housing and pull all the strings together."

But when people were tired of buck-passing "and we are going to solve the housing problem for you."

The investigation, as least, went ahead as planned, with Mr. Hellyer personally leading his own "task force" across the country.

But when it came to implementing policies outlined in the report, it was clear that Mr. Hellyer was chafing under government-imposed delays.

When he announced his resignation Thursday, Mr. Hellyer pledged to continue to fight for his policy proposals.

Soldier Survives 3,000 Foot Chute Drop

NEUBRUECKE, West Germany (AP) — Hurtling earthward from 3,000 feet, Staff Sgt. Carl E. Miller, 27, of St. Albans, W.Va., took up the classic landing position as though he had a parachute billowing above him.

But Miller's chute had not opened up and was streaming above him like a cigarette roll —as the paratroopers call it.

The concrete air strip of a U.S. Army airfield rushed up at him, Miller took it with the five points he had learned at army jump school nine years and 1,171 parachute jumps ago—toes, calf, thigh, buttock and pectoral—and he escaped with two broken ankles, cuts and bruises.

"Most people would have rolled up like a ball," an 8th Infantry Division spokesman said.

"When you know you're going to die you go into the fetal position. But Miller, by landing perfectly as he did—on his legs—just rolled on the ground and broke his ankles."

The accident occurred on March 29 during a practice jump from an H-34 helicopter hovering at 3,000 feet over Hoppstadten, near the Baumholder training area.

ANNIVERSARY CHOIR

CASTLEGAR, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia Doukhobors will send a 70-voice choir to Kamsack, Sask., this summer to take part in celebrations marking the 70th anniversary of the arrival of the main group of Doukhobors in Canada. The festivities have been provisionally set for July 6-7.

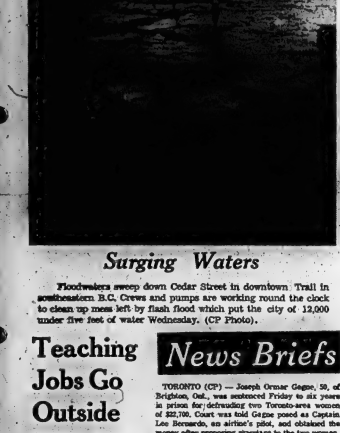
Mortgage Limits Raised

PM Fights Housing Backlash

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Friday answered criticism of his government's housing policy and the resignation of his minister in charge of housing by announcing the first fruits of the federal housing inquiry.



Mr. Trudeau told the Commons the maximum for National Housing Act mortgages will be increased to $35,000 from $18,000, that the term for repayment will be extended to 40 years from 35 and that mortgages available for purchasing existing homes, formerly limited to $10,000, will go up to $18,000.

All the proposals follow recommendations of last fall's housing inquiry led by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer. Mr. Hellyer submitted his resignation from the cabinet Thursday, saying the government refused to act on his proposals to solve urgent problems of housing, pollution, urban renewal and inflation.

While the prime minister was speaking Friday, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. announced that the extension to a $25,000 maximum for mortgages on new houses was in effect immediately.

The $18,000 limit is retained for apartment units.

CMHC has the authority to implement the move under existing legislation. The other moves proposed by Mr. Trudeau will require new legislation.

Can Only Act Within Rights

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties yesterday demanded and were granted an emergency debate on the joint matters of the housing crisis and the resignation of Paul Hellyer which is not effective until next Wednesday.

Attendance in the Commons chamber was small but the public galleries were filled when NDP Leader T. C. Douglas opened the debate Friday afternoon. Attendance was about normal when Mr. Trudeau rose to reply, but during the evening it fell as low as 16. A quorum is 20.

Opposition criticism was aimed as much, or more, at the prime minister's views on federalism as on the specifics of the shortage of low-cost housing.

Opposition Leader Stanfield praised Mr. Hellyer's record of public service under three Liberal prime ministers.

"His resignation brings discredit to this government which is the poorer for it."

He asked what had become of the prime minister's election promise of a program of priorities for cities, urban research centres and a study of mass transportation.

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Hellyer's resignation is related to something more fundamental than housing. Mr. Hellyer "put his finger on the basic reason for the lack of initiative, the prime minister's concept of federalism."

Mr. Douglas said the government did not intend to remove the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials; would not set up a ministry of housing, and was not prepared to provide federal funds to municipalities to set up land banks.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette criticized the prime minister for playing down the importance of the housing crisis. He would give "eloquent figures" to prove there is a crisis.

Canada has 5,700,000 families living in 5,500,000 homes, he said. And 500,000 of those homes are just shacks.

Mr. Trudeau said he knew many people felt the federal government should be able to deal with national problems regardless of the constitution.

But there is "a very important and basic question" as to whether Ottawa should lend mortgage money directly to municipalities.

Provincial governments felt their priorities might be upset if Ottawa dealt directly with the municipalities, which are under provincial jurisdiction.

Other aspects of the new housing legislation, which Mr. Trudeau said will probably be placed on the order paper next week, include a 50-per-cent reduction in the two-per-cent mortgage insurance fee, an increase to 95 from 90 per cent of value on loan limits for non-profit housing and permission for limited dividend companies to build dormitory-type projects.

Mr. Trudeau said that as a direct consequence of previous government measures, private lending institutions have greatly

Teaching Jobs Go Outside

OTTAWA (CP) — Prof. James Steele of Carleton University's English department said Friday that about 80 per cent of all teaching appointments at Canadian universities in 1969 were to non-Canadians.

Prof. Steele said in an interview figures he obtained from the manpower and immigration department show that more than 2,300 university teachers came into Canada from abroad last year.

He said Prof. Robin Mathews, also of Carleton's English department, recently said that 58 per cent of new appointments at Canadian universities went to non-Canadians between 1963 and 1965. Between 1965 and 1967 the figure had risen to 72 per cent.

Prof. Steele said he had received letters "from highly qualified Canadian specialists" in the fields of English, chemistry, classics and zoology saying that they had tried unsuccessfully to find employment in Canada.

"This is a national educational disaster."

News Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Ormar Gagne, 59, of Brighton, Ont., was sentenced Friday to six years in prison for defrauding two Toronto-area women of $22,700. Court was told Gagne posed as Captain Leo Bernard, an airline's pilot, and obtained the money after proposing marriage to the two women. Gagne was arrested in Picton.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — "Keep them coming," said Rev. Ralph David Abernathy from his jail cell. He and 101 followers were arrested Friday for demonstrating in support of striking Negro non-professional workers. "You have your duty to enforce the law," Abernathy told the arresting officer, Charleston Police Chief John Conrad. "I have my duty to disobey unjust laws." It was his 24th arrest.

TOKYO (AP) — About 20 of the 29 United States warships assigned to protect American spy flights off North Korea sailed out of the Sea of Japan today, Japanese defence agency sources reported. Four of the ships deployed in the Sea of Japan after a U.S. Navy EC-121 spy plane was shot down April 15 were aircraft carriers.

No Major Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is expected to make only a small number of cabinet changes in the next week or so in the wake of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer's post-dated resignation, informants said Friday.

No major cabinet overhaul is anticipated until well into the summer.

Mr. Trudeau's current plans depend a great deal on the health of Energy Minister J. J. Greene, who has suffered two recent heart attacks.

If Mr. Greene's doctors decide that it would be inadvisable for him to try to carry on, Mr. Trudeau likely will fill the energy portfolio at the same time as he appoints a successor to Mr. Hellyer.

One possible successor is Mr. Hellyer or Mr. Greene is Robert Stanbury, 39, Liberal MP for York Scarborough.

Alberta to Enter Federal Medicare

EDMONTON (CP) — Legislation to pave the way for Alberta's entry into the federal medical care insurance scheme July 1 was introduced Friday in the legislature by Health Minister Dr. J. Donovan Ross.

Dr. Ross, a steady opponent of Alberta participation in the federal plan, already has announced he will resign his cabinet post because of Alberta's entry.

The legislation, in two bills, provides for the establishment of a Crown corporation—the Alberta Health Care Insurance Commission—to administer the provincial scheme which will pay doctors' medical services, certain oral surgery and optometric services.

Robarts Proposes MPP Pay Tie in With Civil Service

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Ontario Premier John Robarts has proposed a salary increase, the first in six years, for members of the legislature.

The newspaper says he has already suggested to the two opposition leaders that members' salaries be linked to a senior civil service scale, so that salaries could be increased as needed, without creating a political issue.

It quotes him as saying:

Everyone else gets a raise every year. Why shouldn't members of the legislature?"

Today's Chuckle

A financier is one who can support both his family and the government.

Conservative whip Leonard Reilly is also quoted as saying that back-benchers would like the increase to be as much as $6,000, to put members on parity with the $18,000 paid to members of the federal Parliament and the Quebec legislature.

Premier Robarts' suggestion would make Ontario unique in Canada by linking the pay of legislators to a civil service scale. Members would receive regular increases related to the cost of living and to salaries in other professions.

MPPs from outside Metropolitan Toronto now receive $12,000 a year, and $4,000 of this is a non-accountable, tax-free allowance. Toronto members receive only $11,000, with a $3,000 allowance.

Members last received a pay increase after the 1963 provincial election, when the basic salary went from $5,000 to $8,000.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon is believed to have no objection to a pay increase, but he said in an interview that the indemnity should not have an automatic relationship with a civil service scale.

Emotional Appeal to Country

De Gaulle Promises to Step Down After Term Expires

PARIS (CP) — Charles de Gaulle, the 78-year-old titan who has survived many crucial scrapes, waits in proud seclusion at his country home this weekend for the referendum decision of a people sharply divided in their feelings towards him.

Some Frenchmen, primarily his traditional enemies on the far right and left, scornfully vow they will vote "No" Sunday to his appeal for national approval of programs to vest more power in regional authorities and reorganize the Senate.

His own party loudly proclaims its loyal support but some members are said to feel de Gaulle should not have staked everything on a confusing constitutional issue.

A former Gaullist premier and the man considered his chief's heir apparent, Georges Pompidou, protests against being "used" by the many politically moderate partisans of the "No" cause who are anxious to prove that a solid presidential successor, not chaos, would follow resignation by the general.

But Pompidou, while pledging support for de Gaulle's cause in the Sunday referendum, tended to speak all through the campaign in terms of "fidelity" to the old leader rather than talk of active espousal of the reform program.

Other Frenchmen share a dislike of the program but feel bound to vote "Yes" as a duty to de Gaulle, the man they see as having ejected small-minded and cowardly elements from control of their country 11 years ago.

Two major polls have indicated slim leads for the "No" cause as of this week.

But neither survey took account of the president's emotional television speech Friday night, which saw him declare that he would step down, win or lose, as chief executive at the end of his current term, in 1972.

The promise of a 1972 retirement could have been a concession to the hostile pressures built up against him by the referendum campaign.

But the general stuck to his guns in forecasting upheaval for France if he does what he reaffirmed he will do in the event of a Sunday defeat—resign immediately.

Water Rates Rise in Tweed

TWEED — Tweed Village Council requested permission from the Ontario Municipal Board to undertake a program of 100 per cent metering of the water users at a possible cost of approximately $30,000, to be financed over a three-year period. Present water rates are to be increased to cover the cost.

Several tenders were received for the erection of a Municipal Building for Fire Hall and Garage.

The tender of Clement Cassidy for $17,803.27 was accepted, subject to the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board, allowing the transaction to be financed by short term debentures.

By-laws introduced placing a stop sign on Moira St., where it connects with Bridge St. Also introduced was a by-law to borrow from the Bank of Montreal, Tweed, an amount up to $25,000 for current 1969 purposes.

Councillor Kenneth Thompson advised Council members that it was found necessary to change the location for the proposed new Curling Rink from the south of the present arena to a location east of the building.

It was carried that the Council lease the easterly part of the land to the Curling Club, from the northerly fence line to the southerly fence line, then from the easterly for the amount of one dollar as long as required by the Land O' Lakes Curling Club.

With music supplied by the combo, "The Mission," Rev. Brian Thrasher, tambourine in hand, initiates the "swinging service of praise" at Tabernacle United Church.

Hi-C Conference Swings

"Shake yourself out. Hidden in the folds of your mind are emotions that need freeing — so — c'mon — shake yourself out and praise God."

Those are the words that began Saturday's activities at the Quinte East Hi-C Conference being held at Tabernacle United Church in Belleville.

Those words were pronounced at the "swinging services of praise" by Rev. Brian Thrasher and his combo, "The Mission."

The combo began the service this morning at nine following Friday night's folk concert featuring "Three's Company" and Larry Lafleur.

Rev. Thrasher and his combo originate from North Kingston Parish and have played from the fringes of Montreal to London, Ontario and in Northern New York.

Rev. Thrasher described the swinging service of praise this morning as "an opportunity to praise God with your voice and body."

The service is for everyone and the combo offers different styles of music. The group members four, including Rev. Thrasher, and includes instruments like guitars and drums and a piano.

The need for such a group "evolved from the need of kids on the street who were not church-orientated."

"They could come in and go out freely during this type of service."

"The positive message of joy" began when the combo did in 1965 in Kingston. Rev. Thrasher had just moved there from Trenton.

The conference, beginning on Friday, will run all weekend including Sunday.

The young people in attendance are from such faraway points as Renfrew and Arnprior and include many Kingston teens.

The conference resulted in a billeting operation by Ralph Spencer, one of the co-ordinators of the project, of 275 young adults.

Music, discussion and guest speakers are the main format of the weekend. Speaking will be Hugh McKervill, Mike Mahoney and professor Tom Harpur and the topics will range from "Swinging in a Sad World" to "Drugs, Reality and Religion."

Other activities will include bowling, basketball and swimming. There will be a dance tonight described as "groov-a-delic."
